Communication by road, by air and by wire was hampered or completely disrupted. Traffic accidents were numerous. A stiff northwestern hurled icy waves high on the shores of Lake Michigan, inflicting farther damage to Chicago's lake front and stalling scores of automobiles along the new south shore drive. Two men died here of heart attacks ascribed to the bitter cold.

The coldest weather of the year had set in along the Canadian border, with the mercury nestling in the nether thirties below the zero mark in North Dakota. Dickinson, N. D., poked its nose outdoors long enough to read thermometers at 37 below, and all through the upper tier of states the temperature had fallen into the twenties and thirties below zero. Negative readings had reached as far south as Nebraska and were anticipated in Illinois as the storm moves east tomorrow.

In the wake of the snow clearing skies were forecast, some relief to the gloomy midwest where the sun has not shown his face for ten days. The cold wave was expected to continue for some days, promising a white Christmas.

A temperature of 46 degrees below zero at Moose Jaw, was Canada's coldest.

COMMUNICATION IN NEW YORK STATE DISRUPTED

ALBANY, N. Y. Dec. 18—(AP)—Large sections of eastern and northern New York tonight had reverted to conditions of pioneer days and were cut off from communication either by telephone or telegraph with other parts of the state.

Repair crews worked frantically to restore miles of wires which had snapped beneath the weight of ice formed by a sudden freeze after nearly 24 hours of rain. In the most cases lighting systems had been restored, but there were a few cases where residents had to depend on candles and oil lamps.

Scores of cities and villages could not be reached by telegraph while all telephone calls to northern points were put through "subject to an indefinite delay."

In Saratoga Springs, Ballston Spa and Schenectady, gangs of workmen were clearing the streets of debris which included fallen trees and thousands of branches.

Rain continued late today in eastern New York, but in the northern part of the state snow, with below zero temperatures prevailed.

HIGH WINDS REPORTED IN LOUISIANA AND MISSISSIPPI

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 18.—(AP)—A frigid hurricane sweeping down from the Rocky mountains left the deep south shivering tonight from sudden temperature drops with the southeast and northeast expected to get a fringe of the disturbance by a veering of the wind.

The high winds dipped down on several spots in Louisiana and Mississippi, blowing away several small buildings and bringing injury to some dozen persons. In the semi-tropical areas along the Gulf coast, livestock and vegetation suffered and inhabitants were caught unprepared for the abnormal weather.

Colder weather was experienced over the entire south and in some areas the thermometer had dropped as much as 40 degrees within 12 hours and still was graded downward. Snow, sleet and rain fell in many localities.

STORM IN NEW ENGLAND OF SNOW, SLEET AND RAIN

BOSTON, Dec. 18—(AP)—Snow, sleet and rain which froze where it fell by land and a pea soup fog by sea, disrupted communications in New England today and in some cases caused serious damage to fruit trees. Many automobile accidents were reported and thousands of cars stalled and skidded on icy streets.

At Rochester, N. H., sleet and rain formed a casing one inch thick around the two wires of the Twin State Gas and Electric company which served that place and surrounding towns. The wires broke, cutting off all electric light for more than an hour. Later, in the evening workmen succeeded in clearing one line. Heavy damage to orchards was reported as limbs crashed from their ice burden. Telephone and telegraph service was curtailed and autos were abandoned on hills which they failed to climb. The sleet followed a four inch snowstorm and was in turn succeeded by freezing rain.

In Boston the fog was reported as the worst of the season but steamers, although delayed were able to make port. In Providence harbor, in Narragansett bay, however, all shipping came to a standstill. Steamers of the Colonial, New England and Bay State lines all were fog-bound, those leaving this port being forced to anchor before reaching New York, while not one vessel scheduled to arrive here was able to dock.

SOUTHWEST EXPERIENCING SEVERE WINTER WEATHER

KANSAS CITY, Dec. 18.—(AP)—Icy blasts from the northland tobogganed down to the Gulf coast of Texas tonight, bringing the severest weather of the winter to the southwest.

Snow and freezing temperatures were reported in the Rocky mountain region but states to the eastward received the brunt of the cold wave which was whirled south through the wheat belt of the middle west and across the cotton fields of Oklahoma and Texas.

Freezing weather was in prospect along the Gulf coast tonight with below zero temperatures extending down into Oklahoma.

Snow fell today in eastern Kansas, Missouri and parts of Oklahoma. The biting wind and heavy snow caused blizzard conditions in some sections and gave hopes of a white Christmas.

The cold wave dispelled fog conditions of the past week and permitted partial resumption of air mail service although high wind, sleet and snow was hampering the air transport companies.

Aided by a strong tail wind, an air mail plane on the Omaha-St. Louis route covered the 115 miles from Omaha to St. Joseph, Mo., today in 45 minutes. The wind was so strong that it was impossible to fly the return route.

Several persons were injured by falls on slippery pavements in Kansas City. The mercury registered five degrees above zero here early tonight and was steadily falling.

PAROLE VIOLATOR WAS SHOT BY DETECTIVE

NEW HAVEN, Dec. 18—(AP)—The condition of Herbert Messner, 23, former inmate of the Cheshire reformatory, was still considered as serious tonight by attendants at a hospital where he was taken last night after being shot twice by police.

He was placed under arrest. Arraignment will depend upon his recovery.

Messner was shot trying to escape two detectives who wanted him in connection with violation of his parole from the reformatory. The youth grappled with one of them, and they fell over a banister and down several flights of stairs. The detective, Joseph Sullivan, landed on the bottom, dislocating an ankle. As the youth fled, he fired.

Several hours later Messner collapsed on the porch of a relative's house, and was rushed to the hospital.

His sister, Mrs. Emma Calfano, made a statement to a New Haven newspaper today that the youth was severely beaten with a blackjack, but hospital officials said there were no signs of such punishment.

GOVERNESS AWARDED $20,000 DAMAGES BY JURY

BRIDGEPORT, Dec. 18—(AP)—Sally B. Pentland, Darien governess, was awarded damages of $6,000 by a jury in superior court today, in her $20,000 damage action against Edward H. Singer, also of Darien. The verdict was returned after deliberation of less than an hour.

Miss Pentland, who is employed by Edward Delafield, wealthy Tokeneke resident, sued to recover for injuries sustained in an automobile accident on the Post road in Westport on August 8, 1928.

At that time a car in which she was riding was struck by another owned and operated by the defendant. Medical testimony was offered to show that the girl had sustained a severe shock to her nervous system and that as a result of a fractured skull sustained in the crash, her vision had become impaired.

BRITISH LABOR GOV'T FACING SEVERE TEST

LONDON, Dec. 18—(AP)—The labor government tonight appeared to be facing the most severe test of its life. The liberal party today, with only two dissenting votes, decided that government replies to questions in connection with the coal mines' bill were unsatisfactory and it was announced that liberals would vote against the bill in the division tomorrow night unless full assurance was received before the dinner adjournment.

The division bill be on a conservative amendment. Should the full conservative strength of 250 members be present and the liberals join them, as indicated tonight, the labor government would be defeated. However, the government still has time to meet the liberal demands in some measure.

CHICAGO, Dec. 18.—(AP)—Detectives patiently guarded an exclusive Lake Shore apartment today, awaiting the arrival of Elmer S. Huckins, head of a Hancock, Wis., investment house reputed to offer fabulous returns, for whom warrants charging fraud were obtained yesterday in Sedar Rapids, Iowa. Huckins left Iowa a jump ahead of the police, arrived in Hancock, Wis., last night, and was reported headed for Chicago to confer with associates today.

JURY AWARDS SUGALSKI DAMAGES OF $2,500

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Dec. 18—Damages of $2,500 were awarded by a jury in the case of Edwin Sugalski, P. P. A. versus George Gendron, which was concluded in the Windham county superior court here today. The jury retired for deliberations at 4:07, returning at 5:15, a period of one hour and eight minutes. The verdict, which of necessity was reached after finding that Louis Goulet of Danielson, driver of the car owned by the defendant, had not exercised proper care in the operation of the vehicle, was given through Foreman Fitts H. Payne of Pomfret. Attorney J. W. Carpenter and H. D. Schofield of Hartford, who have represented the defendant, gave notice that they would file a motion to set aside the verdict. A date for a hearing on this motion will be fixed later by Judge Edward M. Yeomans. The plaintiff has asked for damages of $5,000 for injuries alleged to be of permanent nature.

The case had to do with injuries sustained by the plaintiff, the five year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Adam Sugalski of the Quebec district of the town of Brooklyn. A truck owned by Gendron, engaged in the public washing business, and driven by Goulet struck the child while being backed up near the Sugalski home on April 22.

During the opening of the case Tuesday the parents testified that the child suffered spells when his body became entirely rigid and his eyes rolled about in uncontrollable manner. Dr. Louis I. Mason of this city testified that he found the injuries to be permanent in their effect and the spells were characterized as insipient epilepsy. Dr. Mason was recalled to the stand this morning.

Dr. Nathaniel Hibbard of Danielson then testified for the plaintiff. He was followed by Dr. Joseph Perreault of Danielson, who was recalled by the defense. Dr. Perreault testified that he had not noticed any discharge from the ear of the boy nor any other evidence that the child had sustained a fracture of the skull. He also denied any knowledge of any limp on the part of the boy. During this testimony the child was walked back and forth before the jury, whereupon Dr. Perreault said that he could not detect any trace of a limp in the left leg.

Dr. S. B. Overlock of Pomfret, a defense witness, testified that he had examined the child on April 26. He had no knowledge of evidence of a fracture of the skull, nor of the limp or the so-called spells.

Dr. Douglass J. Roberts of Hartford, an X-ray specialist, produced seven photographic plates of the skull which he said showed no evidence of a fracture. It was brought out, however, that the X-ray photographs were taken some months after the accident.

Louis Goulet of Danielson, driver of the truck testified that on April 22, he made a delivery of a washing to the home of Arthur Cote, a neighbor of the Sugalski's.

He returned to the truck, closed the back doors and observing no children in the vicinity climbed into the driver's seat. He then backed the vehicle a distance of about 50 or 60 feet with the intention of securing a washing two doors away. He first saw the boy lying to the right of the right front wheel and in short time took the child to the office of Dr. Perreault. It will be recalled that Cote had testified that the boy was between the truck wheel marks and lying unconscious on the ground when picked up by the father.

Immediately following the luncheon recess arguments were delivered by Attorneys Harry E. Back of Danielson and William A. King of this city, for the plaintiff and Attorneys Carpenter and Schofield of Hartford for the defense. Judge Yeomans then rendered his charge to the jury.

Court adjourned tonight until 10 o'clock Thursday morning when the case of Jennie Lilly Farnum, Admr., versus Edward A. Winter of this city, will go to trial before a jury. The plaintiff who was formerly of this city and is now a resident of Worcester, Mass., seeks an adjustment of property of the late George Wheeler who maintained rooms for some years at the Hotel Hooker, owned by the defendant. Two more jury cases are scheduled to follow. They are: Matthew F. Lynch, Admr., vs. Earl J. LeClaire and Rose Yvonne Ewart vs. Earl J. LeClaire.

LOCAL MERCHANTS TRYING TO PLEASE XMAS BUYERS

WILLIMANTIC, Dec. 18—The finest assortments of Christmas merchandise yet brought to the buying public of this territory is being offered this season by the Willimantic merchants. The merchandise is the last word in beauty and quality and is being sold at prices that will compare most favorably with those in metropolitan centers. The merchants are keenly alive to the latest fashions and styles and they have co-operated in doing their utmost to present for public approval the same Christmas merchandise procurable in larger cities. While the volume is not as great as in the big stores, it is pointed out that the assortments are more than sufficient for the needs of the population of this section. It is hoped in this manner to save the inconvenience of traveling elsewhere to purchase Christmas needs and gifts.

As usual the Willimantic decorations rank high among the leaders of the state. An especially attractive decorative scheme of evergreen trees and red lights has been carried out. Over 200 trees have been placed in uniform rows and each lighted with over 50 lights. The city has placed a large Christmas tree, brilliantly lighted at Lincoln square and other large trees have been placed at the four main entrances to the city. The reputation of the Willimantic merchants for decorations has gone beyond the confines of the state of Connecticut as proven by letters on file at the chamber of commerce offices. The merchants cordially invite the public to inspect their goods first, because they are dependable goods sold by dependable merchants at most reasonable prices.

As added assistance to Christmas shopping all stores affiliated with the Retail Merchants' bureau will be open until 9 o'clock the evenings of Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week and Monday and Tuesday of next week.

NORMAL SCHOOL STUDENTS PRESENT CHRISTMAS PLAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Dec. 18—The students of the Willimantic State Normal school and a number of guests turned out in appreciative numbers tonight for the presentation of Why The Chimes Rang, a delightful one-act play by Elizabeth A. McFadden. The play was staged at the Model school auditorium as a special holiday event. The characters portrayed their various parts in finished style, the entire play giving evidence of excellent coaching. Why the Chimes Rang was directed by the Misses Edith Paschall and Lucy Reddish of the faculty and the musical arrangement, featuring the Chimes was by Ralph H. Gibson and Leo J. Dion. The scene is laid in the interior of a peasant's hut on the edge of a forest near the Cathedral and the time is the dusk of a day of long ago.

The characters in order of appearance were: Holger, peasant boy, Catherine Fontaine of Norwich; Steen, his younger brother, Bertha Duch, Norwich; Bertil, their uncle, Beatrice Beckett, Plainfield; old woman, Mina Broxy, Stonington; priest, Cecelia Sullivan, New London; rich man, Irene Generous, Plainfield; courtier, Elizabeth Ruddy, New London; beautiful woman Gertrude Blain, Baltic; old man, Alice Perry, Putnam; young girl, Dorothy Donnelly, Willimantic; the king, Margaret Connelly, Norwich; the angel, Lillian Sandell, Groton.

Much of the credit for the success of the play was given to Miss Celeste M. Allen of New London, general manager. The committee and artists were: Ruth Haynes, New London, Edith Conner, Waterbury, Mary Geagan, Norwich and Evelyn Brosofski, Norwich, Miriam Wilcox and Olive Smith of South Manchester, played the piano and violin respectively. Quartet numbers were by Elizabeth Sheehan, Waterbury, Leonora Chapman, Norwich, Dorothy Wood, South Manchester and Eleanor Schaeffer, New London.

Judge Edward M. Yeomans, presiding at the Windham county superior court session here today announced that judgment had been given in favor of the defendants in the case of Samuel Spector versus Blanchette & Blanchette, a suit over a $35 automobile motor, heard last week. Attorney Arthur T. Kelley represented the defendant and Attorney S. B. Harvey the plaintiff.

Farmers heartily welcomed the rains of the past two days as a temporary relief to the water shortage that has worked a wide hardship in the rural districts. For many months many farmers have bene forced to haul water from brooks and ponds for domestic use and their live stock. The recent rains have caused several wells to yield water for the first time since summer. Water rose several inches in the Mt. Hope and Fenton rivers in Ashford and Eastford, this rise having a corresponding effect at the city supply reservoir which is fed by these tributaries.

The semi-monthly meeting of the Lions club was held with a dinner at the Nathan Hale hotel tonight with a special program in charge of George H. Millerd, Jr., chairman of the entertainment committee. President John H. Wilcox presided. The date of the meeting had been changed from December 23, owing to the proximity of that date with Christmas.

A minstrel show will be staged by the choir of the South Coventry Congregational church in the basement of the church Friday evening with a cast of ten members. The end men are: Robert G. Brooks, H. Jacobson, Earl Rose and Leslie Brooks. William Smith, of this city, director of the choir, is to have charge of the minstrel.

Dr. J. Arthur Girouard, who with Mrs. Girouard, has just returned from a three months' stay in Europe stated today that they had enjoyed a most educational and eventful journey. While Dr. Girouard attended the clinical courses in Strasbourg, Vienna and Paris, Mrs. Girouard visited Switzerland, Italy and southern France. While in Rome she and a group of other American tourists were privileged an audience with Pope Pius. In Holland, Dr. Girouard visited hospitals at The Hague, Utrecht and Tilburx, conducted by the Sisters of Charity, the order conducting Joseph's hospital here. He found these hospitals veritable palaces in size and luxurious furnishings. They returned on the S. S. France and experienced the terrific gales that swept the Atlantic ocean some ten days ago. During the height of the storm they encountered disabled ships and witnessed a rescue at sea. The S. S. France crossed in safety, however.

Students of the Willimantic State Trade school who are to take part in the Christmas party to be given at the school next Tuesday, rehearsed their parts this afternoon. The program will include vocal and instrumental music.

DANIELSON

MONSTER CHRISTMAS PARTY PLANNED BY P.-A. CO.

(Special to the Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Dec. 18—Danielson seems in line to lay claim to the prospect of having the largest Christmas party that eastern Connecticut will witness this year. It has been arranged by Powdrell and Alexander, operating six mills in this town, for the upwards of 1600 employes in its plants. As a matter of fact, there are to be two parties, one at the No. 3 mill, on Connecticut Mills avenue, the other at the No. 2 plant, on South Main street. The attendance will be from 1800 to 2000 people, as some guests, including members of families in the No. 1 and No. 2 plants, have been invited. The date is next Tuesday, the day before Christmas.

The No. 3 plant, the curtain factory, will cease operations at 11 a. m., and the 720 workers at the plant will assemble in one of the departments that will have been arranged for the occasion to partake of a collation.

Following this all will adjourn to the general offices in the building. This will have been cleared of desks and decorated prettily. Santa Claus will greet everyone entering and present them with paper hats and other favors. An orchestra will be on hand to play for dancing, and during the afternoon there will be several feature numbers presented by professional entertainers. The plan of the company is to make the entire affair as delightful and as filled with the spirit of Christmas as possible.

At the No. 2 plant the party will begin at 2 p. m. This hour has been selected in order that both the day and night workers and members of their families will find it convenient to attend. Each male worker is to receive as a gift a box of cigars and each female worker a box of candy. Supt. Dolard Grenon said this afternoon. It is expected that upwards of 1,000 will assemble for the affair. An orchestra will play for dancing in what formerly was the shipping department on the first floor of the weave shed and refreshments of sandwiches, soda and ice cream will be served.

Employes of the company's plants at Attawaugan, Ballouville and Pineville also will be remembered. From the executives of the organization down through the rank and file everyone is anticipating the Christmas party with pleasure.

Lieut. Ira A. Warren, who as a member of Leo J. L'Homme post, American Legion, is especially interested in aiding those concerned with arranging adjusted compensation claims, called attention today to the fact that the time limit for filing such claims is January 2. Though more than eleven years have elapsed since the signing of the armistice there are some entitled to claim adjusted compensation who have never done so. Lieut. Warren will gladly aid anyone concerned with this matter.

Chairman Walter Anderson of a general committee that he is to select to represent the Danielson Building and Loan association and allied interests in boosting the plan for providing adequate housing facilities for Danielson said this afternoon that an immediate start is to be made to organize the movement. Last night a meeting of stockholders, or shareholders, in the Building and Loan association voted to approve the plan to issue a new series of shares as of January 1, instead as of April 1, 1930, when ordinarily the time for issuing a new series would be at hand. The number of shares in this new series—likely to become known as "The Million Dollar" series—are not to exceed 5,000. Heretofore all shares of the Building and Loan association have borne interest at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum. At the January meeting of the association it is likely that a proposal will be made to the shareholders under which the usual entrance fee of 25 cents per share would be eliminated and to have the new shares bear interest at the rate of 5 1-2 per cent. per annum, an advance of one-half of one per cent over the rate being paid on all outstanding shares. However, this is something that the shareholders must decide for themselves. If the decision is favorable, the new series of shares will represent a particularly safe and attractive investment.

This afternoon at A. F. Wood's funeral home on Mechanic street funeral services for Mrs. Adelaide I. Coll of Elmville were conducted by Rev. Harding W. Gaylord, pastor of the Westfield Congregational church. Burial was in Westfield cemetery. The bearers were four nephews, John W. Gallup, Frank Gallup and Daniel Gallup, all of Danielson, and Dudley Williams, of Moosup.

Two dogs, one of them a police dog, the other apparently part shepherd, this morning raided the rabbit yard of James Moran on East Franklin street and killed a number of the bunnies. This is the second disastrous raid on rabbits being raised commercially in that section within the past few weeks. After the killing at the Moran place this morning several rabbits were lying dead in the wired in yard and all the other rabbits had disappeared. There were 55 of the little animals there when the dogs got in, by tearing up the wire netting at a point close to the ground and crawling under. The police dog is said to have cleared the six foot high netting with a single bound upon the appearance of Mr. Moran, but the part shepherd was not so agile as to making a get-away and was captured. This dog had a collar, but no license tag. Mr. Moran's loss is quite considerable and it is understood, he will seek to recover as soon as the identity of the owners of the dogs is established. The matter was reported to the state police and later to the dog warden, Sheriff Charles E. Ayer of Dayville.

State Officer Royal Scranton of the Putnam barracks was at South Woodstock today checking up on a theft last night at the general store and post office of Martin Nelson. Merchandise to the value of about $70 was stolen, the things taken including sweaters, shirts and raincoats. A key that fitted a gasoline pump outside the store was taken from the cash register, the pump unlocked and some gasoline taken for the car in which the crooks were travelling about.

Such members of the Danielson group of employes of the Southern New England Telephone company as are not required to remain on duty will go to Putnam Thursday evening to join with employes in the Putnam exchange at a Christmas party such as they arrange each year.

A fine Christmas tree is at Davis park and will be erected and decorated and lighted for the annual Christmas party for the children of the community. As in other recent years, the sponsors are the members of the American legion and its auxiliary.

While the two days of rain have not contributed to boosting Christmas trading in Danielson, the rain is being welcomed as a badly needed commodity. There was a water shortage when the cold wave set it on Nov. 30, to be followed by the severe weather that congealed much of the short supply. That situation is now largely relieved.

Notices having been sent to 450 people who did not pay their personal taxes on time, there is now a daily response of numbers of persons who are paying $3.00, instead of the $2.00 it would have cost them prior to last Sunday, to square this account. Personal Tax Collector Arthur A. Dean said today that about 400 personal taxes remain unpaid. The notices sent out give five days in which to pay. Upon the expiration of this time limit constables will be sent to get the delinquents' money, and the cost for this operation will run into money.

Lively work following a quick run by the firemen extinguished the blaze in short order with the chemical line. The blaze lighted the sky over the lower section of the borough giving the appearance of a bad fire when the alarm was sounded. How the leak ignited was not determined.

As the result of an inch of rain-fall, so far this week, the last traces of what appeared to be the makings of a white Christmas, has entirely disappeared. The main channel in the upper Ashland reservoir is cut through, with indications that it would be well to keep off any part of the pond that is still covered with rotten ice. Several of the trout brooks that cross the highway in the Hopeville and Stone Hill section were running bank-full, Wednesday evening.

PUTNAM

POLICE BELIEVE RECTORY ROBBERY IS SOLVED

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Dec. 18.—Charles H. Simonds, 21, 44 Proctor street, Framingham, Mass., is under arrest in Concord, Mass., after two years spent in the perfection of a system for robbing poor-boxes in Roman Catholic churches hereabouts and throughout Massachusetts and Rhode Island. Simonds, local police are confident, is directly responsible for the robbing of St. Mary's church rectory in this city on the night of Nov. 10 and for breaking and entering and robbing a home at North Grosvenordale.

Captain of Police William J. Jarvis received word of the arrest of the poor-box bandit yesterday through news stories. Police, after searching and grilling Simonds, found that he obtained thousands of dollars worth of loot from churches with the aid of his system.

Simonds during his confession turned a little black note book over to Concord police, in which a mention was made of every town and city he had visited during the past two years and recording the value of loot procured on each "job."

Simonds has acknowledged that he came to Putnam and was successful in netting a good haul at the rectory. Captain Jarvis, who has been working on the case for the past month, detailed Sergt. George Liard to accompany an officer, detailed by Lieut. Ross V. Urquhart of the state police barracks at Danielson, to go to Concord to interview police officials there in an effort to recover a few of the articles stolen from St. Mary's church on the occasion of Simond's visit here Armistice eve.

In every case, Simonds was clever in covering up his tracks, taking care that no tell-tale marks were left at the scenes of his crimes. So clever and exact was he in this undertaking that police were always left completely mystified. Such was the case in this city. Sergeant Liard said this morning that he would make an effort to learn the method employed by Simonds in executing the Putnam church robbery.

The arrest of Simonds solves the break at the church and will undoubtedly result in the recovery of several valuable pieces of jewelry taken from Rev. Joseph D. Casey, curate at St. Mary's church, among which was a gold watch presented to the priest at his ordination. With Simonds were two women, Mrs. Elida Merriam and her daughter, Miss Ingrid Merriam, 20, for whom the man professed his love. During a severe grilling in which police endeavored to link the two women with the case as accomplices, Simonds steadfastly refused to incriminate them, saying that they knew nothing of his criminal habits, although they accompanied him day after day.

Local police established the fact that Simonds would not be brought back to Connecticut for trial. He is wanted in numerous Massachusetts, Rhode Island and other Connecticut cities on charges of larceny.

The activities of another group of thieves in this city were uncovered Tuesday evening with the discovery of a theft of several gallons of gasoline from the garage of Julian Tatoon on Bridge street. Sergt. George Liard of the local police, who is investigating, said this morning that the burglars left a wealth of evidence and clues that will shortly lead to their arrest. The sergeant expresses the belief that the arrest of the gasoline burglars might speed up the investigation of minor breaks which occurred a short time ago.

A shortage of Christmas trees this year has boosted the prices slightly in advance of the retail values of a year previous. The local supply of Christmas trees has not been curtailed in any way although the price of the decoration is advanced because of the shortage of trees in the larger cities surrounding Putnam. The evergreen business began to boom today as the residential section began to assume its Yuletide appearance. The outdoor, electrically-illuminated Christmas tree is steadily gaining favor in Putnam. On spacious lawns many property owners have set their trees out and placed the many-colored lamps over their branches, lending a delightful atmosphere to the home. In the rural districts farmers have been forced to maintain a constant vigil over their woodland acres in order to protect their spruce, fir and hemlock trees from the ravages of Christmas-tree hunters.

Lawrence Anderson, a member of the class of 1931 at Putnam high school, a two-letter man and popular member of the student body, has been elected to captain the 1930 edition of Coach L. F. Noyes' football team. Anderson was unanimous choice of his team-mates for the important position, although Reynolds Deberedinis, quarterback for the past two seasons, benched for the greater part of the recently-closed season, was mentioned as seeking the post, but he withdrew in favor of Anderson whom he considered "the man for the job." Anderson played stellar roles in the line and because of his exceptional ability as an all-around athlete it is believed that he will occupy a berth in the backfield next season. Anderson played guard on the undefeated championship eleven in 1928 and was a substitute the previous year. Coach L. F. Noyes said today that he was pleased with the choice of the team for a pilot.

With two cases on the docket, a session of city court was called this morning. Both cases were on charges of drunkenness. The first offender drew a ten-day jail sentence, while the other was found guilty on three counts and was given a ten-day jail sentence on each count, together with costs of court of $11.14.

Francis Curran, teacher of Latin and history at the Putnam high school, is confined to home on account of illness.

The Comrades' basketball team of this town was decisively defeated by the Greendale club of Worcester, Mass. The Comrades managed to hold their own in the first few minutes, but as the game progressed they began to show lack of practice. The final score was 59-25. The Comrades' first game ended in a victory over Tourtellotte high school.

The morning exercises at Tourtellotte high school were led by Miss Betty Maitland. Phyllis Colby sang "One Fleeting Hour." She was accompanied at the piano by Milton Vinton. Virginia Hopkinson recited a poem.

A 1930 Buick automobile bearing New York registration ran into the fence near the Bowling alley corner Wednesday morning, doing considerable damage to the car, and tearing down about thirty feet of fence. CROSSING WARNINGS

It is the belief of the National Automobile chamber of commerce that 10 per cent could be cut from the traffic toll by the elimination of the grade crossing fatalities, and it advocates doing away with those crossings that have the heaviest traffic, the placing of warning signs 500 feet from the railroad tracks and taking down all those signs at obsolete crossings. It neglects to insist upon a greater degree of care by auto drivers and the respect for warnings when they are established, but possibly it considers that occurs automatically, reports to the contrary notwithstanding.

The idea of removing those signs which create the impression that there is a railroad crossing ahead only to have it learned that they refer to crossings that were once there, to trolley crossings where there are no more trolleys or to crossings where there may be no more than a half dozen instances a week when freight cars are shunted across a highway is no doubt one that would, if acted upon, reduce the numbers of cases where the motor traffic has come to understand that there is nothing to fear from trains.

The idea is to have only those signs and signals in evidence that actually mean something, so that there can be no claim that care was not shown at really dangerous points because drivers had become hardened to the crossing signs and been fooled by them so often that they soon respected none of them.

Furthermore, there is much to be said in behalf of a recommendation that light signals be placed at crossings so that there will be actual notice served upon motorists that trains are approaching. This may not be sufficient to overcome the chance-taking that too many are willing to indulge in but it is a means of giving a positive warning which any conscientious driver should be only too anxious to respect.

It is perfectly evident that while crossing elimination may proceed it will not accomplish the removal of all of them. Care on the part of drivers will do as much as elimination but for the giving of fair warnings the placing of signals on all crossings, especially the obscure ones, is desirable.

THE CALLES CASE

In the effort which has recently been made by a district attorney at Laredo, Texas, to bring about the arrest of former President Calles of Mexico on a murder charge as he was returning through that city to Mexico, en route home from Europe and Washington, what might easily have stirred up no end of trouble and feeling was properly squelched by the department of state in providing immunity against arrest for the visitor and so informing the district attorney.

As for the merits of the charge made against the former Mexican president, little is known, but it could have resulted in the unpleasantest kind of developments. This was recognized when it was arranged to have the train carrying Calles pass through Laredo and across the border without stopping. It was deemed wise not even to pay any attention to the welcome and celebration that Laredo citizens had planned for the visitor. The soundness of that judgment can be appreciated when it is realized that nothing better could have been desired by the opponents of Calles than a demonstration in his behalf to arouse them to action and trouble.

It is apparent that sentiment in Laredo was divided relative to the proposed action of the district attorney, but an inkling of the additional developments that might have been expected is furnished by the action of the Mexican government in recalling its consul from Laredo, closing the office there and causing much inconvenience to those entering Mexico from that point, or those shipping goods through that city. This was, of course, an expression of the resentment against the district attorney's attitude. Whether it was justified or not, it was a natural reaction and now Laredo is doing its best in an endeavor to regain what it has lost.

There are reasons to expect that through government influence and an understanding of the fact that the district attorney neither represents Laredo, the state nor the country in his intention, a return of the consul will be effected, but how far retaliations might go or have gone had Calles been arrested can be easily recognized.

MINE HORRORS

Probably the worst mine explosion of the year is that which occurred this week at North McAlester, Okla., where 62 lives were lost. After the bodies are removed it can be expected that there will be a thorough investigation of the affair for the purpose of determining just what the conditions were surrounding the disaster, where the responsibility lies and what was lacking for the prevention of just such affairs.

Through the work that has been carried on for many years by the government and having the cooperation of the mining companies to a greater or less extent, it has been possible not only to conduct highly valuable rescue work at such a time but to demonstrate that measures can and should be taken to forestall mine horrors. There are responsibilities resting upon both the mining companies and the miners. Upon how thoroughly they cooperate in such efforts depends the success of the measures.

Probably there are more mine explosions than the general public know about because they have been so restricted by the protective measures that they do not cripple the entire mine, do not cause deaths and do not occur in mines where firedamp is allowed to accumulate and extend the destruction.

What the situation at the Oklahoma mine will disclose will be revealed in the investigation. Whether anyone remains alive who actually knows anything about it is a question. It may be somewhat difficult to determine whether there has been carelessness on the part of miners in the ordinary daily practice of mining but it will not be difficult to find out what steps were taken in the way of regulations and such methods of prevention as rock dusting.

Every disaster of this kind directs attention to the fact that, while others have preceded it and it is probable that more will follow it, there are many things that can be done in the way of prevention, and they place new emphasis upon the importance of having all parties to such business do their part at all times in eliminating the hazards. The dangers of mining are fully known. They need to be kept constantly in mind if the needless mine horrors are going to be eliminated.

CONNECTICUT IN 1930

It was to the governors of the states that President Hoover appealed in an effort to ascertain conditions in the various parts of the country and to awaken an interest in furnishing cooperation with his endeavor to relieve unemployment.

At the time Governor Trumbull stated that Connecticut would do its part and at the quarterly meeting of the New England council at Bridgeport it was certainly a most encouraging report that he made concerning the prospects in this state for the coming year. The survey which he made of the conditions throughout the state made it possible for him to declare that conditions are sound and the prospects for a normally prosperous new year are good.

This was strengthened by reports given by industrial, railroad and utility leaders at the Bridgeport meeting, showing that large expenditures are planned for the coming year and in the cities of the state the outlook is generally good.

Where large outlays are contemplated and new construction is planned it means not only that those employed on such work will be kept busy but that the army of those employed in furnishing the necessary material will be assured of active employment. And it is the active employment of the many that means more business and prosperous conditions.

With many millions of expenditures planned by corporations, the state and cities, the effect should be far reaching and the predictions that have been made concerning a revival of business in various lines seem to be fully justified. Steps have been taken in time to overcome much of the uncertainty which has no real foundation.

AVIATION'S NEED

Time and again it has been demonstrated that some succeed where others fail. This is as true in other lines of endeavor quite the same as in aviation, but in spite of the developments which are pushing aviation ahead every year to new attainments, there are those who fail of their goal and those who sacrifice their lives.

Larre-Borges and Chaile, the fliers who hoped to reach Montevideo from Spain, effected a crossing of the Atlantic in repetition of what others have done but they suffered from an inadequate supply of gas and in the forced landing were injured after they had covered the most hazardous part of their journey.

They, however, escaped with their lives. Not so the British fliers who set out for South Africa from England. They managed to get into northern Africa but there, for some reason as yet unknown and possibly it will never be definitely known, they crashed. Thus these two long distance flights attempted practically at the same time over different routes must be recorded as failures with the British fliers eliminated from any further participation in their long distance, straight-away flight and all others.

While greater safety in flying is necessary it is impossible to overlook the importance of so improving the mechanism of the flying machine that it can be brought to earth under adverse conditions without the danger of crashing or killing its occupants. Some inventors believe they have the secret and are endeavoring to perfect it.

Alighting is always one of the ticklish points in flying and it will be a happy day when the man who flies will be reasonably sure of coming down wherever he wants to or has to, and alive. It is one of aviation's great needs.

COMPLETING THE CIRCUIT

Sally had ever been a progressive young person. Her baptismal name had been Sarah—but there are some Sarahs who inexorably become Sallys, just as a hard bud becomes a blossom.

Sally's first love affair happened when she was 8 and the red-headed boy who lived just across the hedge was 10 and brought her Golden Grimes apples filched from his father's pet tree in the orchard back of his home. Sally took both the apples and his devotion calmly as her due, although she did enjoy their summer of games and quarrels and companionship.

But she ruthlessly sacked Billy when the next winter's dancing school provided a tall, dark-eyed, contemptuous new boy who slew girls' affections right and left as though they had been dragons. That affair lasted into high school and by that time there were several aspiring candidates for the dark boy's favored place. Even then Sally displayed a remarkably mature and unsentimental judgment. The dark boy was gayly abandoned for the young sheik who owned a flivver, had the most numerous suits of clothes and neckwear and the most elastic charge account at the soda fountain.

With all her cold-blooded shrewdness which came so naturally to her that she was quite unconscious of exercising it, Sally presented to the world an appealingness which instantly made observers wish to do something for her. And they generally did. The florists, confectioners and ticket-sellers sent their wives to Europe on the benefits reaped from Sally's admirers. Love for love's sake and dimity-curtained cottage windows were items which failed to interest Sally in the least. She automatically gravitated into the sunshine of long, low racing cars, orchids and the best tables at the dancing clubs.

She looked expensive and according to her fond father's checkbook she was.

"I can't ask you to marry me," desperate young men would murmur. "With my wretched salary——" and Sally agreed with them decisively, gracefully, to their secret shock. Such remarks from a young man in love are merely conversational gestures. The girls in her crowd frequently talked over matrimony with the cool frankness which is today's fashion. They agreed that any girl was a fool who did not make her head govern her heart and provide herself with a husband liberally endowed financially.

"Who could keep on adoring a husband if she had to polish a kitchen sink twice a day—or do whatever has to be done to sinks?" Sally wanted to know indignantly, and went forth to purchase a pair of $20 pumps containing some six square inches of snakeskin. The young man basking in the sunshine of her smile at the moment was the only son of a rich father.

Already Sally was meditating on the joys of a Mediterranean wedding trip, the family casa down at Palm Beach, where, of course, she would be asked every winter, and the likelihood of having her jewelry reset every other season if she wished to do so.

To keep the only son of his father properly anxious, Sally went west to a small town to visit a school friend and it was there that William Kelly intruded himself into the picture. He was large and overpowering and had a way with him and he happened to be the man that Sally, for the first and only time in her life, fell in love with and so she protested not at all when he assured her that she was about to marry him.

"And," she wrote home to her astounded family, "we are going to live in the darlingest five-room cottage, with ruffled curtains, and you ought to see what I'm going to do with the kitchen! Bill earns about 6 cents a week as yet, being a doctor in this town, but I guess we can make it do."

"It's going to be just as heavenly as it was when you handed me Golden Grimes over the hedge, Bill," Sally confided to the happy young man, whose hair was now a rich mahogany.

Which proves that there is no use at all in ever paying the slightest attention to what girls say they are or are not going to do. Because whichever it is, they usually don't.—Chicago News.

YOUR HEALTH

Is There a Good Doctor in Your School?

By Sven Lokrants, M. D. medical director, Los Angeles city schools
Los Angeles.
(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

In the United States today there is a growing consciousness of community responsibility for the health of childhood. Yet practice is trailing far behind existing knowledge. We spent hundreds of dollars each year for the education of each child, yet we are spending only a little more than one dollar for each child's health supervision. This fact is very distressing because the health of the child is far more important than its education. The old Greeks and Romans in the days of their glory spent half their money on the education of their youths and half on their health supervision.

As this health consciousness becomes a part of the American people, more attention will be directed toward the education and training of school health workers who are very important because they supervise the health of our children.

School health workers may be divided into five large groups: 1—School physicians; 2—School nurses; 3—Teachers of corrective physical education, physical education and nutrition; 4—School dentists; and 5—Technicians. In this paper I shall only refer to the physicians.

His work is as much a specialty as is any branch of medicine. Ideally the school doctor should be thoroughly familiar with the specialty of pediatrics and orthopedics, but he should also have a solid foundation of general practice that will enable him to pass judgment upon such varied problems as contagious diseases and their control; skin diseases and their eradication; proper school sanitation, including the problems of ventilation, lighting, water supply, drinking fountains, toilet facilities, sewerage, bathing facilities, cooking and dining facilities, wardrobe accommodations, garbage and waste disposal, seating and animal pests. Furthermore, the school doctor must have a fundamental knowledge of eye, ear, nose and throat conditions, conditions of the teeth, malnutrition, nervous disorders, orthopedic defects and postural defects. He should be acquainted with the diagnosis of heart diseases and lung conditions among children. He should have an intimate knowledge of teachers' needs pertaining to health supervision. He should understand the numerous health problems for the school athletes.

In other words, we trust our children to schools where every one of the above problems do or may affect them. We are not health experts; neither are the teachers. Yet our children's health is of first importance to us, and every health safeguard that can be put about the school is an essential part of a good school.

When parents realize these facts, demand fully trained school physicians and pay them adequately, and watch the health scale rise year after year, then, and only then, can they claim to be good citizens, good parents.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Hooty's Hopes Are Realized

Some folks there are who do not see Persistence may a virtue be.
—Hooty the Owl

Hooty the Owl was growing impatient. Yes, sir, he was growing impatient. He had followed Reddy Fox and Mrs. Reddy a long distance and now they seemed to be simply wasting time. They had stopped Hooty had thought at first that they must have reached the farm where the turkeys were. But he had circled around and found no farm Those two Foxes had stopped in a piece of woods and were actually lying down. Hooty didn't know what to make of it. But having followed them this far, there was nothing for Hooty to do but to wait to see where they would go next. So he perched in the top of a tree and kept his eyes fixed on those Foxes. He had no intention of allowing Reddy and Mrs. Reddy to slip away unseen.

The moon was very late in coming up, and then it was only a quarter-moon. But it gave light enough to hunt by. You know the eyes of Hooty the Owl are very wonderful. He loves to hunt in the moonlight. It is just the kind of light that suits him. It was just after this silvery light of the moon come creeping in through the treetops that Reddy and Mrs. Reddy got to their feet, stretched, yawned, and started on Reddy in the lead.

By and by they crossed some open fields. They were making straight towards some farm buildings that Hooty could see. From his position up in the air, of course, he could see much farther and much more clearly than he could have seen had he been on the ground. It didn't take him long to discover that there were some old apple trees over near the barn. He remembered that Reddy had told him about th turkeys and how they roosted in a tree. One glance at Reddy and Mrs. Reddy was enough to let Hooty know that they had reached the end of their journey. You see, those Foxes were approaching those farm buildings very cautiously. They were approaching very cautiously indeed. Could you have been there you would have known just by watching them that they were hunting something.

"This is the end of the journey," thought Hooty. "I don't need to watch them any longer. All I have to do now is to locate those turkeys. If they are in a tree, it will not take me long to find them."

He flew straight over to the barn and alighted on the top

So Hooty paid no more attention to Reddy and Mrs. Reddy. He flew straight over to the barn and alighted on the top. Almost the first thing he saw was an apple tree with eleven great black objects in it. Hooty almost chuckled aloud. Those black objects were the turkeys. He didn't need to be told that. All he had to do was to pick out the one he wanted. Turkeys in a tree might be safe from Foxes, but they were just where a big owl would rather have them.

Now, Hooty the Owl is a very bold fellow. Hooty didn't have to watch out for a dog as Reddy and Mrs. Reddy always had to watch out. The only thing that Hooty fears is a man with a terrible gun. And, because he hunts mostly at night, Hooty seldom has occasion to watch out for a terrible gun. He didn't even give the matter a thought this time. He turned his head swiftly each way. Everything was dark save for the faint moonlight and everything was very, very quiet. Apparently, those turkeys were sound asleep. Hooty spread his great, broad, silent wings and for all the world like a great drifting shadow, he floated back and forth above that tree, picking out the turkey he would have for dinner. All his hopes were now realized. He had found the turkeys and that was all he asked. He would do the rest.

New Grant Helps Byrd "Carry On"

The National Geographic society has announced an additional grant of $25,000 to Commander Richard E. Byrd's antarctic expedition. This amount is in addition to $25,000 previously contributed by the society toward the scientific work of the expedition. Dr. Gilbert Grosvenor, president of the society, sent the following radio message to Commander Byrd, Little America, Antarctica:

"The National Geographic society has followed the splendid development of your antarctic project from which you and the gallant men of your command are contributing so much to world knowledge of geography. Our trustees and research committee have voted to double the society's original grant. Therefore award an additional $25,000, available when desired. La Gorce joins in best wishes for safety and continued success to you and your men."

Commander Byrd is the holder of the Hubbard gold medal, highest award of the society to explorers. It has been awarded only to seven other men. The medal was bestowed upon Commander Byrd in 1926 "for his epochal achievement in first reaching the north pole by airplane." The presentation was made on behalf of the society by Calvin Coolidge, then president of the United States, now a trustee of the society, before a notable gathering in Washington.

Upon an expedition sponsored by the National Geographic society, in 1925, to Greenland and Ellesmere island, Commander Byrd commanded an aviation detail and used three U. S. navy airplanes in first flights over this area of the far north. He lectured before the National Geographic society upon his return to this country from his historic north pole and transatlantic flights.

Upon his north pole flight Commander Byrd utilized a sun compass, designed by Albert H. Bumstead, head of the National Geographic society's cartographic department. "Without that compass" the explorer wrote, "we could not have reached the pole; it is even doubtful if we could have hit Spitzbergen on our return flight." Commander Byrd is utilizing the sun compass in his antarctic flights.

An "association of propaganda," in which will be grouped the leading manufacturers of automobiles, airplanes and bicycles in Italy, is scheduled to be formed soon.

Kruschen Is A Thief! He Asserts But A Jolly Good One

HE STOLE MY FAT AWAY

It's the safe way, too—for every day you continue this easy method of losing unwanted and unneeded fat you'll gain in energy, vigor and endurance.

Nine times in ten obesity means inactivity—it means that your blood is starving for the six vital salts your internal organs must have to keep you youthful, active, ambitious and keen in mind.

When you take a generous half teaspoon of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water before breakfast every morning you get these six vital salts which modern foods and cooking do not supply.

Taken every morning, Kruschen Salts supply the liver, kidneys and bowels with an invigorating conditioner and after you have tried this simple plan for two weeks the rejuvenating effect will delight you.

The urge for activity will be so marked that even at the end of a hard day's work you'll feel ready for any social activity or recreation—you can play as hard as you work.

And after two weeks your excess fat starts to go—you'll know it—feel it—see it—the scales will tell the story.

Kruschen Salts is not a purgative or a cathartic, but a real system conditioner and for those who are the victims of constipation or taxemia its daily use soon means blissful regularity.

A jar of Kruschen Salts that will last 4 weeks costs but 85c at Lee and Osgood's or any druggist in the world.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18—Glancing over the first annual report to be submitted by Charles Francis Adams, secretary of the navy, you can hardly fail to conclude that it is put up in true sea-going style.

It might well be called a log, for that matter, it is so ship-shape-and-Bristol-fashion.

For instance, right at the outset you are advised that the "present secretary" took over his command "at 2:30 p. m., on March 5, 1929"; that Assistant Secretary Jahncke hoisted his flag, so to speak, "at 2:30 p. m., April 1, 1929," and that Aviation Secretary Ingalls officially got on the job "at 9 a. m., March 15, 1929."

Then you learn that Secretary Adams and his two assistants promptly set off by ship and air to see the naval world at first hand.

Their comings and goings up to late October are faithfully described before you get down to a recapitulation of departmental matters of the year, ashore, afloat, and a-air, if that is a permissible expression.

A Mariner

Since Mr. Adams is a yacht skipper of note, perhaps the tincture of nautical ways which comes with that sort of recreation influenced his method of annual reporting.

More probably, however, is was just the result of the mental slant of the naval officer to whom the task of preparing the report was assigned by Admiral Hughes, chief of operations.

And without doubt that assignment was made long ago, perhaps even before 2:30 p. m., March 5, 1929, when Commodore Adams became Secretary Adams.

Going to the title page of the Adams report, or any other of the appalling number issued just as congress convenes in December of each year, you find that they cover the fiscal year which ended six months before they were published.

Now and then, to give them some up-to-date aspect, it is noted that certain phases of activities encroaching on the succeeding fiscal year also are reported on. The Adams report, for instance, includes a description of fleet operations up to November 15, of this year.

Careful

Yet this is not necessary. It's just a habit departmental report drafters fall into of projecting their accounts forward if they feel so inclined.

And if there is any departmental activity of a controversial character which has filled the news columns for week during the six-month period after the end of the preceding fiscal year, you are almost certain to find no mention of it.

Take the Adams report again, by the way of illustration:

The naval matter of greatest public interest since he took office lay in preparations for the London naval conference. Yet his report merely says that certain data for use in that connection was compiled by navy experts.

POETRY

At Christmas Time

This is the time of year that small tots love,
There's so much talk of Christmas and its joys,
Of Santa with his reindeer and his sleigh,
Of toys and candy for good girls and boys
And of a dazzling tree on Christmas Day.

This is the time of year when children love
To tread the aisleways of the Christmas stores
To gaze at all the hoard of lovely things
Children with essons learned and well-done chores,
With visions of the gifts that Santa brings.

This is the time of year that grown folks love,
The spirit of the Yuletide stirs each heart,
When earth is rife with friendliness and cheer;
A time for love and kindness set apart:
From all the other times of all the year.

—Beatrice McDonald in Detroit News.

Pep

Vigor, vitality, vim and punch—
That's pep!
The courage to act on a sudden hunch—
That's pep!
The nerve to tackle the hardest thing,
With feet that climb, and hands that cling,
And a heart that never forgets to sing—
That's pep!

Sand and grit in a concrete base—
That's pep!
Friendly smile on an honest face—
That's pep!
The spirit that helps when another's down,
That knows how to scatter the blackest frown,
That loves its neighbor, and loves its town—
That's pep!

To say "I will"—for you know you can—
That's pep!
To look for the best in every man—
That's pep!
To meet each thundering knockout blow,
And come back with a laugh, because you know
You'll get the best of the whole darned show—
That's pep!

NORWICH SHOWS INCREASE IN BUILDING PERMITS

During the month of November, building activity in cities and towns in Connecticut remained on a high level even though the value of permits issued was considerably below the abnormal figures of October, according to the monthly building survey conducted by the committee on industrial development of the New Haven railroad. The railroad committee points out that October had a building permit total much above the average fall month because of an extraordinarily large permit granted to Yale university by New Haven, and that discounting this single grant November figures showed an actual gain. That November permits were above normal is evidenced by their substantial increase over the figures for November, 1928.

Increases over October permits, however, were limited to six of the 22 communities covered in the railroad's survey. These were Bridgeport, Hartford, Norwich, Stamford, Stratford and Willimantic. Ten of the cities enjoyed gains over their building permit totals for November, 1928. These were Bridgeport, Hartford, Meriden, New Haven, New London, Stamford, Stratford, Torrington, Waterbury and Willimantic.

FOUR PLAINTIFFS SEEK DAMAGES TOTALING $45,000

Four plaintiffs claim damages totaling $45,000 in auto negligence actions brought in the superior court against Leonard R. Main, Jr., Mrs. Leonard R. Main, Jr., and Leonard R. Main, Sr., all of North Stonington. The actions were first returned to the superior court for Hartford county but were transferred to this county, where they will be heard.

The four suits are the result of injuries sustained by the Providence people in an auto accident on Oct. 26, 1929, which occurred at the intersection of the Willimantic-Middletown road in the town of Marlborough with the Hartford-New London pike.

The Providence residents were riding in a Cadillac Town car, operated by Mrs. Shepard's chauffeur, John J. Greer. The complaint recites that a Packard auto of which Mrs. Main was the owner was being operated by Mr. Main, Jr., which was being used at the time for delivering groceries on behalf of the general store of Leonard Main, Sr.

Mrs. Shepard claims she sustained a fractured pelvis bone and other injuries; Theresa Hess alleges multiple abrasions and bruises as well as shock to her nervous system; Robert Shepard alleges serious bruises and contusions, injuries to back and legs; Robert Hess claims that he will be permanently disfigured from some of his injuries received.

Properties in the towns of North Stonington, Stonington and Groton owned by the Mains have been attached.

CHIEF TAFT ISSUES WARNING AGAINST CHRISTMAS FIRE HAZARDS

Fire Chief Henry R. Taft Wednesday evening issued a plea to the public to co-operate with the fire department in reducing the Christmas season fire hazards. The chief issued a number of suggestions which, if followed, will go a long way toward insuring Christmas happiness.

Every year Christmas fires turn the holiday celebration into a time of distress and mourning for many people, said the chief, with the avoidable fire dangers and carelessness being principally to blame. As a result, the chief asks every member of the community to co-operate to the utmost in safeguarding life and property during this holiday season when unusual fire hazards abound.

The chief points out that the advent of the inammable nitrate motion picture film for use in toy projection machines for children presents a most serious hazard. Leading film manufacturers have been endeavoring to combat the public sale and distribution of this dangerous film, the use of which should be restricted to standard fire-resistive projection booths.

The chief's warning against Christmas fires follows:

Inflammable decorations should not be draped from, or attached to, electric or gas fixtures.

The Christmas tree should be securely anchored to a heavy, solid base and set away from heating or lighting fixtures.

Avoid all inflammable tree decorations and do not use lighted candles.

If electric lights are used on the tree be sure all connections are properly insulated and that the "pull wire" leading into the wall socket is knotted inside the plug. This will prevent the wires from being skinned and remaining exposed when the power is repeatedly disconnected.

Do not allow children to meddle with the tree lights or with connections on electric toys.

Keep matches and volatile fluids out of the children's reach and do not give them toys requiring alcohol, naptha or gasoline to operate.

Keep a fire extinguisher or pail of water ready for instant use.

Keep the fireplace well screened.

Do not allow all the electric lights in the house to be turned on for long at a time.

Disconnect the power on all lighted decorations, including the tree, when leaving the house or retiring for the night. Extinguish the hearth fire at the same time.

Stores are expected to take special precautions during the holiday season by removing fire hazards, thereby preventing liability of injury and loss of life by fire.

If inflammable material in stores is well guarded from fire and placed in sections from which the crowds may quickly escape the safety of the public will be increased.

Special guards to direct people and keep exits and aisles as clean as possible by some systematic plan, will prevent unnecessary crowding and disturbance and make it possible to clear the premises quickly and in an orderly manner in case of emergency.

Safeguards

In the first place the tree should be set up securely so that it will not easily topple over, and it should be located several feet away from any heating or lighting fixture. Metal tinsel with flake asbestos and powdered mica make excellent materials for snow effects and will not burn. Cotton and paper, on the other hand, are highly dangerous. The tree should never be illuminated with candles. There is some danger from the widely sold colored electric light assemblies due to insufficient insulation and other causes, but the hazard is small compared to that of the lighted candle.

On one recent occasion a woman living in a New York apartment climbed upon a chair to light the candles on a large Christmas tree in order to entertain her little daughter and a neighbor's child. While reaching for a candle at the top of the tree, she accidentally touched her lighted match to a colored paper chain, which blazed up and ignited other decorations. The woman tried to snatch some of the burning papers off the branches, but lost her balance and fell against the tree, pushing it over on the floor. When she regained her feet her dress was on fire and she ran, screaming, out into the hall of the apartment house, fanning the flames until she became a living torch. Aid came too late and she succumbed to the flames.

Ornaments should be of glass and not of paper or pyroxylin plastic, which is commonly known as celluloid, pyralin, French ivory and by other trade names. Pyroxylin plastic is extremely inflammable and will ignite at a comparatively low temperature.

Matches and Smoking

Smokers should exercise great care with their matches and smoking materials, and parents should see that all matches are kept in metal or china containers out of reach of the youngsters.

Toys involving the use of alcohol, gasoline or kerosene should be avoided and low-priced electrical playthings should be played with with suspicion as they often are insecurely wired and flimsily constructed.

An extremely hazardous plaything of comparatively recent development is the home motion-picture projector using nitrocellulose film and often illuminated with a flimsy calcium carbide lamp. Burning film of this kind gives off fumes that cause death even when only a small quantity is taken into the lungs. It would be difficult to place a more dangerous combination in the hands of children.

If the call for Santa Claus is a crying need that will accept no substitute, the impersonator should avoid long flowing whiskers and should keep away from lights and open fires. As an additional protection, the costume used may be partially fireproofed with the following solution: Two ounces of carbonate of soda; two ounces of ammonia carbonate; two ounces of boric acid and five gallons of water. The mixture should be allowed to come to a boil and then be strained and sprayed upon the material to be protected. If Santa's clothing or that of anyone else does catch fire, the victim should be rolled in a rug or woolen cloth and the flames smothered as promptly as possible. The flames should be kept from the face.

In order to prevent the spread of any fires that may start, a bucket or two of water and a fire extinguisher should be kept ready at hand.

Another important safeguard is to remove all evergreens immediately after Christmas, before they become completely dried out. In England, it is considered bad luck to keep the trees and greens in the house after New Year's day.

Public Entertainments

All the precautions that have been mentioned for the home should be strictly observed at public celebrations and, in addition, thought should be given to the matter of clear and adequate exits in case of fire. The hall or room selected for the occasion should be upon the ground floor and should be ample to accommodate the expected audience without crowding.

Precautions for Merchants

In the department stores and other shops which are dangerously crowded during the holiday season, it is especially important that Christmas decorations of an inflammable nature should be avoided and that all temporary wiring for electric lighting or power should be installed by expert electricians and inspected by the underwriters. All circuits should be properly fused and should not be overloaded. The greatest care should be exercised to prevent incandescent lamps from coming into contact with natural or artificial leaves, paper ornaments and streamers or other inflammable be used. This is true of window decbe used. Thisi s true of window decorations as well as those inside the store.

Accumulations of holiday packing materials hold dangerous fire possibilities, and all scraps should be removed twice a day. It is especially hazardous to allow such rubbish to pile up under counters and stairways and at the base of elevator shafts. Large No Smoking signs should be displayed throughout the store and the rule should be enforced.

The merchant should make it a rigid rule that all aisles be kept clear and it is an excellent plan to drill the clerks in the use of apparatus and in the rudiments of fire fighting. Fire exits should never be blocked.

STATE AGRICULTURAL PROGRAMME TO BE AIRED

(Special to The Bulletin)

STORRS, Dec. 18. — Connecticut's agricultural policy conference inaugurated at the Connecticut Agricultural college last summer will continue its activities by having an important place on the program of the mid-winter union agricultural meeting, February 5th is set as the tentative date of the meeting to be held in Hartford. Representatives of the various agricultural organizations, meeting with Commissioner of Agriculture S. McLean Buckingham, voted to hold a union meeting as soon as advisable and devote one session to a continuance of the study of the problems brought up at the Storrs meeting. The meeting will aim to make an appraisal of the problems affecting the farmers' net income.

Preliminary plans call for an afternoon program devoted to a broad and comprehensive study of Connecticut's agricultural problems. Ample allowance in time has been made for discussions which it is hoped will reveal various aspects of the vital agricultural problem so that a constructive program may be arranged for each commodity group.

Allen W. Manchester, assistant director of extension at the Connecticut Agricultural college, explained that the time had come when farmers must begin to face their problems collectively. He said the union meeting affords a most excellent opportunity for dairymen, poultrymen, tobacco, fruit and vegetable growers and every other branch of agriculture to drop all barriers between individual industries and think along general instead of individual lines. In this way it was explained it will be possible for the far-sighted and broad-minded farmers to participate in evolving a plan which should go far toward placing Connecticut agriculture as a whole upon a sound financial basis and increasing the farmer's net income.

In the evening following the customary banquet which always meets with favor it is hoped that two speakers of national reputation will be present.

Commissioner Buckingham was appointed chairman of arrangements for the meeting with authority to select a cooperating committee.

LOCAL SCOUTLEADERS HOLD INTERESTING TRAINING SESSION

Scoutmasters, assistant scoutmasters, and leaders held their ninth session of the elementary training course in room 215, Thayer building, Wednesday night. The meeting opened, with the reading of a letter which will be sent to all scouts concerning the "any hunt" to be held Saturday and the winter camp. Men were divided into two teams and went through a mock rescue of a person broken through the ice. Assistant Scoutmaster Cecil Wetherbee was "saved" after much heroism was displayed by Scoutmaster Walter Weidman who crawled out on "thin ice" (the floor) and dragged him to "shore." Franklin Robinson was "saved" by crawling out on a board carried out to him by Scoutmaster John Hill, who modestly refused to take credit for his act.

William Wyman, deputy scout commissioner, led a discussion on the last court of honor. It was decided that a joint meeting be held between three scoutleaders and the court to plan the next session of the court. The men went on record as favoring all scouts marching into the court and all sitting together in the first five rows. Many other recommendations were made which should improve the court materially.

Outlines on tree study were distributed and a demonstration made of a quick way to print leaves in a book. Scoutmasters were urged to try collecting winter tree buds as an interesting study for scouts to learn tree identification.

Scoutmaster Walter Weidman and William Wyman gave a demonstration of artificial respiration following which Robert Burke demonstrated on Mr. Wyman. Personal rating sheets were distributed to the scout men and each team rated the qualifications of the opposing team.

The meeting closed with an outline discussion of campfires as written by Charles Smith. This meeting marks the last meeting of the course to be held this year. The tenth session it is planned will be an overnight hike where cooking, tracking, campfire, and games will be taken up. This last session will be held the first or second week in January and an effort will be made to have every leader enrolled in the course attend. Leadership certificates will be presented to the men at the next court of honor. The men at this meeting went on record as favoring a scoutmaster's get-together each month where new games and methods can be introduced along with suitable refreshments.

C. L. STEWART TELLS ROTARIANS OF HIS TRIP TO CALIFORNIA

A very interesting account of his trip to the Pacific coast was given by Charles L. Stewart at the Wednesday noon luncheon of the Norwich Rotary club. Mr. Stewart, who was introduced by Arthur M. Brown and announced the subject as From the Bright Lights of Hollywood to the Gambling Hells of Mexico, refrained from discussing at any length the topic as given by Mr. Brown. The speaker told of his trip across the continent, his visits to the Grand Canyon, New Mexico, Yosemite Valley, Mexico and other points of interest. Mr. Stewart returned by the northern route through the Dominion.

At the business session President Frank R. Murdy presided and Lucius Briggs and CV. A. Gazer were song leaders. There were a number of pleasing vocal selections.

The meeting closed with the singing of the Star Spangled Banner.

NEW LONDON COUNCIL TO OFFER WORK ON BATES WOODS ROADS TO NEEDY

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Dec. 18.—The city council met as a committee this evening and for two hours canvassed the unemployment situation without coming to a definite conclusion as to how to proceed. It was the sentiment that there was need of employment for many persons in this city, for applicants for the city's charity have increased and now number more than in a long time. One member of the council, Councilor Scott, was absent from the meeting because of indisposition. But the field was gone over and the conclusion was reached that applicants for charity would be offered employment for a few weeks on the roads that lead to the Bates woods, where their services may be of value to the city. Colman street may be extended across the woods or adjacent thereto and on this highway the first work will be done. Several names are in possession of the city manager and the commissioner of charities and these persons will be offered employment. It is understood that the cost of the new order of things can be met without levying a special tax to defray the expense

No action was taken as to recommending a member of the council to succeed the late John F. Murray as Councilor Scott is a member of the committee to which that matter was referred.

NEW LONDON, Dec. 18.—An automobile driven by Vincent Fusconi, 512 Thames street, Groton, struck Ellen Stubelik, 12, of 32 Douglass street, on Main street, between Church and Federal streets, this evening. The child started to run across the street and did not observe approaching autos, with the result that she ran in front of Fusconi's car and was knocked down. Fusconi had the child taken to the office of a physician, where an examination did not reveal injuries of an apparent serious nature. After her injuries had been treated, the child was taken to her home.

The local union of masons held an interesting meeting and social last night in the meeting rooms, Herwegh lodge, Main street. Following business a chicken supper was served.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Palace Theatre

An overwhelming popular demand on the part of residents of Norwich has brought "The Gold Diggers of Broadway" back to the Palace theatre where it is now playing and where it will be continued through Friday evening.

Seldom in the history of the motion picture industry—perhaps never—has any film so quickly and so thoroughly captured the popular imagination. People of all classes and degrees—rich, poor, medium—have crowded to taste this delightful sweep of entertainment.

Why is this? Well, there are numerous reasons. Chief among them is Winnie Lightner, as gay-hearted and as vivacious as her name sounds—Winnie of the quick wit, and ribald laughter, Winnie of the magic voice, the voice which compels. Winnie of the winning ways—she always gets her man, and gets him properly.

Secondly, there is the golden-voiced Nick Lucas. Nick can sing in a manner all his own, and he sings in a way that touches the heart. Nobody should fail to hear him do his "Tip-toe Through the Tulips," and his "Painting the Clouds with Sunshine," two of the many gems in the film. His singing is so good that while one listens, one forgets the rest of the picture altogether, until with a sudden rush, Ann Pennington is back again: toes twinkling, long black hair flashing about white shoulders, as she does another of her famous dances.

Others who help to make this picture the masterpiece that it is, are Conway Tearle, William Bakewell, Nancy Welford and a host of minor stars, including one of the most beautiful choruses yet gathered on any stage. The lighting effects are unique, and the technicolor marvelous. Don't miss it!

Beginning Saturday, the Palace will present for four days straight, "The Love Racket," screen adaptation of the great stage play, "The Woman on the Jury." Dorothy Mackaill, Sidney Blackmer, Edmund Burns, Alice Day and Myrtle Stedman are in the cast.

Broadway Theatre

Veterans of the A. E. F. are refreshing their memories of "that dear Paree" as they last viewed it on their "three days' pass," in the all-talking production, "The Battle of Paris," which opened yesterday at the Broadway. Poilus, doughboys, Tommies and all the other allied troops "mix it up" hilariously on their leave from the trenches, and the result is a delightful comedy, with here and there a trace of vivid drama. The old marching songs of the A. E. F. are rousingly sung by a husky male chorus, led by vivacious Gertrude Lawrence, famous star of musical comedy, who lends her engaging personality to the story. Gertrude Lawrence is a street singer and with Charles Ruggles as her partner gives a clever performance, later donning the robes of a war nurse, "just to be near her boys." Fox Movietone news, and a long program of talking specialties complete the bill. George Dewey Washington, Negro baritone; Frank X. Silk, famous tramp comedian; Deiro, master accordionist; Fred Ardath & Co., in an amusing sketch, "These Dry Days," and Laurel and Hardy in a featured comedy, "Unaccustomed as We Are," make up an entertaining all-talking bill. The "Battle of Paris" with its surrounding program remains through Friday, and on Saturday the big collegiate funfest, "So This is College," will open a four-day engagement.

Announcement

All sittings made up to and including Dec. 20, will positively be finished Christmas eve. Open for sittings 9 a. m. to 9 p. m., daily. Desmarais Studio, 325 Main St., near Y. M. C. A. and Postoffice.

Breed Theatre

Norma Shearer, hailed by critics as "the girl with the 100 per cent talkie voice," heads the all-star cast. Featured with her are Lewis Stone, H. B. Warner and Raymond Hackett. Lilyan Tashman, Olive Tell, Adrienne d'Ambricourt, Mary Doran, Dewitt Jennings, Wilfred North, Landers Stevens, Myra Hampton, Wescott Clark, Charles Moore, Claude Allister and others appear.

Although the players had never stepped before a microphone before all of the voices registered perfectly and Veiller was delighted with the perfect recordings.

Oddly enough, Veiller is of the opinion that stage experience counts for very little in talking pictures and for that reason made all of his cast selections in Hollywood instead of New York, where he has long been prominently identified with the theatre.

BLAZE IN A FORD CAR GETS OUT APPARATUS

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., Dec. 18.—Shortly before 6 p. m., Wednesday, for the second time in the afternoon, the Westerly fire alarm was sounded. No. 43, Main and Beach streets, for a fire and in but a few moments the recall was heard. The alarm was sounded for a blaze in a Ford car on Beach street near the George C. Moore mill. Three pieces of apparatus responded but the fire was out before the arrival of the firemen.

ALMOST HAD ROAST PIG AFTER POND STREET FIRE

Westerly fire alarm, No. 31 was sounded at 1:30 p. m., Wednesday, for a fire in a roughly-built shed at the end of Pond street, utilized by Frank J. Cherenzia of the Union Ice Co., as a storage place for old trucks and hay. The origin of the fire was undetermined but when discovered the blaze had gotten under considerable headway, clouds of black smoke pouring from the one-story wooden building when the alarm was sounded from the box at Pond and Pierce streets. Chief George E. Egger with men was on his way even before the alarm was sounded by reason of his being out in the little red truck used to fight forest fires. Assistant Engineers Robert Bonner, George McKenzie and Columbus Pasetti were at the fire. Both motor pumpers of the Westerly fire department responded and two lines of hose were laid from a Pond street hydrant but one stream of water was directed upon the blazing building. In the shed were three old motor trucks from which the greatest loss will result, amounting to several hundred dollars. In another adjoining wooden building were tools, but this building did not catch fire, although a fat pig in a neighboring pen had its side burned in the intense heat. The fire was put out before the building fell. The property is owned by Santo Viltetito and wife.

Teh predicament of a large sea gull flying over the Pawcatuck river just below the Broad street bridge attracted the attention of a hundred or more Christmas shoppers about 2 p. m., Wednesday. In flying up the river, the large bird caught its wing on a wire extending out over the river and was unable to extricate itself for some time. The bird put up a game battle against its involuntary snare and eventually won the fight, freeing itself to continue its flight over the river. Before this occurred, a passerby had gone to the Clyde Mills plant on Main street to have the wire cut to free the bird.

DISPOSED OF CASES IN SUPERIOR COURT

The closing session of Westerly adjournment of the November term of Washington county superior court, Associate Justice Charles A. Walsh, of Providence, on the bench, lasted but a few minutes Wednesday, as no cases were ready to be tried.

In the action at law, Annunziato Vuono vs. Frank Capalbo, in which the plaintiff was non-suited last week, the default was removed at Wednesday's session of the court.

The cases of Michelina Vacca vs. Louisa De Bartolo, Michelina Vacca vs. Lucy Cugina, Louisa De Bartolo vs. Michelina Vacca and Lucy Cugina vs. Michelina Vacca, were passed to the February session.

The cases of International Cork Co. vs. J. H. Blackler Co., Merchants' Box & Cooperage Co. vs. J. H. Blackler Co., L. Mundet Sons, Inc., vs. J. H. Blackler Co., and Citrus Products Co. vs J. H. Blackler Co., on the Westerly calendar, were transferred to Providence.

Judge Walsh stated that Wednesday was the last day of the November session of the court and no cases would be started which could not be finished during the day. Court adjourned to February.

Injunction Hearing

Papers in the temporary injunction of Harry J. Leon vs. Elizabeth Leon, of Westerly, returnable to the superior court of Washington county here today (Thursday), were ordered transferred to Providence. A restraining order in the matter was entered in the superior court here on Dec. 12, 1929. The petitioner seeks to restrain the defendant from selling real estate, disposing of personal property at wholesale and from withdrawing of moneys from the bank. Attorney John J. Dunn is counsel for the petitioner.

NEW MEMORIAL FOUNTAIN IN ACTION IN THE PARK

With its Christmas decorations of festoons of multi-colored electric lamps strung from pole to pole along the business streets of the town, an illuminated Christmas tree on the site of the Rhode Island hotel in Dixon square, Westerly is about to add a year-round ornament, an electrically illuminated fountain. For the first time Wednesday morning water was turned on in the newly constructed memorial fountain in Wilcox park. From the center of the fountain is one large stream from a five-eighths inch nozzle and around the center is a circle of eight tips of three-eighths of an inch diameter.

There is enough pressure back of the system to send the water, when the pressure is fully turned on, into the air for 50 feet. This sends the spray well outside the fountain. The height of the normal stream will be about 20 feet, so that the water will fall back into the basin.

The South County Public Service company is to light the fountain temporarily. It is expected the lights will be in by today (Thursday).

The permanent fixtures will be installed in the spring and will be in the center of the fountain. All the trustees of the park were present and with them were Arthur Coy, superintendent of the Westerly water department, Louis Rossi, engineer who had charge of the installation; Samuel Nardone, the contractor; Robert F. Burnett and Harold A. Stockbridge of the South County Public Service company.

Ends Coughs!

"Each cough made me more anxious...more frightened!"

"It was eleven o'clock on a bitter winter night—my little daughter Jane woke up—coughing. My husband ran to the drug store and got a bottle of Smith Brothers' Cough Syrup. With the very first swallow of the syrup her cough began to calm down. We gave her a little bit every hour and finally, around two o'clock in the morning, she fell asleep again. How relieved I was! In the morning Jane felt much better—and in two days she was all well again."

MRS. J. K. VILA, New York City

DEALINGS IN STOCK MARKET DWINDLED CLOSE TO MINIMUM LEVEL OF THE YEAR

NEW YORK, Dec. 18—(AP)—Speculative apathy penetrated further today, and the volume of trading on the stock market dwindled close to the minimum level of the year. Only 2,284,850 shares were traded, the lowest level since the lethargic days of early June, when for three successive days transfers fell close to 2,000,000 shares a day.

The day's industrial and corporate news was rather undecisive, and distinctly not of a character to inspire ambitious market campaigns. Operators for the advance still awaited more definite business developments, and it was indicated in some quarters that they were preparing to wait until after the turn of the year. The bears, on the other hand, know that it is dangerous business to sell a dull market and were temporarily hibernating.

The weekly iron and steel trade reviews indicated further slackening of steel mill operations, and some easing of pig iron prices, but Iron Age stated "mills believe that customers will be forced to enter the market in January, possibly in sufficient numbers to create a rebound in demand commensurate with the recent slump in buying." It ascribed a large measure of the slump to psychological rather than actual conditions. Some increase in automotive manufacturing was reported, particularly among the low-priced group.

Freight car loadings figures for the first week of the month were again substantially below the like week a year ago, but the margin was a little less wide than that of recent weeks, owing to a sizeable increase in the movement of coal. The total held well above the like week of 1927. Crude oil production figures for last week showed another moderate decline, bringing the output close to the level of this period a year ago. Announcement of the Republic Steel merger had long been expected, and was somewhat less inclusive than had been anticipated in some quarters. Receivership for the American Piano Co. was an unfavorable development, but reflected the unsatisfactory conditions with which the company has been struggling for several years.

Credit conditions remained unchanged, with call money holding at 4 1-2 per cent, at which level several observers regard it as pegged. Forecasts of the probable showing of the brokerage loan compilation tomorrow were vague and varied, but a decline sufficient to cancel last week's $32,000,000 gain was widely expected.

The stock market was steady to firm during the forenoon, slumped during the early afternoon with renewed pressure against Fox Film, rallied briskly around 2 p. m., when strong support appeared in pivotal industrials, but sold off rapidly in the last half hour.

General Electric was bid up 3 points to 241, but closed at 236, up 3 net. U. S. Steel sold off nearly 2 points, rebounded for a net gain of more than 2, but closed unchanged at 171 1-4. Alpha Portland Cement sold up 3 points when the regular dividend was declared on schedule, despite unsatisfactory conditions in the industry. Howe Sound mounted a couple of points on declaration of an extra dividend. Fairly large scale buying of Texas Pacific Land Trust, which holds oil lands in Texas, suddenly appeared. The shares, normally rather inactive, rose 2 1-2 points.

Republic Steel dropped nearly 5 points, evidently reflecting some disappointment over the merger announcement. Fox Film A sold off about 4 points, possibly reflecting indications that the class A stockholders committee may oppose the plans of the trustees. Allied Chemical, American and Foreign Power, A. M. Byers, Auburn Auto, Canadian Pacific and Purity Baking dropped 3 to 5 points.

Commodities were dull. Wheat futures sagged 1-2 to nearly 1 cent on upward revision of Argentine estimates. Corn prices held barely steady. Cotton futures sold up about 50 cents a bale on short covering and reports of better consumption.

Foreign exchanges moved in narrow ranges. Latin American exchanges rallied a little from yesterday's low levels resulting from virtual suspension of gold payments by Argentina. Sterling cables were a shade lower at $4.85 1-8.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Dec. 18—(AP)—Emphatic weakness in Argentine government securities, which broke 2 to 6 points, was the outstanding development of the day in the bond market. The selling was on a moderate scale and was mostly for speculative accounts. It was an aftermath of Argentina's announcement that the conversion privilege had been suspended at the gold exchange and accompanied material declines in Argentine obligations in London.

The South American Republic has many 6 per cent coupon issues listed on the New York Stock exchange and virtually all of these figured in the day's downward movement, which sent them to new lows for the year at around 90, contrasting with the highs of a fraction above par. Two of the three Buenos Aires 6s traded in the session declined to the same extent. Chilean and Columbian bonds lost 1 to 2 points in sympathy. Brazilians were steady.

The domestic list scored a small advance, although buying activity was limited to the first grade rails and the prime utilities. Such selective employment of such reinvestment funds as were ready for use had the effect of steadying the industrials and many speculative listings in all groups. On the other hand, United States government issues eased. This apparently confused trend was taken as indication of public buying in sound issues which offer larger yields than the Liberties and Treasuries.

There was no change in the money markets and time funds loaned at 5 per cent and call loans held at the general rate of 4 1-2. Little change in these rates is anticipated until after the holidays.

In the rail group gains averaging half a point came out in Atchison General 4s, Baltimore & Ohio Gold 4s, Chicago & Northwestern 4 1-2s, Erie General 4s, Delaware & Hudson 4 1-2s, Illinois Central 4 3-4s, Missouri Kansas Texas 4 1-2s, Northern Pacific General 3s, Pennsylvania 4 1-2s, Texas & Pacific 5s and St. Louis San Francisco prior lien 4s.

Inquiry for the utilities supported American Telephone 5 1-2s, Duquesne Light 4 1-2s, Detroit Edison 5s, Kansas City Power & Light 5s, New York Edison 6 1-2s, Pacific Telephone 5s, Pacific Gas 5s, and Southern Bell Telephone 5s.

In the industrial section numerous first grade loans took an upward turn, but the improvement was only nominal. Standard Oil of New Jersey 5s rose a point.

Convertibles were mixed and dull, with the result that net changes were fractional.

New offerings for tomorrow include $2,700,000 issue of Central Illinois Public Service first 5s, due in 1969 at 94.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Dec. 18—(AP)—Wheat prices underwent a late setback today, influenced by correct surmises that the government crop report showed almost 15,000,000 bushels more wheat was harvested this season than had previously been forecast from Washington. However, notwithstanding this excess, the total United States wheat production for 1929 is 105,000,000 bushels below the 1928 output.

Closing quotations on wheat today were unsettled, 1-8c to 10c a bushel lower than yesterday's finish. Corn closed unchanged to 1-4 and 3-8c off, oats a shade to 3-8c down, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 5c.

In contrast with the late downward trend of wheat prices today, the market earlier averaged higher owing largely to a more or less uneasiness displayed as to possible effects of a sudden severe drop in temperatures over domestic wheat territory. Snowfalls were widespread but considerable uncertainty prevailed as to where as a rule the blanket which was thus provided for the growing wheat had come in time to avert damage. Under such circumstances, the price of July deliveries representing the 1930 crop showed relative firmness compared with quotations on nearby deliveries that call for wheat already in store.

Corn and oats eased toward the last, influenced by wheat weakness. The government crop report as to corn was virtually the same as had heretofore been indicated. Oats production however, is about 11,000,000 bushels more than the latest prior official estimate. Provisions were firmer on account of advances in the value of hogs.

NEW YORK, Dec. 18—(AP)—Two of the first three railroads to report net operating income for November showed returns considerably smaller than the corresponding month last year were the Pere Marquette, which showed $43,416 for last month, compared with $1,023,107 for Nov. 1928, and the Chicago & Alton with $87,807 for last month, as against $164,955 for the same month a year ago. On the other hand, the Central Vermont, a part of the Canadian National system, reported an increase from $83,314 in November, 1928 to $113,000 for last month.

An order for 16,625 tons of steel rails has been placed by the Central Railroad of New Jersey with the Bethlehem Steel Corp.

Well pleased with his company's foreign business, Harvey Firestone, Jr., of the Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., returned from a European business trip today. He looks for an improved condition for rubber sales abroad next year and said the company's English factory is operating at capacity and turning out 2,500 tires daily.

Cities Service company's net earnings for November were $4,314,815, an increase of 36 per cent over the same month last year and a high record for any month in the history of the company, and compared with $3,161,635 in November, 1928. Net earnings for the year, and said the company's English largest for any 12 months, amounting to $41,650,882.

Directors of the Associated Gas & Electric Co. have ratified the offer of $20,000,000 for control of the New Bedford Gas Co., and which it is planned to purchase through the New England Gas and Electric Co., an associated subsidiary. Letters to this effect were sent to trustees of the New Bedford company today.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lawton have moved to Phoenixville.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Brown, Mrs. Lena Durkee and Miss Harriett Durkee visited relatives in Eastford Sunday.

Miss Irene Green has been staying for a week in North Windham, with Mr. and Mrs. Walter Wallen.

The trial of Paul Metsac, 15, was held at Knowlton Memorial hall last week. The Metsac boy was driving a car about a month ago, one Saturday night, and collided with a car, near the Warrenville post office, driven by a man from Andover. Metsac's car overturned and was badly damaged. He was treated at St. Joseph's hospital, Willimantic, several days for injuries to his face. This is the third time the boy has had trouble and he was put on probation for a years under the care of Arthur Gude, of Willimantic. Justice of the Peace Clarence Barlow and Grand Juror Justin Burrill tried the case.

Rev. Eliot B. Verney used as his text Sunday morning at the Baptist church, Romans 5:15. He made the announcement in Bible-school that one boy and one girl who show the most improvement in their record will be given a trip to Plymouth Rock, in May.

Preparations are being made for a Christmas tree and exercises at the church, Monday night at 7:30.

PLASTERER ROLLED TO WORK IN WHEELCHAIR

PALM BEACH, Fla., Dec. 18.—(AP)—A wheelchair rolled rapidly up to the entry of the fashionable beach casino. Guests on the veranda glanced admiringly at the occupant, who was attired in the nattiest of sports wear.

Attendants rushed to his side. The new arrival adjusted his swaggering panama over one eye, paid the perspiring chauffeur and stepped from the chair with a bag of tools.

It was Bill McManus, plasterer, come to work.

LOADED CARGO OF LIQUOR FROM STRANDED SHIP

SYDNEY, N. S., Dec. 18.—(AP)—Reports from Dingwall, Aspy Bay, today said the schooner Minnie Bay, which was captured by revenue men when she was stranded on the beach there yesterday, had been looted of part of her cargo of liquor by raiding parties organized among the residents ashore.

The raiding parties engaged the crew in conversation while others made off with stolen cases.

When the cutter Constance arrived, a party was put ashore to patrol the beach. One of the raiders fleeing with a bag of bottled goods was knocked over the head with a carbine before he dropped his loot.

On several occasions coast guardsmen broke up raiding parties by firing over their heads. The cutter skipper's dory was stolen and he fell through thin ice when he attempted to walk ashore.

MEX. RAILWAY EMPLOYES HAVE WON THEIR DEMANDS

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 18.—(AP)—Striking employes of the Mexican railway, British-owned road connecting the capital with the important port of Vera Cruz, tonight won their demands in the award handed out by President Emilio Portes Gil, who was named as arbitor of the dispute last week.

The workers had demanded that the railway sign collective labor contracts under which the employers when in need of more workers could only select names from a list submitted by the unions. The president decided that the company must sign such contracts and moreover must pay the wages of the strikers from the time they left their work on Dec. 7.

The company made no reply tonight but when the matter was placed in the hands of the president it was understood that his word would be final. The strike had seriously tied up traffic between this city and Vera Cruz.

KILLED IN AN ATTEMPT TO SAVE HIS PAL

BOSTON, Dec. 18.—(AP)—John Hopp 25, of Milwaukee, Wis., baker second class aboard the mine layer Quail, was killed at the Charlestown navy yard tonight attempting to save a pal from falling off a gangplank. Preceded by George Springoski, 25, of Chicago, water tender on the Quail, Hopp was returning to his ship which was tied up at the navy yard, after shore leave. As Springoski tripped and fell to the deck of the Quail, Hopp lunged to save him and dropped into the water. As he fell his head struck the pier and he was dead when pulled out.

RUM SCHOONER BEING UNLOADED IN HALIFAX

HALIFAX N. S., Dec. 18.—(AP)—A cargo of rum valued at $112,000 was being unloaded from the schooner Francis W. Smith here today after the capture of the vessel off Lahave Saturday by the cruiser Fleur De Lis, which brought the rum ship into port. The contraband, which includes 8,000 gallons of Black Diamond rum, will be stored in the customs warehouse here.

FUNERAL OF MRS. MARY H. TRUMBULL YESTERDAY

PLAINVILLE, Dec. 18.—(AP)—The funeral of Mrs. Mary Harper Trumbull, mother of Gov. John H. Trumbull, was held at 2 p. m. today at her home on Maple street.

The family and immediate friends attended the services. Rev. J. Roy Wilkerson, pastor of the Plainville Congregational church, officiated. Burial was in the West cemetery.

GEN. CROWDER FIGURES IN LOBBY INVESTIGATION

WASHINGTON Dec. 18.—(AP) — A letter introduced today into the record of the senate lobby committee said that General Enoch Crowder, former ambassador to Cuba, who has been advocating a low sugar duty, had "learned that the plans of the general staff provide that in case of war any attempt to keep a traffic lane open between the Philippine and the United States would be promptly abandoned."

The letter was written by H. C. Lakin, president of the Cuba company interested in sugar production in Cuba, to M. C. Rionda, of the Czarnikow-Rionda company of New York, and was put into the record while Lakin was on the stand. It said Crowder had written a memorandum concerning limiting sugar exports from the Philippines.

FINDS CLAWLIKE TOES COME FROM HIGH HEELS

HAMILTON, N. Y., Dec. —(AP)—Why human toes sometimes tend to resemble claws is explained by Dr. Donald A. Laird, director of the psychological laboratory of Colgate university.

"In walking," he says, "the toes normally and automatically are lifted when the free leg is swung forward. Apparently the main purpose of this is to keep the toes from hitting the ground. If these extensor muscles are paralyzed for any reason, the walker lifts his leg abnormally high at the knee, producing a string-halted gait.

"So-called civilized shoes hold the toes up from the ground by a stiff sole which soon becomes permanently curved upward at the toe, thus shortening the extensors through loss of their function. This produces the well known 'claw position' of the toes, which anatomists maintain amounts to a genuine deformity.

"High heels bend the foot joints and further distort the function of the toes muscles."

Unsuccessful in his efforts to prosecute former President Calles of Mexico on charges of implication in the murder of a Mexican general here in 1922, District Attorney John A. Valls of Laredo, Tex., dismissed a similar murder charge against Duke Carver, San Antonio constable.

In sad and loving memory of our dear Mother, Louise A. Lewis, who passed away three years ago today, Dec. 19, 1926.

Peaceful be your sleep, dear Mother
Grief and pain gone forever more.
Weary days and nights of suffering
Never will affect you more.
With broken hearts we watched you.
And saw you pass away.
Although we dearly loved you
We could not make you stay.
O, Mother, how we miss you,
Miss your dear and smiling face:
But in Heaven, we hope to meet you.
Never to part again.

Sadly missed by your children.

SOMERS

There is to be a Christmas party at the town hall next Saturday afternoon for all pupils of the primary and junior departments of the Sunday school, together with the members of the Cradle roll.

Next Sunday evening a Christmas pageant will be given in the church, by the Choral society, Young People's society and members of the Church school.

The Y. P. society of the Congregational church, held a food sale in the town hall, Saturday afternoon. The sale was well patronized, and the food sold very promptly.

Mrs. E. W. Thompson, assisted by Mrs. S. B. Moore, Misses Clara and Elsie Russell and Mrs. C. W. Loomis will entertain the Woman's club Thursday afternoon. Mrs. Ernestine Perry, of Springfield, will speak on "Life in the Kentucky Mountains."

Miss Charlotte Jones is ill at her home on Springfield road.

A chimney fire in the home of Clifton M. Ellis, last week Monday, came near being serious. It was thought the fire had been smouldering all night, but it was not suspected until Mrs. Ellis discovered smoke coming through the floor. Quite work in chopping through partitions prevented serious loss.

Somers schools were closed Wednesday afternoon to enable the teachers to attend a teachers' meeting and again, Friday, that the teachers might have the day for visiting.

Mrs. Chester W. Pomeroy entertained relatives from Hazardville the first of the week.

Mrs. Walter B. Wheelock has been entertaining her brothers, E. D. Smith, of East Windsor Hill, and J. W. Smith of Bay View, Mich., the latter was on his way to Florida.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur B. Stocker have closed their home on Main street and have gone to Springfield for the winter.

Local people were glad of the rise in the temperature to take off some of the heavy coating of ice that was covering the town.

Mr. and Mrs. George McAuley and two sons, of Springfield, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. John Hunt.

A committee consisting of the committee of the Ecclesiastical society, and Judge E. S. Fuller, C. W. W. Pease, and F. C. Davis, the church and society voted to sell the present parsonage property and purchase the property owned by Horace Clements, on the Springfield road. Thus the property, which years ago was owned by the church, comes into its possession. It was near the time of Rev. Mr. Ricketts' pastorage, 1890-96, that the house was sold. The committee is planning to do some small repairing, together with interior decorating, which will make it a delightful parsonage. Rev. and Mrs. E. T. Jones are planning to have a house-warming when they move into the new parsonage.

HANOVER

MRS. ALLEN LATHAM SPEAKS AT PARISH HOUSE MEETING

The December meeting of the Missionary society, of the Congregational church, was held Thursday afternoon, at the parish house. Mrs. Frederick Eadie was leader and Mrs. William G. Park, the hostess. Mrs. Allen Latham, of Norwich, gave a very interesting talk which was listened to with appreciation by a good sized audience.

The Story Hour circle met Friday afternoon, at the Parsonage-by-the-Pines. The Philippino stories were continued. The special one for last week was 'A Box of Surprises.'

In the evening, Friday, at the parsonage, a very enjoyable party was given to two classes of the Church school, Miss Caroline Gallup's class of young ladies and Mrs. Stone's class of young men.

Mrs. George Harrold, of Willimantic, has been a visitor at the home of Judge and Mrs. Henry A. Adams.

At the meeting of the executive committee of the Norwich Y. P. S. C. E. union, held at Franklin, the evening of the 9th, the banner for the largest proportionate attendance was awarded Hanover society.

Abundance of Water

The machinery which has been drilling an artesian well on the parsonage property suspended work at a depth of one hundred and forty-one feet at which point there was found to be a reservoir of one hundred feet of water in the six inch hole. This means at least one hundred and fifty gallons, and with the inflow of over two and a half gallons per minute will be sufficient to supply several families when the pump is installed.

The equipment was moved to Jewett City Monday for the drilling of a well on one of the dairy farms.

The steam shovel at work on Nelson Adams' gravel pit on the Versailles road must be kept pretty busy these days judging from the number of loaded trucks which are passing through the village from morning till night.

The children of Hanover school are to hold their Christmas exercises in the Parish house this year in order that there may be room enough for all of their friends to attend. The entertainment will begin at 7:30 Friday evening. There will be a tree, and as it is a community affair, all who may care to do so, are at liberty to bring gifts for friends, either children or adults and the children will place them upon or around the tree, ready for distribution.

The community tree, a much larger one than any previous year, has been set in its usual place on the green and is being decorated ready for lighting up each evening. The sing will be held around it Sunday evening after the Christmas pageant, for which the children of the Church school are rehearsing.

MANSFIELD DEPOT

The Missionary society met with Mrs. Minnie McCollum Thursday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. George Cosgrove, Mr. and Mrs. George Bassett, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Hanson, Mr. and Mrs. Amos Wilson, and Mr. and Mrs. Byron Houston attended the Ladies' night of the Masons, at the Masonic hall, in Merrow, last Wednesday night. Supper was provided for about two hundred, after which an entertainment, a minstrel show and dancing were enjoyed. Neff's orchestra played for dancing.

Thursday morning was the coldest of the season, temperature ranging from ten degrees below to two degrees above.

May Korner and Audrey Gergler were on the "B" honor roll for the second marking period, at Windham High school.

Mrs. W. R. Davoll, of Mansfield Center, spent Friday and Saturday with her daughter, Mrs. Myron Green.

There is very little demand for turkeys this year.

LIBERTY HILL

Walter Robinson and his nephew Leland Brewer, of New Haven, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Stiles over Wednesday night.

Word has been received here of the death, at Lyme, of Jacob Strzyzewski who formerly lived here for many years.

Earl Hoxie and C. B. Adams have small evergreen trees set in their front yards, decorated with colored electric bulbs, which are very attractive in the evening.

Thursday morning the thermometer registered the lowest of the season, 4 below zero.

There will be a Christmas tree and entertainment including a play given by the children of the local school Friday evening, Dec. 20th., at Liberty Hill church.

A comforter which the Liberty Hill Sewing circle made and donated to the Lincoln school, in Georgia, was shipped Thursday afternoon to be on time for a Christmas gift.

P. J. Griffen and family, of Southington, were visitors with Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Choquette, Sunday.

Sunday morning, Rev. J. H. Knott preached from the text in the book of Ezekiah 37th chapter and 10th verse. So I prophesied as He commanded me and the breath came into them and they lived and stood up upon their feet an exceeding great army.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Hoxie had as visitors Sunday, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Brown and infant daughter, of Yantic, and Mrs. Vera Menning, and sons, Edward and Harold and Lucius Whitaker, of Norwich.

Several from here attended the funeral of Mrs. Bessie Hobby, at Mansfield Center Congregational church.

LAST MINUTE RALLY GIVES LOCAL "Y" TEAM VICTORY OVER WINSTED

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WINSTED, Dec. 18.—A last minute rally enabled the Norwich Y. M. C. A. basketball team to beat out the Winsted Y five here tonight to win their third straight league game, 45 to 38. The game was fast and close throughout the first three quarters and then in the final quarter the visitors forged ahead to win. The visitors showed excellent teamwork, especially in the final rally that netted them the victory.

Up to the final quarter the game had been nip and tuck with first one team leading and then the other. The first half ended with the score deadlocked at 17 points. At the opening of the third quarter the locals took the lead and held it until about halfway through the fourth quarter when Norwich came from behind to take command.

Brown and Pingree were the high scorers of the evening, the former with 18 points and the latter with 22. Capt. Harris of the visitors played an exceptionally strong defensive game which contributed largely to the Norwich victory.

ARMY SQUAD OF 110 OFF FOR PACIFIC COAST

WEST POINT, Dec. 8—(AP)—Carrying 110 players on Army's first football invasion of the far west, the "West Point Special" steamed away this afternoon, bound for Palo Alto, Calif., where the football season will be closed with a game with Stanford, December 21.

The football players were cheered on their way by 500 Cadets who were left behind, the vocal encouragement being made possible by a last minute reversal by Major General W. R. Smith, the superintendent, of a previous order. General Smith had ruled that the Cadets could not be present at the departure on account of examinations, but relaxed later to the extent that 500 who were free for most of the afternoon could send a hearty cheer ringing clear about the little West Point station as the train pulled away.

There were two football players who found little joy in the occasion. Letzeiter, former Carnegie Tech back, and O'Reilly, a lineman, members of the plebe squad, fell short of passing marks in English in the December examinations and were not permitted to take the trip.

The plebe, or freshman, team will furnish the practice opposition for the varsity along the way. Neither Letzeiter nor O'Reilly could have played against Stanford but had they not flunked the English writs, they would have the trip to the Pacific coast as a reward for conscientious work on the plebe team during the season.

Letzeiter made a grade of 1.9 when the passing grade is 2.2. Perfect is 3.00. O'Reilly scored 1.5 in the same examination. The ill luck of this pair was good luck for three plebe players for Watters, Underhill and Seridan were named to take their places in the party.

The first stop of the special train was to be made at Syracuse. At Galesburg, Ill., tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock a practice will be held. The party leaving this afternoon numbered 140, including 110 varsity, scrub and plebe players.

YABERSKI CLINCHES THIRD PLACE BY BEATING LAURI

DETROIT, Dec. 18—(AP)—Frank Taberski, of Schenectady, N. Y., clinched third place in the world's championship pocket billiard tournament by defeating Onofrio Lauri, of Brooklyn, in the first game of the afternoon program here, 125 to 71, in 23 innings. In the second game Pasquale Natalie, of Detroit, was the victor over Marcel Camp, of Detroit, 125 to 64 in 21 innings.

Four players finished in a tie for fourth place in games won and lost at three won and four lost, but on the basis of point total, Lauri took fourth with 685, Camp fifth with 668, Natalie sixth with 629 and Spencer Livsey, of Los Angeles, seventh with 578. As a result Lauri automatically qualified for the next world's title tournament as the first four to finish are eligible. Third place was worth $900, fourth $800, fifth $700, sixth $600 and seventh $500.

ATHLETE ARRESTED FOR PUNCHING RADIO ANNOUNCER

CHICAGO, Dec. 18—(AP)—A warrant was issued by Judge Max Luster today for the arrest of William P. Fleckenstein, a member of the Chicago Bears professional football team, charging him with assault and battery on Carroll "Pat" Flannigan, radio announcer of the WBBM air theatre.

Fienkenstein is alleged to have broken Flannigan's nose during the Shires-Trafton fight at White City Monday night when he became angered at the announcer's request he stop cursing near the microphone.

"I asked him politely to move away so his cursing couldn't be heard by radio listeners, who were getting a punch-by-punch account of the fight," Flannigan said, "and he struck me several times breaking my nose and damaging my eyes."

Fleckenstein is a former University of Iowa star.

COLUMBIA SWIMMERS WIN FROM CITY COLLEGE

He also scored 20 Columbia points in water polo. City college failed to take a first place in the swimming events and got seconds only in the fancy dive and 100-yard swim.

Large scandals from small talk often grow.

What's more disappointing than to go to hear an address on what is a very alluring topic and then have the speaker switch topics on you?

Yesterday I was invited to attend the meeting of the Rotary club to hear our most esteemed public defender, Charlie Stewart, talk on what appeared on the face of it to be a real snappy topic.

State's Attorney Arthur M. Brown had previously announced that his brother attorney was to talk on the all-absorbing topic of "From the Bright Lights of Hollywood to the Gambling Hells of Mexico."

Hot Tamales, what a topic; what a topic! Oh boy, wouldn't you just expect to have your hair curled to a crisp? And when Charlie was introduced, of course everybody knows Charlie but it's good form to introduce your speaker, all the good Rotarians just sat back in keen anticipation.

Now I want you folks to understand I'm not criticizing Charlie's talk in the least. It was a whale of a good talk, but Charlie really should have a good caption writer.

Well, Charlie starts off his talk with the time he left Springfield, Mass., and everybody taxs along with him through the west, the deserts, the mountains and into California.

Ah, here's where we get the lowdown on the motion picture industry, I thinks as we arrive at Hollywood. But, as far as I could find out, about the only Hollywood personage Charlie met was a scenario writer, who he hree' to get him into a studio.

And after he got into the studio he got fired out because Marilyn Miller couldn't act before an audience, that is, a tangible audience. But Charlie had the satisfaction of getting into a studio even though his stay was brief. And Charlies says he was satisfied, so that's that.

Well, of course, I was a little disappointed at not hearing more about the Hollywood bright lights, but I wasn't discouraged. Of course, we can always read about the Hollywood folks in the motion picture magazines.

Then he tells about hopping off in an airplane for Mexico, Agua Caliente, I believe they call the place. Well, thinks I, here's where we get an earful about the Mexican Monte Carlos, the dashing senoritas, the sparkling wine and the lilting song.

But nary a senorita appears, nary a tinkle of a wine glass do we hear and nary a note is warbled. And the nearest to the gambling hells of Mexico we heard about was a whippet race on which a friend of Charlie's loses a few dollars. That whippet race was between dogs and not automobiles.

But we did hear about the beautiful big trees 3,000 years old, the new process of packing oranges and a coupla Scotch jokes.

Just the same it was a corking good talk and very interesting even if the title was very misleading.

I sort of think Arthur Brown slipped over a fast one on Charlie when he announced the topic.

NEW YORK, Dec. 18—(AP)—Gene Tunney, retired heavyweight champion, will make his first public appearance in fistic circles since his return with Mrs. Tunney from a long honeymoon in Europe at the banquet to be given William F. PLAINFIELD PROS DOWN COLORED COLLEGIANS IN FAST ENCOUNTER

PLAINFIELD, Dec. 18.—The Plainfield Pros annexed another victory to their steadily increasing string when they defeated the New York Colored Collegians, 38 to 32, in a fast encounter. The Collegians proved to be a fast club but the locals proved a trifle stronger coming through when baskets were necessary to winning the game.

The Collegians were away to a good start early in the first half and took the lead holding it for the first 13 minutes of play. The Pros came from behind at this point and tied the count at 11 all. A foul by Conway put the Pros in the lead for the first time, but Wright's basket sent the visitors to the front again. From then on it was Plainfield's game. Bernot shooting a basket to put them out in front. The half ended with Plainfield leading 19 to 18.

The second half opened with both teams playing hard basketball. The visitors made a spurt about the middle of this half and came within one point of tying the score, only to have Plainfield shoot ahead again and hold the lead to the end. Brusso and Bernot were high scorers for Plainfield, while Holt led the visitors.

In the preliminary game the Buddies defeated the Manchester team 20 to 12. The summary:

CHOCOLATE BEATS PETRONE BY A WIDE MARGIN

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—(AP)—Kid Chocolate, brilliant Cuban Negro featherweight, gained the referee's decision over Dominic Petrone, of New York in a stiff ten round bout at the Coliseum. The battle, the main event of the Christmas charity card for the Fifth Avenue Boys' association, saw Chocolate meet an overwhelm the strongest opponent of his current invasion of New York rings. The Cuban won by a wide margin, but only after standing off Petrone's dangerous attacks in the early rounds.

Chocolate weighed 128¼, Petrone 129½.

During the first two rounds they fought toe to toe in a series of furious mixups, but the Cuban weathered the storm better and piled up a margin in the later rounds. Petrone was the aggressor in the first two frames and made Chocolate miss frequently.

After the third the Cuban pounded the New York Italian almost into helplessness before the end. By the seventh Petrone was partly groggy and slowing up. During the last three frames, Chocolate tried hard to put over a knockout punch, but Petrone, staggering but game, was able to stand off the Cuban's rushes.

Jack Berg, English welterweight, won on a foul over Tony Caragliano of New York tonight in the second round of their ten round semi-final. The bout was stopped early in the second round after Berg had been struck several times by low blows.

Berg had the better of the fight. Berg weighed 137 1-2; Caragliano 133 1-2.

In another ten rounder, Rene de Vos, of Belgium, outpointed Babe McGorgary of Oklahoma. De Vos weighed 165 1-2, McGorgary 169.

VACUUM BOTTLE IDEA USED FOR HOME HEAT

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. —(AP)—A vacuum bottle method of using electricity to heat houses is described in a report to the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, by A. R. Stevenson and F. H. Faust of the General Electric company.

Electric heaters are installed in a large tank which is filled with water and insulated to prevent loss of heat. The tank is designed to keep water at 250 to 300 degrees temperature for many hours if undisturbed.

Heat for the house is obtained either by turning this storage water into ordinary water heating radiators or into hot air systems by heating the air over metal fins of the tank.

When this use of the heat in the tank lowers its temperature too much, the electric heater automatically turns on. Tanks are designed to contain enough hot water for many hours, so that the electricity will turn on only during slack hours when electricity rates are lowest.

MOTORBUSES TOP RAILROAD IN NUMBER OF PASSENGERS

TORONTO, Dec. —(AP)—A report that motorouses carry many million more passengers than steam trains in the United States was made to the Society of Automotive Engineers, by Frederick C. Horner, of the General Motors corporation.

He says that motor bus passengers for the five years from 1923 to 1929 numbered 1,647,000,000 against 92,826,473 passengers on steam trains.

AMATEUR CALL HEARD ON EVERY CONTINENT

From Moscow, Soviet Russia, came word that his signals had been picked up by an operator doing research work for the Russian government.

FIND CORAL SNAKE ON CARIBBEAN ISLE

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Dec. —(AP)—The inhabitants of Corn Island, one of the remote "corners" of the world off the Caribbean coast of Nicaragua, believe there are no poisonous snakes on their island.

This belief is stated in a report of the Museum of Comparative Zoology, of Harvard university. Nevertheless, the report says, a party of Harvard zoologists found a coral snake, a deadly poisonous reptile, on the island.

"It is not uncommon," says the report, "to find these snakes, which are either subterranean in habit or nocturnal, concerning which the people living in the same region know little or nothing."

The Harvard expedition studied the birds, mammals, reptiles and amphibians of the two Corn islands.

"TWIN" CHEMISTS MAKE STAR FIND IN SCIENCE YEAR

PRINCETON, N. J., Dec. —(AP)—Two veritable babes in the woods of science, youths of 27 and 30, are co-authors of the most startling scientific discovery of 1929.

That accomplishment was the splitting of supposedly indivisible hydrogen, the simplest foundation stone of the material universe.

The discovery was credited to Dr. Karl F. Bonhoeffer when it was announced before the American Chemical society this fall. Bonhoeffer, aged 30, when visiting here recently, declared he would not talk for publication unless his pal and co-worker, Dr. Paul Harteck, 27, was mentioned equally, jointly and with whatever other scientific terms of parity are feasible.

SWISS TO REORGANIZE BROADCASTING SYSTEM

BERNE, Dec. —(AP)—The Swiss government has voted $325,000 for reorganization of the radio broadcasting system. It is planned to erect a 45,000-watt station in German Switzerland and a 16,000-watt station in French Switzerland.

A number of smaller stations, relay transmitters with power of 500 watts, will be located around the two big stations in order to provide good reception in localities which are cut off from the main station.

FIERY CRAWLING MACHINE DOES AUTOMATIC WELDING

EDGEWATER, Miss., Dec. —(AP)—A little machine shaped like a two-foot cube, with a tongue of fire registering 2,300 degrees, demonstrated automatic welding here before the American Institute of Steel Construction.

Placed on a seam between two steel plates, it crawled their length automatically, without other human aid than setting it on the crack and turning a switch. It was made by the General Electric company.

LICORICE, BOYS' DELIGHT, PUT TO WORK BY INDUSTRY

NEW YORK, Dec. —(AP)—How will you have your licorice today—in candy—as boys prefer it—or in a fire extinguisher or cardboard?

All these uses, and scores of others, are found for this root which has been known to man since earliest times, says a report of the American Chemical society by Percy A. Houseman and H. T. Lacy, of Mellon Institute.

AMERICAN FISH MERCHANTS WELCOMED BY EASY CONTINENT

In the last five years the United States government has presented 19 foreign nations with gifts of American fish and fish eggs totaling more than 3,000,000.

The U. S. bureau of fisheries reports 8,191,525 fish eggs and 40,525 young fish shipped abroad since 1922.

"North America is especially rich in fish species," says a bulletin of the National Geographic society from its headquarters in Washington, D. C. "The United States, for example, has four times as many varieties of fish as Europe, so it is understandable that other nations look to the United States for a new fish stock.

"Long before the term 'good will ambassador' was invented the United States government established the practice of sending abroad representatives that have won the friendship of fishermen on every continent. The U. S. bureau of fisheries supplies the eggs or young fish free of charge from its hatcheries; foreign governments pay the cost of transportation.

"So far as the bureau can learn the American trout, bass, white fish and salmon have won favor everywhere. The only exception is Argentina, one of whose citizens wrote a caustic letter to the effect that the American trout and bass had thrived so well that there were too many of them.

"American game fish have proved most popular. The rainbow trout of the western states now has an international reputation. The sport of the Rockies is now the sport of New Zealand, Switzerland, Germany, Italy, France and other countries.

"Japan seeks American species in order to increase the food supply of her people. In 1926 and 1927 Japan transported a total of 4,700,000 eggs of the delicious Great Lakes' whitefish across the Pacific to be introduced in Lake Biwa and Lake Chuzenji.

"Another American fish, a very small and insignificant top minnow breed, has gone abroad on a different but even more important mission. At the request of the Red Cross shipments of Gambusia were sent to Spain and Italy in 1921, to fight the malaria-bearing mosquito. Those dispatched to Italy died in transit but gambusias placed in ponds near Madrid, Spain, thrived. Spanish-American gambusias were sent to Italy the following year and introduced to the campagna around Rome.

"Malaria has been a blight on the campagna for centuries. Here the Anopheles mosquito has killed Italians by hundreds and wiped out prosperous towns. Gambusias placed in the Lago di Porto soon cleared the swarming waters of the multitudes of mosquito larva.

"From Spain and Italy the gambusia has gone on to conquer new marshes in Germany, Russia, Jugoslavia, Syria and Palestine.

"Certain American communities take pleasure in the knowledge that they have sent gifts in the name of the United States which will be appreciated by whole nations as long as rivers run. Orangeburg, S. C., collects and sends the gambusia crusaders. Bozeman, Montana, shipped 50,000 rainbow trout eggs to Honolulu in 1925, while Meadow Creek, Montana, bestowed 50,000 similar eggs on grateful Netherlands.

"Forty thousand rainbow trout eggs collected by the hatchery at White Sulphur Springs, West Virginia, were sent to the German government bureau of fisheries which distributed them to Prussia, Westphalia, Oldenburg, Thuringia, Bavaria, Wurthemburg, Baden and Austria.

"Salmon, trout, whitefish and other varieties, the eggs of which take a long time to hatch, can be transported overseas in the egg. The usual practice is to wait until the eggs are 'eyed out,' that is, the formation of the eyes can be discerned. But with pond fish; bass, crappies, rock bass, and top minnows, species that hatch in a few days, the young fish must be shipped in buckets or tanks.

"The U. S. bureau of fisheries has studied and refined the methods of shipping live fish until it can now carry them long distances and through tropic waters with small loss. Two bureau men went as 'nursemaids' to a shipment of young bass and crappies destined for Gatun lake in the Canal Zone. They regularly aerated the tanks with fine streams of air from the ship's air compressor, and by the time the vessel reached Panama they had used four tons of ice to keep the bass and crappies cool. Only 38 out of 3,250 young fish died.

"The development of air transportation, particularly the prospective Zeppelin trans-ocean service, opens up new possibilities in the transplantation of fish. Young fish were carried by air for the first time in 1928 when 20 cans were brought by plane from Northville, Michigan, to Dayton, Ohio, without loss. The bureau has a plan on foot to carry eggs of the fresh water smelt of Maine lakes to the west by air. This venture has been thwarted two years in succession through the failure to locate the eggs at the proper time.

"Fish transplantation has not been all one way. The German brown trout and its cousin, the Loch Leven trout, are both importations which have been very welcome in the United States. Many streams in New Jersey, which are no longer habitable by brook trout, now harbor the German brown trout.

"German carp were introduced in the United States by the fish commission, in 1877, and although the newcomers were welcome at first they later stirred up a storm of protest. Carp now constitute a very important American fishery."

NO HARDENED CRIMINALS OPERATING IN NEW YORK

NEW YORK, Dec. 18—(AP)—Reviewing the first year of his administration of the New York police department, which was completed today, Commissioner Grover A. Whalen declared there are no hardened criminals operating in the city now.

"Every business must take stock at regular intervals," he said. "Our stock in trade is the criminal element. Through bringing the gangsters and other known criminals into headquarters we eliminated the criminal from New York. There are no hardened criminals operating New York today.

"The crime we have now is of spontaneous origin and is done chiefly by the youth of 17 and 18 years of age."

In the list of what he considers the major accomplishments of his administration he placed foremost the new bureau of crime prevention, which is to begin operation January 1. This bureau is designed to study causes and suggest remedies for crime.

Second, he placed the reorganization of the department, with elimination of super-authority and restoration of responsibility to precinct captains.

Mr. Whalen was appointed police commissioner to succeed the late Joseph A. Warren, who resigned under severe criticism of the department for the handling of the Arnold A. Rothstein murder case.

The new commissioner immediately effected a complete shake-up removing several high officials from both the uniformed and detective branches of the service. This was followed by a series of raids. By a revived "strong-arm" squad, intended to close speakeasies, billiard rooms and other places known to police as gathering places for criminal characters.

A Richmond (Va.) sportsman returned from abroad and told of his visit to a clay pigeon shoot. Arriving at the trap he was surprised to see a great net spread above the ground at the far end of the field. Around the net stood a ring of boys. The mystery was solved with the first few shots. Nearly all the clay pigeons that the marksmen missed fell into the net unbroken. Those that missed the net were "caught on the wing" by the boys and brought back to the traps to be shot over again. The shoot was in Scotland.

DR. CHARLES H. LAMB RENAMED HUMANE AGENT FOR THREE YEARS

Dr. Charles H. Lamb, of Norwich Town, has just received his renewal commission for three years, Dec. 1, 1929, to Dec. 1, 1932, to act as an agent for the Connecticut Humane society. Dr. Lamb has served this society 40 years this month, having been appointed Dec. 30, 1889. His appointment was under the first president, the late Rodney Dennis, and during his long career as an agent has served under all other presidents. Dr. Lamb is the only one who can claim 40 years of continuous service in this state.

When a younger man he lived in Groton for 20 years, where he was most active in the humane work. Since locating in Norwich, nearly 22 years ago, Dr. Lamb's experiences have been far and wide, as he was appointed to act as agent for the limits of Connecticut. During the early days when horses were more prevalent the late Dwight W. Thrall, of Hartford, was the general agent, and a lasting friendship was cultivated between Mr. Thrall and Dr. Lamb as they traveled about the state together, covering a vast territory, investigating cases of various kinds. They had many interesting adventures and their experiences in those days were plentiful, as records reveal. At that time, the dread disease glanders, was causing much anxiety throughout the state and was looked after by the Humane society. In the 90's, Dr. Lamb destroyed many glandered horses and all other agents and veterinarians were kept busy in stamping out that contagious disease.

At one time during a period of one month, Dr. Lamb had in his possession 40 animals that he had taken from the owners and placed in comfortable quarters until such time, according to the limits of the society's orders, when if the owners had not claimed them, said animals were sold at auction to the highest bidder. Dr. Lamb has conducted a number of auction sales in disposing of stock in this way. The society then was only in its infancy, but was doing a wonderful work as far as finances would permit. The late Samuel A. Gardner, of New Haven, was also a general agent for a number of years and displayed the same spirit of kindness and loyalty to what was entrusted to him, as did Agent Thrall and it was always a pleasure to be associated with these two worthy gentlemen, although Agent Thrall covered a greater period of time. Dr. Lamb likewise has had pleasant associations with the general managers, especially that of the late H. Clay Preston, during his years of faithful service with the society until death claimed him two years ago this month. Manager Preston was greatly interested in the cause of humanity among neglected people and children, as well as animals. In this, Dr. Lamb has seen the society develop immensely in the past 40 years and today the Connecticut Humane society is a wonderful organization, doing a great work in eliminating cruelty. The present president, Charles A. Goodwin, is the only official Dr. Lamb recalls as being connected with the society at the time he received his commission. President Goodwin was then a member of the board of directors.

The certificate referred to as being received recently is of light green tint with black lettering. In the left hand corner is the seal of the Humane society in gold. The signatures are Charles A. Goodwin, president; Mrs. W. B. Williams, secretary.

The plaintiff's right leg was broken, several ribs fractured, and a number of other injuries sustained.

FORTY-TWO NAVAL OFFICERS GRADUATED AT SUB BASE

Having completed an intensive six months' course of instruction at the officer's submarine school at the submarine base, 42 naval officers were graduated Wednesday at the base. Before receiving the parchments the graduate class listened to an inspiring address by Read Admiral Frank B. Upham, commander of the navy control force. In his address Admiral Upham emphasized the high lights of the class's study of command. He urged the class to profit by the example of Nelson, when in reporting on an important British victory he frankly showed his loyalty to his men by naming Lieutenant Andrews as having been responsible to a large extent for the victory. He cited this incident as an example of how one great naval officer retained the most devoted loyalty of his subordinates by being loyal to them.

He quoted John Paul Jones to point out the need of every navy officer keeping constantly before him that to be well obeyed he must be perfectly esteemed. This, he said, is even more tru aboard submarines, where the officers and men are of necessity in closer contact than is the case on other types of vessels.

He pointed out that delegation of command is a necessity; that subordinates should be trained to accept responsibility for departing from the mode of existing orders as originally received; impressing on them, however, that such departure must be justified by the circumstances in each case.

Officers must learn to think, and, subject to general instructions and accepted principles, to act for themselves, he said.

The graduation exercises were held in the Submarine Base theatre, which was beautifully decorated with evergreen for the occasion. A large delegation of relatives and friends were present and warmly applauded Admiral Upham and each of the officers as they were handed their respective diplomas.

Music was furnished by the control force band, which rendered several selections before the exercises opened. The invocation was delivered by Chaplain Rev. L. Lewis.

Seated on the platform besides Rear Admiral Upham were Lieut. Gov. Ernest E. Rogers of New London, who was a special guest at the exercises; Capt. Wilson Brown, commander of the submarine base, and Lieut. Comdr. W. E. Doyle, who as head of the submarine school is largely responsible for its remarkable success.

Immediately after the exercises practically all of the graduates left for their homes in various parts of the country to enjoy a two weeks' leave of absence before reporting to the various submarine divisions to which they have been assigned.

Graduates, together with the submarine stations to which they will be sent for duty, are as follows:

Battle fleet, west coast—Lieut. Henry C. Bruton, Lieut. Donald McGregor, Lieut. Edwin R. Swinburne, Ensign Tyrrel D. Jacobs, Ensign Elliott Olsen, Ensign Philip H. Ross.

NORWICH TOWN

GOSHEN ENDEAVORERS JOIN IN FIRST CH. MEETING

The Junior C. E. society of the First Congregational church met in the chapel Monday afternoon at the close of school. A number of Christmas songs were sung, after which Miss Jessie E. Hyde, in the costume of India, told the story, "How the Child of the Star Found Phapiah."

Tuesday afternoon in the chapel the Intermediate C. E. society held a Christmas party. The members had as guests several young people from the C. E. society of Goshen Congregational church, 14 in all, including the pastor, Rev. Howard Bushnell. At 5:30, supper of salmon loaf, escalloped potato, jelly, rolls, cake and cocoa was served. Ruth Avery, president of the society, welcomed the visitors and called upon Rev. Gurdon F. Bailey to say grace. The room was prettily decorated with festoons of silver and red tinsel. A Christmas basket and a small Christmas tree were arranged on the supper tables. A Christmas service followed in charge of Beatrice Ricciti, chairman of the prayer meeting committee. A number of Christmas songs were given, Miss Louise P. Bailey playing the piano accompaniments. "We Three Kings of Orient Are" was sung by Stephen Gorski, Raymond and Robert Barber, with Betty Browning at the piano. Stephen Gorski also sang another number. During a brief discussion, several present mentioned gifts that children could give to Jesus Christ. Rev. Mr. Bushnell spoke on "What It Means to Give Ourselves to Christ," while Rev. Mr. Bailey spoke on "What the Young People Have Now, That They Didn't Have Before Christ Came." The Mizpah benediction closed the exercises. A social hour of games followed, in charge of Olive Beebe, chairman of the social committee. Doris Seagraves, chairman of the lookout committee, was the other member of the general committee in charge, which with Miss Hyde, was assisted by Mrs. Ernest Washington, Miss Sadie Dawson and Miss Rose Durr. There was a good collection of Christmas articles donated by interested members and friends. These are to be distributed in Norwich and vicinity among less fortunate children.

NEW ORDER ISSUED ON DRIVERS' EXAMINATIONS

By instructions issued by Robert T. Hurley, commissioner of state police, in the future applicants for motor vehicle operators' licenses will be given examinations only at the station nearest their places of residence. The state police have been ordered to refuse to examine prospective drivers from any section of the state other than the vicinity in which the examining station is located.

The new order is for the purpose of making drivers take examinations in the sections where they will do most of their driving. Experience shows, Commissioner Hurley says, applicants go to sparsely settled communities to be examined because of fear that they will be unable to pass if subjected to the traffic conditions of their own community.

The commissioner says:

"This privilege of going to another section for examination should not be allowed. Persons living in congested areas do at least 75 per cent of their driving in that area. They should be qualified to operate in that vicinity. When a person goes to a sparsely settled community and is given an examination and passes, it is fair to assume that upon his return to the congested area he would be a dangerous person to operate a motor vehicle in that vicinity."

The driver who is examined and passed in a sparsely settled district and yet is authorized to drive in the heavy traffic of cities, has also been considered, Commissioner Hurley says that such a driver will do about 75 per cent of his driving in his own section and, usually, will be aware of his own deficiencies and take care when in city traffic. Also, that he is not likely, nor will it be necessary, for him, to drive in heavy traffic until he has had considerable experience and practice under other conditions.

In the order to the examiners practically every feature of examination procedure is considered. The application card must be properly filled out and signed in the presence of the examiner. A test is arranged to determine whether the applicant is illiterate. There is an eye test and practical road test in which the applicant must demonstrate his ability to properly drive, shift gears, turn, back, park and give correct hand signals.

Another test is the applicant's knowledge of the motor vehicle laws. Many questions have been arranged for the convenience of the examiner, such as "What is the law relative to passing a car with traffic coming towards you?" and "Who has the right of way at intersecting streets?"

Attention is called in the order to a cooperative regulation which allows the examiner to send a rejected applicant to the inspection section of the motor vehicle department for further and more detailed examination. This particularly applies in the cases of those rejected because of illiteracy or because of some physical disability.

TRAFFIC DEMORALIZED BY SNOW IN THE MIDDLE WEST

Snowfall of 14 Inches Has Been Piled High in Drifts—Trains, Street Cars and Buses Retain No Semblance of Schedules—Highways Are Dotted With Motorists Whose Cars Are Snowbound—Snowfall Lasted 36 Hours—Cold and Wind Continues—Rain and Sleet Impaired New England Traffic and Communciation Systems.

CHICAGO, Dec. 19—(AP)—The middle west was snowbound by the worst blizzard since 1918, the government weather bureau here reporting it measured more than 14 inches. A driving wind piled it high in drifts, demoralizing all transportation and definitely halting no small amount of it.

Trains crept along hidden tracks, running two to 12 hours late, street cars, if running at all, had no semblance of a schedule. Bus companies made little effort to operate those of their buses not already snow bound along highways dotted with motorists whose cars were deep in drifts.

Air traffic virtually was at a standstill.

Lake Michigan lashed violently along the shore lines, and tore loose a 4,500 ton steamer from its mooring in Chicago. The vessel, measuring 400 feet, was whipped about, crashing against other boats, pilings, and wharves for some hours, before coast guardsmen recaptured it.

While the 36 hour snow fall has ended, excepting for a few flurries, the cold and wind have not subsided. More than a score of deaths over the midwest area have been attributed indirectly to the storm. Several persons were frozen to death. Heart attacks induced by the blizzard and many accidents caused by the blinding snow and slippery streets took other lives.

Many of the smaller towns in rural districts were completely snowbound, cut off from transportation and in some instances even communication.

Thousands of idle men were given work in clearing away the snow. In Chicago alone, the city and transportation companies employed nearly 10,000 extra shovelers.

SHIP CAUGHT IN ICE JAM; THIRTY PERSONS SAVED

SANDUSKY, Ohio, Dec. 19.—(AP)—Walking precariously through the dust and snowfall for nearly a mile over cracking ice, 30 persons, including 8 women and 2 babies, were saved here tonight after the passenger vessel, the Tourist, was caught in an ice jam just outside Sandusky bay.

They were picked up by the passenger boat Messenger, which stood by the Tourist, a 70-foot oil burner owned by the captain, Frank Hamilton of Sandusky, had put out for Kelley's Island from Sandusky with a cargo of steel and the passengers, who had been doing their Christmas shopping, in Sandusky, and were returning home.

At 2 p. m., the Tourist, reputed to be one of the best ice breakers in this region, was caught in the ice which had been blown in by a heavy northeasterly wind. The ice carried it for several hundred yards from the dock and the vessel jammed.

It was a hour-hour battle in which the ice won, and in the battle it crashed up the sides of the boat and arose as high as the pilothouse, according to passengers.

When Captain Hamilton observed that he could not wrench the vessel free, he ordered the passengers off, according to Charles Martin, one of them. The ice was rough and chopped and it was difficult for the passengers to retain a footing.

Mrs. Martin, with her husband, wrecked their ten weeks old baby, Elaine, to the Messenger. The other infant, 7 months old, belonged to Mr. and Mrs. Walter Elfers.

DISCOMFITURE CAUSED BY STORM IN NEW ENGLAND

BOSTON, Dec. 19.—(AP)—New England traffic and communication systems today were in a seriously impaired condition, the result of a rain and sleet storm which swept over this section during the past 24 hours. Weather bureau predictions held but little hope for an overnight improvement in conditions.

Travel was hazardous and many accidents were reported. The most serious accident occurred near the Weirs, N. H., on the Boston and Maine railroad. A passenger train was struck by a falling sleet laden tree and windows were shattered. Ten passengers were cut and bruised and they were taken to Laconia hospital for treatment.

New Hampshire and Maine were hardest hit with slightly less serious conditions existing in Massachusetts and Vermont. Southern New England escaped without much damage or traffic delay.

Wires, telephone and telegraph, burdened with sleet, were down throughout the affected area and reports of actual conditions were transmitted slowly. Trolley lines and power companies were confronted with similar wire conditions. In many instances lack of power caused hardships and inconveniences in homes. Some industrial plants were forced to suspend operations as a consequence of the power situation. Fire alarm systems were also affected.

Railroad trains were moving hours behind schedule on some lines and this combined with the heavy traffic resulting from the movements of Christmas shopping crowds and students homeward bound for the holidays created a situation difficult to cope with.

Fallen trees and limbs cluttered highways made automobile travel difficult and dangerous. Schools were closed for the day in some communities.

REPAIRING DAMAGE BY STORM IN NEW YORK STATE

ALBANY, N. Y., Dec. 20—(AP)—Eastern and northern New York today shook itself free of tons of ice which had formed in the wake of nearly 24 hours of rain and began to repair the damage wrought in scores of cities and villages.

Telephone repair crews began restringing miles of wiring and replacing at least 315 fallen poles.

Glens Falls without light or power for more than 36 hours and with only the weakest contact with the outside world, was engaged in digging itself out from under debris piled high in the city streets. Volunteers, armed with axes, aided in the work of removing the fallen trees and limbs from the more important thoroughfares.

The business section obtained electricity today but scores of men were unable to restore lights to the residential districts. Approximately 90 per cent of the city's telephones were out of order.

The village of South Glens Falls obtained water today after having been obliged for nearly 24 hours to depend on wells and auxiliary supplies because of lack of electric power to operate the water pumps.

Saratoga Springs, less deeply buried beneath the ice, was returning to normal. Lights had been restored and communications of a sort re-established.

The village of Attica in Wyoming county, late today had been without lights and practically isolated for more than 24 hours.

Telephone officials reported that the communications were broken as far west as Buffalo to Plattsburgh.

ASKS AID FOR 25 PERSONS MAROONED BY SNOWDRIFTS

INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 19.—(AP)—United States Senator Thomas Connally of Texas, today asked the office of Governor Harry G. Leslie to aid a party of 25 persons who he said were marooned by snowdrifts on United States highway number 30 near Deep River.

The senator told Lewis C. Chasey, secretary to the governor, in a telephone call, that the party had been marooned for 36 hours in a farm house about half way between Valparaiso and Crown Point, and that the supply of food was running low.

The state highway commission told Chasey that every effort would be made to get relief to the party.

SUNSHINE FOR FIRST TIME IN TEN DAYS IN THE S. W.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Dec. 19.—(AP)—Old Sol, after an absence of ten days, re-appeared in the Rocky mountain region and the southwest today to herald to the shivering populace the end of a protracted period of fog, rain, sleet, snow and blizzards unparalleled for this time of the year.

Sub-zero temperatures still prevailed tonight except in the extreme south, but warmer weather was forecast by tomorrow.

The intense cold, coupled with drifted snow and slippery roads, had seriously interfered with highway transportation, trains were running late, wire communication was prostrated in some localities and two deaths had been blamed on the storm.

Although the coldest weather of the winter brought suffering today, there was cheer in the smiling rays of the sun which for more than a week had been unable to pierce the murky heavens. The mercury touched 32 degrees below zero in Montana, and sub-zero readings were general in Wyoming, Colorado, Kansas, Missouri and portions of Oklahoma.

Snow drifted as high as four feet in southeastern Missouri and four to six inches blanketed the entire state, virtually tieing up highway traffic.

The Rio Grande valley of Texas passed through a freezing night without damage to truck gardens and citrus crops but some apprehension was felt with a heavy frost predicted for tonight again.

POPE URGES RETREATS FOR ROMAN CATHOLIC LAITY

VATICAN CITY, Dec. 19.—(AP)—Pope Pius in an encyclical made public today urged the laity of the Roman Catholic church to make frequent retreats for silence, contemplation and prayer, and to participate more generally in church activities.

The pope, who recently emerged from a week's retreat in connection with the jubilee of his priesthood, said that the spiritual exercises of retreat constituted "a remarkable school in which the mind learns to reflect, the will strengthens itself and the passions are dominated. Activity receives a direction, rule and efficacious impulse, and the whole soul rises to its natal nobility and grandeur."

He said that retreats might last for several days or even entire months but should not be too restricted. He preferred that they be carried out in private because complete isolation permitted the soul to reflect upon itself and upon God.

The pontiff condemned "that continual and feverish pursuit of externals, that immoderate appetite for riches and pleasures, which little by little weaken in the soul all the noblest ideals.

"The greatest malady of the modern age, the principal source of the evils we all deplore, is the lack of reflection."

ANOTHER RESULT OF THE COLLAPSE OF SECURITIES

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—(AP)—A financial snarl resulting from the recent collapse of the securities markets ended in a receivership today for the International Combustion Engineering Corp., one of the world's leading enterprises in the field of heating and power appliances.

The receivership resulted from a friendly suit in equity brought by the Bethlehem Steel Corp. and uncontested by the International Combustion management. The complaint alleges that the company is unable to meet obligations of about $250,000, and sets forth that it holds stocks of subsidiary companies of an aggregate value of $43,000,000.

The company has been handicapped by a comparatively small working capital and large expenditures for expansion and experimental research work. It had planned to raise additional funds through the flotation of a new issue of securities, but found banking organizations unwilling to undertake the underwriting with the depressed market for new securities.

The receivers, appointed by Judge Coxe in United States district court, are Nathaniel A. Elsberg and Wilford A. Wood. Mr. Wood is president of the company, having recently succeeded George E. Learnard, resigned.

50 Ships Fog-Bound In New York Harbor

Clyde Liner Algonquin, With Rammed the Port Victoria, Remains Anchored in Ambrose Channel.

NEW YORK, Dec. 19—(AP)—Shipping was at a standstill in the New York harbor today as the heavy curtain of fog, which was blamed for the collision of two ships in the lower bay yesterday, continued to hold the coastline in its grip.

Fifty vessels were fog-bound, unable to either leave or enter the harbor.

The Clyde liner Algonquin, which rammed and sank the Bermuda bound Port Victoria without loss of life late yesterday, still was anchored near Ambrose lightship, unable to penetrate the dense mist back to her pier. The Algonquin's commander reported to his offices here that his passengers were comfortable and that he would not venture up the harbor until the weather cleared.

Only two vessels left the bay today, the Dominion liner Madison with 27 passengers bound for Norfolk, and the pilot boat New York, returning to her position at the harbor entrance after aiding in the rescue of the Fort Victoria's passengers and crew. No ships have been reported arriving at the channel entrance in the last 24 hours.

Eleven outbound ships, including two trans-Atlantic liners, remained at their piers. The Hellig Olav was scheduled to leave at 11 a. m. for Copenhagen with 104 passengers but it still was at its pier tonight.

More than 20 in-bound passenger ships anchored outside of the harbor, including the trans-Atlantic liners Arcadian, Araguaya, Albertic, Lancastria, Franconia, Lithuania, Minnewaska and American Shipper. The others were coastwise vessels and steamers engaged in the West Indies trade. Besides there were more than 30 freighters fog-bound.

As a safeguard to navigation a boat of the United States lighthouse service and a salvage tug plied buoys around the spot where the Fort Victoria went down. The wreck is in about 60 feet of water and if found too expensive to raise, her hull will be blown up to clear the obstruction from the channel.

Fourteen of the 261 sacks of mail on board the Fort Victoria floated to the surface today.

Officials of the Furness-Bermuda line, owners of the Fort Victoria, announced that 45 of the passengers taken from the sinking ship had taken passage on the Fort St. George, scheduled to sail tonight for Bermuda. The others will either sail Saturday or have their passage money returned.

Three investigations into the collision between the Fort Victoria and the Algonquin are under way.

JUNKMAN BUYS LAST N. Y. HORSE-DRAWN FIRE STEAMER

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—(AP)—The last of the old horse-drawn steamers that were once the glory of the New York fire department was sold at auction today—to a junkman for $105.

Fifteen years ago when it went thundering down the street on its first trip, drawn by three powerful, plunging horses, it was worth between $7,000 and $8,000.

Forlorn and dejected, it stood today in the rain outside the fire department repair shop, over on the west side in the warehouse district—its once highly polished boiler covered with rust, its smoke stack, out of which used to roll awesome clouds of smoke and sparks, cold and black, its thick rubber tires rotting away—while the junkmen stood about and figured out how much the old metal in it was worth.

Fire chiefs from nearby villages had been invited to the auction of this and other out-of-date equipment representing an original investment of many thousands of dollars.

But none came. For fire fighting equipment apparently is one thing that every community, from the hamlet to the world's largest city, wants to keep up-to-date.

British Labor Party Saved From Defeat

House of Commons Defeated a Conservative Amendment, 281-273, Rejecting Coal Mines Bill.

LONDON, Dec. 19—(AP)—Ramsay MacDonald's labor party cabinet was saved from possible resignation tonight when the house of commons defeated a conservative amendment rejecting the coal mines bill, by the narrow margin of eight votes.

The vote was 281 against 273 in favor of giving the bill its second reading.

The division of the house climaxed the first serious crisis that has confronted the administration. Triumph of the conservative amendmentd would have defeated the measure, which was one of the chief projects of the government. The bill was framed to meet campaign promises.

The narrow margin of victory was due to a lessening of government support which has hitherto come from the benches of the liberals under the leadership of David Lloyd George. The liberals themselves had prepared a dissenting amendment but it took exception to only a few of the principal features of the bill and the conservatives maneuvered themselves into the front of the battle by offering their comprehensive rejection amendment.

In the debate that preceded the vote Lloyd George denounced the bill as vicious and as likely to raise the price of coal to the consumers. But he indicated that his party would not oppose a second reading if MacDonald would assure them that opportunity would be given to deal with unsatisfactory aspects of the measure while the bill still was in the committee stage.

In closing the debate the prime minister agreed to consider the liberal objections in committee. Despite this concession Mr. Lloyd George and a number of other liberal leaders voted against the cabinet in the division.

Loud cheers came from the labor benches when the result was certain but these were drowned by cries "resign" when the official figures disclosed the slim margin of government victory.

PLANS TO STRENGTHEN FEDERAL PRISON SYSTEM

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—(AP)—Justice department plans for strengthening federal prison system and construction of additional penitentiaries were discussed before the house judiciary committee today by Attorney-General Mitchell.

The attorney-general said the system was "grossly inadequate and the situation brought about by overcrowding and idleness of inmates is desperate."

The program calls for an outlay of about $7,000,000. It would provide for construction of a penitentiary in one of the northeastern states for a confinement of long-term male prisoners, and for an industrial reformatory for males west of the Mississippi river and a hospital for defective delinquents.

The capacity of all federal prisons was 6,778, Mr. Mitchell said, while 11,387 prisoners actually were housed. Nearly 10,000 federal prisoners are in state institutions, he added.

She will be allowed to spend Christmas with her family, the court deferring the imprisonment until Dec. 27.

When prohibition agents raided her home last October they confiscated 114 pints of beer and a gallon of whiskey.

In imposing sentence Judge Thompson said he believed the woman's husband was the real offender, and was "hiding behind his wife's skirts," but since she assumed the blame, she could be punished.

COMMERCE CHAMBER HEADS ARRAIGNED IN THE HOUSE

Representative Garber Characterized President Butterworth and Chairman Barnes as "Little Men Rattling Around in Big Places"—Bitter Attack Was Made For Their Attitude Toward the Farm Board—Appropriations Bill For the Agricultural Departmernt Was Under Discussion.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19—(AP)—"Little men rattling around in big places" was how Representative Garber, republican, Oklahoma, characterized the two highest officers of the chamber of commerce of the United States in the house today during an arraignment of their attitude toward the farm board.

The names of William D. Butterworth, president of the chamber, and Julius Barnes, chairman of its board, were mentioned as members of both parties that upheld the farm board as against the national business organization. The appropriations bill for the agricultural department was the vehible for the bitter attack.

Chairman Dickinson, of the subcommittee in charge of the bill, set it off with a plea that the farm board be allowed to "show what it can do."

Representative Garber maintained that Barnes' recent testimony before the senate lobby committee about the farm board signified an attempt to interfere with the law establishing the board.

From the democratic section, Representative Jones of Texas said that most of the leading newspapers of this country had interpreted Barnes' statements as indicating that local cooperatives were to be charged six per cent interest on loans from central marketing organizations, while the latter would obtain the money from the board at three and one half per cent.

Garber called attention to a resolution recently adopted by the directors of the chamber of commerce, which said the chamber favored cooperative marketing only so far as it did not discriminate against other business enterprises." He contended that the chamber "will favor cooperative marketing only so long as it does not disturb gambling in farm products on the boards of trade."

He quoted a letter from William D. Butterworth, president of the chamber, in transmitting the resolution to the farm board, as urging that "the program of cooperative marketing be undertaken slowly and with caution" and said the "objections and precautionary admonitions" of Barnes and Butterworth should have been addressed to congress, instead of the farm board.

After citing that the chamber last year went on record as favoring cooperative marketing, Garber demanded "from what source did Butterworth obtain his authority to admonish the farm board to 'proceed slowly and with caution?'"

"This misuse of power by the president of the chamber and the chairman of its board of directors to stir up opposition to the farm program and the farm board thereby further arraying the east against the west and south," the Oklahoman shouted, "grossly misrepresents the attitude of the business men of this country."

"It should be immediately denounced as unrepresentative of the attitude of the east by representatives of that section. To say the least, it is a short-sighted and stupid policy, sectional in character and so selfish and unworthy in its purpose as to merit the disapproval of the citizenship of the entire country."

Recalling that the chamber in dealing with "recent industrial events" had recommended a cooperative policy in industry, Garber said Barnes and Butterworth had approved such a policy.

"What does this episodical news reel disclose?" he demanded. "Little men rattling around in big places. A bunch of swaggering bullies making a noise without sufficient information to discriminate between the ministerial duties of the farm board and the mandates of the law as enacted by congress. Their little resolutions and their little admonitions were unauthorised and manufactured for the purpose of deception."

Representative Jones said one feature of the act creating the farm board was the cheap rate of interest which was set forth as the lowest rate at which the government could borrow money. If this advantage were removed and the central marketing agencies were allowed to pyramid the interest on government loans, he maintained that most of the benefits intended by the act would disappear.

FARM BOARD HAS NOT ALTERED ITS POLICIES

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19—(AP)—Chairman Legge said today that the farm board had not altered its policies as a result of the conference held by him with Julius Barnes and three other grain traders and that he did not think Barnes intended to convey such an impression in his recent testimony before the senate lobby committee.

In a formal statement making public letters written to Chairman Caraway, of the lobby committee, and William M. Butterworth, president of the chamber of commerce of the United States, Legge added that the board had not agreed at any time to submit its policies to the grain trade before taking action as was indicated by Barnes to the senate committee.

The letter to Butterworth was in reply to one written by the chamber head objecting to the farm board's co-operative program if it was to be extensive enough to "discriminate against other business enterprise." Legge informed Butterworth that he had "rather missed what we believe to be the principal object of the agricultural marketing act."

RUSSIANS CONTINUE TO INVADE CHINESE TERRITORY

SHANGHAI, Dec. 19.—(AP)—China's nationalist government charged tonight that Russia was continuing military attacks upon the Manchurian border and invasion of Chinese territory, notwithstanding that preliminary Russo-Chinese negotiations had begun at Khabarovsk for settlement of the Chinese Eastern railway controversy.

The Chinese already have yielded to one of the demands of the soviet government and have appointed Russians to the posts of manager and assistant manager of the railway which crosses Manchuria.

Russia is charged with inciting Mongolian Reds to occupy the western extremity of the railway of which the Russians have retained possession since they invaded northwestern Manchuria Nov. 20 and expelled Chinese troops.

BANDITS KILLED PARTNER WHO DOUBLE-CROSSES THEM

ELIZABETH, N. J., Dec. 19.—(AP)—A Brooklyn youth today confessed that he and his partner had killed a double-crossing accomplice at the end of an eight-day tour of banditry.

In the confession, Harold L. George said he shot and killed Frank Warren. The two, with Bernard Toner, were pictured as holding up 15 stores in New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Maryland for $4,500. George is 21 years old and Toner 19. They gave Brooklyn addresses as their homes and said Warren had lived there also.

In a Paterson, N. J., hotel where the little band maintained its last headquarters, the police learned the only apparent pleasure the three had was in the wearing of pajamas of pink and lavender of fine texture. Numerous suits of the garments were found in their two rooms, along with nine revolvers and pistols and $200 in dimes, nickels and pennies.

The confession related a long list of robberies, including a drug store in Queens, N. Y., five years ago in which the proceeds were $240. Four men participated in the crime.

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Dec. 19.—The civil action of Mrs. Jennie Lilly Farnum of Worcester, Mass., formerly of this city, versus Edward A. Winter, local hotel man, in which damages of $15,000 are sought, will reach the jury Friday morning, all testimony in the case having been heard during today's session of the Windham county superior court. Late this afternoon opening arguments were made by Attorney William A. King, who with Attorney Earl C. Richards of Worcester, represents the plaintiff, and by John B. Harvey, who is associated with his father, Attorney Samuel B. Harvey, for the defense.

The plaintiff contends that the defendant used undue influence wrongfully in obtaining from the late George L. Wheeler, of whose will Mrs. Farnum was legatee, a "gift" of 17 shares of preferred capital stock of the Union Pacific railroad company worth about $1,394, and 65 shares of capital stock of the American Telegraph & Telephone company, worth $13,765. The transfer of this stock was made in February, 1928, at which time the plaintiff alleges, Mr. Wheeler was not in sound mind. He was 81 years of age at the time and he died May 4, 1928, and it is alleged, he was easily influenced by the defendant for some time prior to his demise.

Mrs. Farnum was named administratrix of the will of Mr. Wheeler and under this document she was the principal and only legatee. The complaint demands the recovery of the stock shares, the defendant having refused to deliver these shares into the estate.

Dr. Edward J. Ottenheimer of this city, who attended Mr. Wheeler from Sept. 14, 1926, to the time of his death, was the first plaintiff witness. He said that Mr. Wheeler's mental condition was far from normal when he first saw the man. He termed Mr. Wheeler's mental state as one of "mental confusion" which grew steadily worse, and he believed the deceased was not capable of transacting business of importance. He stated that Mr. Wheeler was distinctly irrational for two or three weeks prior to his death and that his memory was very poor. He said that on his first visits to Mr. Wheeler at his rooms in the Hotel Hooker he was paid by Mr. Wheeler but that later this was done by Mr. Winter, then proprietor, or by the clerk at the desk.

Mrs. Elizabeth Flynn Duryea, former secretary for Dr. Ottenheimer and the late Dr. Owen O'Neill, told of Mr. Wheeler's visits to the office for treatment. She described Mr. Wheeler's condition as a mental blur and stated that the man was unable to carry on a connected conversation.

Albert W. French, office manager of the American Thread Co., and an intimate friend of Mr. Wheeler, testified to a change in the mental condition of the deceased which he noted after the death of Mrs. Wheeler. Mr. Wheeler, who had been employed by the company for many years, was retired on a pension. He began work at the plant in 1880.

George W. Hickey, mill service department manager at the thread plant, said that he also noted a change in Mr. Wheeler's mental condition after the death of his wife. He believed the man suffered from lapse of memory.

Mrs. Myra Comins, also employed at the thread plant, said that in the summer of 1927 she began to detect a change in Mr. Wheeler's mental state and that he failed to recognize her, although he had known her for years.

George Syphers, thread company chauffeur, gave similar testimony. He said that when he went to the Hotel Hooker to give Mr. Wheeler his pension check the latter failed to recognize him. On another occasion he stopped at the hotel to inquire if Mr. Wheeler cared to take an automobile ride to Coventry. Mr. Wheeler replied that he did not care to go as Mr. Winter possibly would not like him to go.

Mrs. Jennie L. Farnum, the plaintiff, also told of changes in Mr. Wheeler's condition. She testified that before her marriage she was considered almost a member of the Wheeler family. Mr. Wheeler made a will in 1906 and gave the document to Mrs. Farnum. She was made the sole legatee under the terms of the will and the estate inventoried at about $8,000. John A. Farnum, husband of the plaintiff, corroborated this testimony. Edward A. Winter, the defendant, said that he had known Mr. Wheeler since 1908. The latter gave him the stock in question in October, 1927, and it originally came from the settlement of Mrs. Wheeler's estate, Mrs. Wheeler having died on Thanksgiving eve in 1926. When presented to him the stock was contained in an envelope. E. H. Keach of Danielson, close friend of Mr. Winter, witnessed the transfer of the papers. Mr. Winter said that Mr. Wheeler's mental condition was sound at the time. He said the same for the man's physical condition, stating that despite his advanced age, he only suffered from near-sightedness.

Edward H. Keach, postmaster at Danielson, testified to endorsing the transfer papers of the stocks given to Mr. Winter by Mr. Wheeler. He said that he found Mr. Wheeler a man of sound and strong mind.

Otto E. Robinson, formerly judge of the Windham-Scotland probate district, said that he acted in the settlement of the estate of Mrs. Jennie Wheeler. He noted no peculiarities in the condition of Mr. Wheeler at that time. J. O. Bacon, retired railroad conductor, said that he knew the deceased and considered him of good mental state.

Paul Locrasto, employed at the Hotel Hooker, testified that he possessed a contract whereby Mr. Wheeler was to pay him $25 weekly for services in giving the man every attention and performing various duties for him. Locrasto has a counter-claim pending in which damages of $1,800 on this contract are sought. He said that Mr. Wheeler's mind was sound and that his memory was good.

Ernest P. Chesbro, former first selectman, and Town Clerk Frank P. Fenton testified to having known Mr. Wheeler for many years and of not having noted any change in his mental condition.

William J. Miller and Thomas F. Shea, both former restaurant proprietors, testified that Mr. Wheeler had boarded at their respective places, covering a period of some two years before his death, and that they considered him sound of mind.

Mayor Walter R. King said that he had known Mr. Wheeler for many years and that he saw him frequently, always finding him of sound mentality.

This concluded the testimony and rebuttals were omitted. Court adjourned until 10 o'clock Friday morning when arguments will be concluded in this case and it will be placed in the hands of the jury. The next case to follow Friday is that of Matthew F. Lynch, Admr., vs. Earl J. LeClaire, and Rose Yvonne Ewart vs. Earl J. LeClaire.

The amount of water used was 6.7 per cent more than last year, the 1929 total being 34,399,250 gallons. Three building permits with a total valuation of $8,850 were issued during the month as against permits valued at $1,355 in November, 1928. Eight real estate transfers totaling $114,000 in value were consummated as against ten for a value of $37,800 last year, a direct increase of $86,200. ANDOVER TO CONSIDER ELIMINATING UNDERPASSES

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Dec. 19.—A matter that is of far-reaching interest will be threshed out at a special town meeting at Andover Friday night when consideration will be given the elimination of the two treacherous underpasses and the railroad crossing in the vicinity of the village of Andover. It is understood that virtually all of the townspeople, on their own behalf or in sympathy to the scores of automobile drivers to whom the underpasses have proven troublous, are in favor of the project. The citizens of Andover desire, however, to secure more specific information as to what plan of elimination will be used and how it will affect town and private property. A proposed plan that appears to meet with general approval calls for a new highway beginning near the Congregational church, running easterly to the north of the New Haven railroad, crossing Andover village in the rear of the Rosenblaum store and continuing in a general easterly direction to land in the rear of the home of Constable Allison L. Frink, there meeting the original highway. This plan removes the crossing and two underpasses entirely from the route. It will mean a sacrifice of about 12 feet of the property fronting the Baptist church. That some form of improvement is urgent in Andover is apparent to all who use the highway. A resident said today that only last week he had knowledge of ten accidents at the first underpass. It was indicated today that the meeting would be one of the most largely attended in years.

OBITUARY

Charles L. Backus

Charles L. Backus, 32, died quite suddenly of a heart ailment at the home of Luther H. Randall in Andover Wednesday night, about one week after the death of his wife. He was born in January, 1847, in Goshen, a son of Sylvanus and Mary Randall Backus. The deceased is survived by three sons, Edwin Backus, of Thompson; Dr. Harold Backus, of Hartford, and Charles Backus, of Norwich; one daughter, Mrs. Clarence Bostwick, of Hartford; one brother, Rev. Jabez Backus, of Washington, D. C., and two sisters, Mrs. Mary Moses and Miss Clara Backus, both of Washington; also 11 grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Mr. Backus was a man of forceful character and a staunch member of the Andover Congregational church and the Andover grange, being a charter member of the latter organization. He was actively interested in community welfare and politics and at one time represented Andover in the legislature, besides holding several town offices. A former teacher in Columbia, he had removed to Andover some 40 years ago and for many years was engaged as a traveling salesman for a commercial fertilizer company.

Christmas mail fairly poured into the postoffice today, taxing the regular and substitute carriers to capacity. Over 100 sacks of parcel post matter and a large number of pouches of first class mail arrived on morning trains. Postmaster Frank M. Smith called in all substitute carriers and clerks and notified Fred LeClair to place his truck into commission Friday to assist Parcel Post Carrier Denis F. Haggerty in his deliveries. Carrier Haggerty will be associated with Substitute Carriers Jerome L. Piche and William Gurnick. Other substitutes to assist during the rush are Clerks Maurice King and Louis Medbury and Carriers William Costello and William Podbersky.

Much of today's mail was designated for outside towns, this necessitating re-routing and dispatching by rear route carriers to Columbia, Leonard Bridge, Mansfield and Scotland.

M. E. Danziger, a graduate of the Hebrew university of New York, has been secured by the local Congregation Sons of Israel as supply rabbi to superintend the teaching at the Hebrew day school connected with the local synagogue. Rabbi Danziger will also officiate at the Friday evening services, which are expected to be carried out in English. His work is not to conflict with that of Rabbi Max Levine, who will continue to conduct the regular spiritual work in the community.

She has been in charge of the agency for the past two years, following the illness of Mr. Bowen. Mr. Roberts had only been connected with the business since August of this year. He is now to enter upon a new venture in Hartford. Miss Ashton now holds full title to the agency, which was founded over 40 years ago by the late Judge Andrew J. Bowen. It was taken over by his son, Clarence A. Bowen, upon the former's death. The firm name is to be continued. Miss Ashton, who is a popular local young woman, is also secretary of the Visiting Nurse association and the Windham Girls' club.

Mrs. Charles E. Anthony of 520 Jackson street was treated at St. Joseph's hospital for a scalp wound about 11:45 o'clock this forenoon following an automobile accident near her home. The woman was seated in her Ford car in front of the home of her daughter, Mrs. Nelson C. Noel, preparing to drive into the yard, as two cars came along headed north. One of the machines, a sedan driven by Lewys N. Gerry of 782 Main street, was about to pass the machine he was following when he noticed the Anthony car. He applied the brakes but his machine skidded into the one occupied by the woman, causing the latter machine to turn completely around and sustain damage. The owners agreed as to a settlement. Officer Arthur Hurley investigated.

The persistent theft of electric bulbs used by the merchants of the city in out-door Christmas decorations has been called to the attention of the police department and termed "a most unfortunate abuse of civic pride."

He pleaded guilty to a charge of speeding on Dec. 4, at Mansfield Four Corners. The arrest was made by State Policeman Terrill Cousens of the Stafford Springs barracks.

DANIELSON

EIGHT HOUSES SOLD AT AUCTION AT ELMVILLE

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Dec. 19. — Another large real estate transaction was closed here today when eight dwellings of the American Woolen company at Elmville were disposed of to individuals by J. Carl Witter, who has been working on the transaction for several months. Following today's sales the American Woolen company's holdings at Elmville are reduced to the mill that stands beside the state highway and which has not been operated for several years. Mr. Witter said this afternoon that he has a prospective purchaser for the mill and that it is possible there may be something to announce relative to this after the first of the year. It is highly improbable that the American Woolen company will ever again operate its Elmville plant, known as the Whitestone mill.

Purchasers of the houses deeded over today are: Ada Mae Kent, Elmville, three two-tenement houses situated on the hill to the northeast of the mill; the Needham Brown bungalow, so-called, on the state highway south of the mill, also to Ada Mae Kent; to John F. Houlihan, Elmville, the two-tenement house on the west side of the state highway next south from the James Kent property; a four-tenement house on the hill northeast of the mill, to George A. LeClair, Danielson; a two-tenement house on the west side of the state highway and nearly opposite the Brown bungalow to Luke W. and Cora N. Kibbe, who occupy one tenement; the house, west of the state highway and about a half mile south of Elmville Center, the home formerly known as the Beaumont place, to Celinda V. Davis, wife of Clifford Davis. The Davis family is resident in the house.

J. R. Bailey, Boston, of the real estate division of the American Woolen company, came here today to represent the company in making the transfers arranged for by Mr. Witter to the persons who purchased. The legal phases of the transactions were conducted through the law offices of Judge Sabin S. Russell and Attorney E. L. Darbie.

DOGS THAT KILLED TAME RABBITS ARE TO DIE

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Dec. 19.—James Moran, East Franklin street, whose rabbit yard was raided by a pair of dogs yesterday morning and nearly all of the 112 rabbits killed or dispersed, said today that he estimates his loss at around $250. Mr. Moran called the attention of First Selectman Charles A. Tillinghast to his loss, and it will be referred to the state for settlement. By order of Dog Warden Charles E. Ayer of Dayville, the mongrel shepherd that was caught in the rabbit yard is to be put to death. It appeared likely this afternoon that the police dog that figured in the killing also will pay the death penalty, the ownership of the animal being quite clearly established.

Mr. Moran paid $25 for one of the rabbits that was killed, $15 for another and $8 for another. There were thoroughbred Belgian hares and Mr. Moran was raising them commercially.

It is believed that a considerable number of the rabbits escaped to the surrounding fields and woods through the hole in the wire netting torn by the dogs while the killing was on. However, no trace of them can be found.

Of interest to the members of his church and the many others that knew him while he was pastor of the Danielson Baptist church is the assertion of Rev. W. Douglas Swaffield, now pastor of the Winthrop Street Baptist church at Taunton, that he can better the claim of a man who says he has used the same collar button for 32 years. The matter has been the subject of items in the press of New England cities this week. Rev. Mr. Swaffield states that he has used the same collar button for 37 years, and missed it for only a few hours in all that time, but found it later in his sock. The button was given him, he states, on his seventh birthday.

Chairman Walter Anderson of the general committee that has been appointed to organize the Danielson Building and Loan association's "Million Dollar Drive" for subscriptions to 5,000 shares to be made available for purchase at once, this morning announced his selections of fellow committeemen. They are: Clifford H. Starkweather and Irving W. Davis, they with Mr. Anderson to represent the Building and Loan association; W. H. G. Herkots and Alfred L. Reed, representing the chamber of commerce; J. W. Powdrell, R. Gene Caron, Obadiah Butler, C. W. Young, William Sargaser and Harry Brearley, representing industries; Harry Richardson and E. B. Wilbur, representing the citizens, and Gordon J. Gale and Edward A. Sullivan, representing the press.

Advance work on the drive is to start immediately and within a few days there is every prospect that it will be possible to announce that subscriptions have begun to come in.

OBITUARY

Frank Belisle

Frank Belisle, for many years a resident of Danielson, died during last night at the home of his son, Edward, in Plainfield, where he has been staying during the period of his illness. Some time since, Mr. Belisle was injured while at work in the mill. He was born in Wauregan, 68 years ago, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Belisle. In addition to his son he leaves a brother, Joseph, of Danielson, and a granddaughter.

Though several Danielson stores not usually so scheduled have been keeping open every evening this week, all of those especially catering to Christmas shoppers were doing business this evening. Opening evenings will be the rule from now on, up to and including next Tuesday evening —Christmas eve.

Last evening members of the Goodyear Community club elected officers for the ensuing year. Those chosen are: President, Joseph H. Diggitt; vice president, Joseph C. Billings; secretary, Henry Cooper; treasurer, Walter A. Rollinson; executive committee, Frederick King, Joseph Green, Napoleon Carrier, Henry Cooper and George Sarault.

All of Goodyear's children are to have a thrilling time Christmas afternoon when they are to be guests of the Goodyear Mills, Inc., at the Goodyear Community house at a Christmas party arranged in their honor. Santa Claus is to be on hand and there will be a tree and pretty lights and decorations and gifts for the little people. Also a bountiful supply of refreshments is to be served. Officials of the Goodyear company and other workers will see that the party more than fulfills the forecast for a very happy afternoon.

This afternoon at 2 o'clock at A. F. Wood's funeral home on Mechanic street, funeral services for Waldo Appleton Pike, who died at his home in East Killingly, were conducted by Rev. Chester J. Armstrong of the Danielson Baptist church. The body was entombed at Westfield cemetery. The bearers were Charles Cross, Edwin Davis, John Wade and E. B. Chase, Jr.

Only four more shopping days before Christmas. We suggest, for the boy, sleds, skates, bicycles. Splendid values. D. Blumenthal, Town Hall Bld'g, Danielson.—adv.

Judge George Torrey of the Plainfield town court said while here this morning that the people of Central Village would be very appreciative if something were done to correct that serious hazard to motorists at what is known as Bowling Alley corner, on the state highway at Central Village. There was another accident there yesterday morning in which a car was wrecked, one of many accidents that have occurred there from time to time.

This third successive day of rain again interfered with the activities of Christmas shoppers, though there were many buyers at the stores.

There was a further increase in business at the postoffice today, and those toiling with the flood of holiday matter that the volume of matter handled will mount higher and higher until it reaches its peak next Tuesday.

It appears that the public has not been quite so generous to date in giving to local funds being accumulated to bring Christmas cheer to the needy, but those in charge of the work are hopeful that this situation will be overcome within the next few days.

Not until this morning did many owners of radio sets here discover why they could not get New York stations late Wednesday afternoon and early evening. It was due to the suspension of broadcasting on account of the SOS call from the liner Fort Victoria, sunk near Sandy Hook by the liner Algonquin.

CENTRAL VILLAGE

The graded school will give an entertainment today at the school hall. The marriage of Miss Eleanor Egan, of Wauregan and Chester Capulette of Danielson, is to take place New Year's day. Miss Egan is well known here, where she formerly lived and is a graduate of the local high school.

Wednesday about 5 o'clock, the electric power was off and the Central Worsted mill was obliged to shut down although it did not affect the lights in the homes until past 6:30 when the entire village was in darkness for about ten minutes, in some parts of the village, while other parts were in darkness for two hours.

Mr. and Mrs. Allan Mott of Wauregan have been guests of relatives here, where they formerly lived.

"Are the speed laws lax in your section?"

"More or less. I got pinched when I was going seventy-five miles an hour."

PUTNAM

DR. E. F. PERRY DIES AT HARTFORD AFTER LONG ILLNESS

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Dec. 19.—Dr. Edward F. Perry of this city, well known Windham county physician and World war surgeon, died this afternoon at the Hartford hospital, shortly after 3 o'clock.

Death was due to hardening of the arteries, an affliction with which the doctor had been suffering for the past year. Franklin Perry, eldest son, was at his father's bedside during his last hours.

Edward Franklin Perry was born in Pomfret, Oct. 5, 1871, the son of Franklin W. and Cornelia (William) Perry. After attending elementary schools in Pomfret and Putnam, Dr. Perry entered Putnam high school, graduating in the class of 1890. He continued his education with a year of preparatory study at Norwich Free Academy and entered Amherst college in 1893. After completing two years of this course, he decided upon a medical career. He entered the Long Island College of Medicine, graduated with a degree of doctor of medicines, in 1898. After two years as an interne in a New York hospital, he was admitted to practice in a Massachusetts hospital and began practice in Wellesley, Mass.

On Feb. 19, 1899, Dr. Perry married Miss Edith Smith of Washington, Conn. Four children were born of this union, Franklin E., of Hartford; Ruth, of Boston; Alice, a student at the Willimantic Normal school, and Myron, who resides at home, all of whom, together with the widow, survive Dr. Perry.

In 1905, Dr. Perry came to Putnam. His ability as a physician and surgeon was immediately recognized by the people of Windham county and within a few years, he fell host to a large practice. Dr. Perry was the only physician in this city who served in the World war. At the outbreak of the war he enlisted with the medical corps, received a commission of first lieutenant and served eight months in France. Two years ago Dr. Perry was commissioned a captain and was given command of the medical detachment, which became a part of the 43rd division, Connecticut National guard. He resigned his post on account of impaired health early this year. On several occasions Dr. Perry was drafted by the state as a grand juryman. He was a member of the grand jury, which assembled at Putnam last February and returned a true bill of murder against Trenor A. Rice of Willimantic, for the killing of County Detective William E. Jackson.

Dr. Perry's fraternal affiliations were with the Quinebaug lodge of Masons, Israel Putnam lodge of Odd Fellows and the Anselm Mayotte post, American Legion, of which he was charter member and past commander. He was a member of the Windham County Medical society and, until his health forced him to retire from practice, was a member of the medical staff at the Day Kimball hospital.

Besides his wife and children, Dr. Perry is survived by two brothers, Geo. W. Perry, city engineer of Putnam, and Attorney Robert Perry of New York city. He leaves three nieces, Misses Helen and Janet Perry of New York, and Miss Gertrude Perry, of Putnam, and a nephew, Gilbert S. Perry, of Worcester, Mass.

In the death of Dr. Perry, Putnam for the second time in a week witnesses the passing of a leading and respected citizen, whose vacancy in the community is certain to be a difficult one to fill.

LOCAL WOMAN ARRESTED FOR ISSUING BAD CHECKS

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Dec. 19.—Mrs. Ethel De Rusha, alias E. G. DeRusha, of 15 Lyons street, this city, was arrested tonight by Sergeant George Liard and Sergeant George Gardner of Danielson barracks, on a charge of fraud. Mrs. DeRusha was arrested after she had passed several checks, which were without value. The two officers went to the DeRusha home this afternoon and, after a thorough search, found Mrs. DeRusha hiding under a sink in the woodshed adjoining the house. She attempted to evade arrest when she told the officers that each of her creditors had promised to withhold her notes until such time as she could cover them at the Citizens National bank, where she kept her account.

The alibi was not accepted and the woman is being held for appearance in city court Friday morning as bonds for her release, set at $1,000, could not be furnished.

POLICE CONVINCED SIMONDS DID NOT ROB RECTORY

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Dec. 19. — Although Charles H. Simonds, 21-year-old Framingham boy and master church poor box thief, under arrest in Concord, Mass., has admitted that on two occasions he rifled poor boxes in St. Mary's church in this city, he has convinced local police that he did not committ the burglary at the parish house on the evening of November 10, Police Sergeant George H. Liard said today. Sergt. Liard returned to this city late last night in company with Sergt. George L. Gardner of Danielson barracks after they had questioned Simonds at police headquarters in Concord earlier in the day. Sergt. Liard said he found Simonds ready to answer every question put to him by the two police officers and seemed to take pleasure in revealing his tactics that baffled local police for months.

Simonds visited Windham county in 1928 for the first time and the success of his activities in this section led him to continue his criminal career. "I never touched anything but a poor box," Sergt. Liard quoted the youth as saying. "And I never broke a lock or left any telltale marks on church property. I never worked after dark and always enjoyed the presence of a few parishioners in the church while I was working." Simonds entered St. Mary's church in 1928. After learning the offerings dropped into boxes continued their fall through the floor resting at the end of a pipe in the basement of the church, he made his way to the basement where he removed the cap at the end of the receiver and placed his hat beneath the pipe. All contributions received during the day alighted in his hat and when a sufficiently large amount of money had collected there he replaced the cap, taking care to leave no marks that would indicate the box had been tampered with. Simonds said he made two visits to St. Mary's church and while his funds were collecting at the Putnam church, he visited churches in Dayville, Danielson, Attawaugan and on one occasion in North Grosvenordale making the rounds a second time to gather up his stolen contributions. Simonds confessed to theft of money from poor boxes at the Holy Trinity church in Pomfret, intimating that he committed this act only a few months ago. Rev. George J. Donahue, pastor of the church, when informed of Simonds confession was surprised, for so cleverly had the young thief covered up his crime that not even the church officials had become aware of his visit.

Simonds said he returned to Putnam in May of this year, but found electricians and other workmen engaged in hanging the large bell in the steeple of the church. The number was so great that he did not see fit to repeat his crime. When questioned as to the burglary at the rectory a month ago, Simonds denied any connection with it. He told the officers where he was on the night the rectory was burglarized. By proving his alibi Simonds leaves the St. Mary's rectory burglary a mystery and police today continued their investigations in the channels deserted Tuesday when word came that the Framingham robber had "confessed" to the church break.

Two nineteen year old boys, Wilfred Bernier and Antonio Raymond, of this city, were found guilty of larceny on two counts and sentenced to the county jail for thirty days each, by Judge M. H. Geissler in city court this morning. Bernier was arrested by Officer Joseph Page of the local police Wednesday morning when it had been learned that he had stolen gas from a car on South Meadow street and had attempted to break and enter the garage of Julian Tatoon on the same street. After questioning, Bernier admitted stealing automobile accessories from several garages in this vicinity. In his confession he implicated Tony Raymond, who he said was his pal and had worked with him for more than a year. Putnam police have recovered much of the loot. In reply to a question asked by Judge Geissler, Bernier said that they stole the tires and other automobile parts with the intention of selling them and using the proceeds to maintain a Ford car owned by them jointly. The Putnam Buick garage was entered by them and a windshield, rim and five tires besides a supply of headlights were stolen. A tire, tube and rim were stolen from a parked car in Dudley, Mass., a similar loot was obtained from two parked cars in Manalapsett village and from one on the Quadic road they admitted.

Mrs. Alice W. Maynard

A death in Putnam today was that of Mrs. Alice Wilson Maynard, of 71 Pomfret street. Mrs. Maynard died this morning at the Day Kimball hospital following a protracted illness. She was 31 years of age, having been born in this city on December 9, 1898, the daughter of Robert and Susan (Mowry) Wilson. She attended schools here and became widely known in Putnam where she lived for the greater part of her life. She was a member of the Congregational church and took an interest in church social activities. Surviving Mrs. Maynard is her husband John N. Maynard, of Pomfret street, her father, Robert Wilson, of Danielson, a brother and sisters.

Henry O. Preston

Henry O Preston, for many years a resident of this city, died today at the Haven home in Abington, where he had been a patient. Mr. Preston was in his 88th year. Previous to his illness Mr. Preston had been a carpenter and contractor. He was widely known in this section of the county.

Two men thought to be from New York city were being sought by local police today in connection with charges of obtaining funds through fraud, preferred against them by local merchants. The men represented themselves as agents of a New York publishing house. They stated that Rev. U. O. Bellerose, pastor of St. Mary's church, had purchased a supply of calendars from their firm. According to their story there was space on the margins of the calendar for advertising space. They further stated that Father Bellerose had authorized them to offer the space to the merchants for sale. In two instances they were successful, collecting about $35 before one businessman, suspicious of their scheme, communicated with President Walter N. King of the chamber of commerce, advising him of their operations. Mr King conferred with Father Bellerose who emphatically denied making any negotiations with the swindlers. Police were notified and an effort is being made to bring about their apprehension.

The engagement of Miss Alexine Rothwell of 18 Bolles street, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Rothwell, to Edgar T. Phaneuf, son of Mrs. Cecilia Phaneuf of Wilkinson street, was announced today by Miss Rothwell's parents.

THE PERIL FROM FOG

From time to time we have gotten a certain degree of encouragement that discoveries had been made which it was believed would overcome the impenetrable fog. Possibly those discoveries haven't been perfected, but while we are anxiously waiting for that day to arrive we are experiencing the same distressing handicaps, losses and dangers which fog has always produced.

Over a large area fog has spread itself for the past ten days. It has resulted in a stagnation of shipping and flying has been greatly curtailed. Drivers of autos have recognized the necessity of exercising greater caution and the public in general has long since been crying "enough!"

To fog can be attributed the crashing of two coastwise steamers off New York harbor, resulting in the sinking of the Fort Victoria and possibly its total loss. Here was a case where the commanders of these vessels were almost out of New York harbor headed in the same direction and, but for the stopping of the Fort Victoria to drop its harbor pilot, it would not have been in the path of the Algonquin. Just why the fog whistles of the vessels were not such as to indicate the presence of the other is not made clear, but the whole affair illustrates the peril of navigating in a fog and the great need that exists for either eliminating such a blanket or of better safeguarding transportation activities through it.

Happily there was no loss of life. Whatever loss is involved represents a property loss with the prospects that that will be substantial. But the question naturally arises as to whether too great chances are taken in trying to navigate at such a congested point under present safeguards.

New York is a port at which any great delay in schedules quickly creates serious congestion. There is also an unwillingness on the part of most people to tolerate any delay, regardless of the reasons for it, and yet, in view of the conditions that prevail from time to time, the wonder is that there are not more collisions and more sinkings due to fog. The need for a fog remover is an old one and it still exists.

NEW YORK'S GRAB BAG

If the democrats had not won in the recent New York election it is safe to say that there would have been no raise in salaries there as voted this week. It is a fast working board of estimate, city officials and board of aldermen, when it comes to looking out for a salary boost for themselves. Less might be said about them in case of certain needed reforms which the city has needed for a long time.

The need for speed lies in the fact that there has been an effort made to make it a thoroughly legal step. By voting now upon this matter they have made provision for their successors. They are, of course, going to succeed themselves and the movement for the salary increases was not made until after the election was decided. That's why we say that if the election had gone the other way there would have been no such raising of salaries.

As it is, it is a case of the board of estimate and the board of aldermen patting themselves on the back. The first board makes its recommendations. The second board is made to see the need of the boost by being told that their salaries will experience a raise at the same time. The board of estimate gets the lion share of the boost, but the aldermen are made to see the necessity of it by what is coming to them.

It isn't a matter in which the people have a chance to express themselves. That is, they had all the opportunity in the world to do so at the November election and at that time they expressed their confidence in the Tammany crowd and that, of course, included everything they might do. Right off at the start, or even before the reelected officials begin their new terms, they have instituted a raid upon the doughbags of the city. The people are helpless. They are going to be told by the officials that provision is simply being made for their successors, knowing full well who their successors are going to be, and they have made it painfully clear that New York has got to pay the bill whether it likes it or not. Supporters of the present regime may denounce the move but they must bear their share of the responsibility for giving the officials a chance to grab at the bag.

RESTRICTING SUBS

It is never possible to tell in advance all that will happen at any conference of nations. There are certain possibilities, certain aims and certain viewpoints and it is necessary to obtain an agreement before anything can be accomplished.

There has been talk for a long time about curbing or abolishing the submarine as a weapon of war. It is a question on which the nations have been divided. It was even impossible to have the submarines included in the limitation proposals under the Washington agreement.

France at that time was particularly opposed to any such move. It attached great importance to the underwater boats for defense purposes, and it set forth that it was possible to build such vessels for effective service at a much less cost than any other type of vessel. France hasn't changed its mind in regard to submersibles and as long as it clings to them and insists upon having them and building more there can be no hope that Italy will abandon its attitude.

Now it appears that Japan is taking the view that it favors the retention of the submarines. It wants them for defense operations and even though they have been chiefly employed in attacking merchantmen it is indicated that it will throw its strength with the nations which oppose the abolition of the underwater boats. Whether that will stand in the way of restricting the size and the number will develop in time. The situation may be such that there will be no move made to ban the submarine in view of the expressed views, but that should not stand in the way of any discussions that might throw light upon the situation and be beneficial to all participants in dealing with this subject.

There is nothing now standing in the way of any of the nations building as many of this type of war craft as it desires or of building each new one larger and with a greater cruising radius. On the other hand, should there be any support for the idea of immunizing food-carying ships against attack there would be little use for the submarines if we can judge by the use to which they were put during the World war. It cannot be expected that there will be any great restrictions, however, until all are in agreement.

MILK DISTRIBUTION

It has been the habit for so many years for the milk man to get around in the early morning that it is considered revolutionary to think of anything else. But the job of distributing milk has undergone changes quite the same as other things.

There aren't as many small milk peddlers as there used to be. They do not go about with a five-gallon can, or a wheel barrow, or a horse-drawn vehicle. They are today peddling their milk by auto, in enclosed vehicles, and in getting away from the old practices which governed milking and bottling they are also abandoning the idea of doing it before sunrise.

In some of the large cities objection has been raised to the noise which the milk wagons make, the clatter on the pavements and the noise when the boys run through the alleys and yards. The question has been raised as to why it could not be done during the day time instead of during those early morning hours when everyone wants to sleep.

For a considerable time there have been those milk men who have carried their milk at night. There have been those milk dealers who were engaged in some other activity as a side line who have carried their milk any time during the day from early afternoon to 9 o'clock in the evening. More recently, one of the large local distributors has seen no objection to afternoon instead of morning delivery and probably the customers find none once they get used to it.

The problem of keeping the milk rests, of course, in this case with the consumer. In winter there is no difficulty. In the summer there may be more trouble experienced, but in the summer there is a delight in the early morning which could easily be regarded as preferable to the hot afternoon. But with the changing conditions it must be expected that the milk men will participate along with the rest.

REGULATING RADIO

What the people of the country might have said if they had been asked to vote upon the question of continuing the radio commission is a question. Congress has come to the conclusion that it ought to be continued in power until it has had an opportunity to accomplish more than it has done and it has so voted.

This means that radio control is going to be continued by a commission instead of having it turned over to the department of commerce.

Perhaps it may seem that the radio commission has had an easy job but anyone who gives it a bit of thought must realize that it has experienced no bed of roses. It has had to plow entirely new fields and they have been encumbered with all kinds of difficulties. It hasn't been a case of continuing something that others have perfected, but it has involved the blazing of a new trail and trying to bring some degree of order out of chaos, or what would be chaos if there were no such thing as regulation.

Changes have been made from time to time to meet new conditions and in an endeavor to improve broadcasting conditions. Perfection hasn't been obtained but one can readily understand how much better conditions are than they would be if broadcasters could do as they please as to locality, wave length, power and time.

With the commission assured the authority to continue its work it will have the opportunity to make other changes, to weed out some of the worthless stations, stations which are neither profitable to their backers nor to the listening public. Whether this can be done better under the commission or the department of commerce may be a question, but congress has told the commission to go ahead and we must look to that for results.

THE CHRISTMAS SPIRIT

"Mother," said Dorothea, plumping down in the big chair and pulling out her notebook, "I wish you'd sit down here a few minutes, take your thoughts off everything else and help me make out my shopping list. I'm beginning and ending my Christmas buying today."

"My goodness," smiled Mrs. Howard, sitting down promptly in response to her 19-year-old daughter's command, "this sounds important. Just how many regiments do you have to supply with gifts that it takes a conference to help you decide?"

"Now, mother," said Dorothea, "with all I have on my mind I do wish you'd stop being flippant and get down to business. You know I have five people in our immediate family to buy gifts for, let alone my out-of-town cousins, all my girl friends, my music teacher and dancing teacher, the lady next door, and—Dick. And only a few hours this afternoon to do it all!"

"Gracious," said her mother, "you have over a week yet—why are you in such a hurry?"

"Oh, no, I haven't a week, by any means," answered Dorothea. "I have just this afternoon, I have an important engagement after school every afternoon this week. Now, let's see. What shall I give father? What does he need?" Her mother pondered the question some minutes and then looked up brightly.

"I have an idea. Why don't you give him a nice silk muffler for evening wear?"

"Righto, mumsy! That's splendid." Dorothea jotted down the memo. "And brother Bob, what do you think he'd like?"

"I'd suggest," answered her mother, after due consideration, "some golf socks and a tie or two."

"Mother, you're a treasure," said Dorothea gayly, putting that down. "Now, what shall I get for the twins—for Carol and Caroline?"

"Those youngsters are getting to an age," said her mother adroitly, "when they like to use my French perfume and my white kid gloves. It would be a great convenience to me if they had some of their own."

"Just the thing," said Dorothea, "They shall have both. Now what about Cousin Harry and Aunt Kate down in Spring Valley?"

"I happen to know," answered her mother, "that Aunt Kate always likes a nice piece of china, and Cousin Harry told me himself he wished Santa Claus would bring him a fancy radiator top for his automobile."

"Mother," cooed Dorothea in delight, "what in the world would I do without you? Now, for my girl friends in the club——"

"Why not get them each," said her mother, sweetly, "a ticket to the matinee and all of you go together some afternoon around Christmas?"

"Mother," said Dorothea, "you're a perfect—well, I'll tell you when I have more time. Now, there are my teachers——"

"I should think," said Mrs. Howard "that ideal gifts for them would be pretty flowering plants."

"The very thing" exclaimed Dorothea. "Now just one more question and I'm off. What do you think old Mrs. Muggins next door——"

"She needs" answered her mother, "a new basket for her cat——" With a hasty jot, a leap for her coat and a kiss on her mother's cheek, Dorothea fled out of the house with these parting words: "The next time you see me I'll have all my Christmas shopping done and time to spare!"

At supper time Dorothea blew into the house again and Mrs. Howard was ready with eager questions.

"How many gifts"—she began. But Dorothea cut her short.

"Just one," she breezed. "You see, I met Florence Abbott on the train going downtown and she asked me what I was getting for Dick." Mrs. Howard nodded. "I said," went on Dorothea, "some colored linen handkerchiefs," and she said, 'Oh, I saw the cutest ones down at Thompson's. I'm getting some for Harold, too. What fun! Let's go together' And, mumsy, when we saw those at Thompson's she remembered some cuter ones she'd seen some other place and we went there and—well, we spent the whole afternoon shopping for her fiance and my Dickie!"

"But," said her mother, weakly, "what about your list—the family, your girl friends and the lady next door—I thought you only had this afternoon to shop!"

"Oh dear," said Dorothea, resignedly, "I guess I'll have to give up my important bridge tea tomorrow and devote the time to shopping. I must say one's relations and friends do demand a lot of one's precious time and thought around Christmas.—Chicago News.

YOUR HEALTH

Increasing The Life-Span
By George F. Raynor, M. D.,
New York
(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

Medical science during the past few years has developed and established the fact that a very definite percentage of its service to humanity, in the future, will be along the lines of preventive medicine. This type of service, to be successful, naturally depends on the co-operation of those vitally concerned. As physician's hands are tied in calling a patient's attention to deviations from normal health unless that patient presents himself every so often for examination.

Many individuals are loth to undergo a physical examination for fear that the result may disclose some incurable disease. In all other things we are willing and anxious to face the facts. But some are afraid to investigate the condition of the human machine. This is an unfortunate frame of mind. The baffling and incurable diseases are few, in comparison with those that can at least be held in check.

Other people feel that this examination must mean a journey from home, with its entailing expense of time and money. This is another fallacy. Your family physician is the one to initiate this examination. He will detect any manifestations of a disturbed physiological balance. Most of the diseases that the human family is heir to are detected by simple procedures of examination, such as any physician can go through with a single appointment. And as for the special tests of lungs, heart, blood, etc., which require a more elaborate technical examination, your physician is the one to know what you need and see that you get it.

Yet there is another side to the question, for a supposedly healthy man who wants to be sure he is in good condition is badly out of luck if his physician is only interested in cures. One test of a good doctor is his interest in preventing and not merely in curing diseases.

So your course is clear. Get a good family doctor, make him responsible for your health, and then play the game by his rules.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19—The Bystander seems vaguely to remember that back in pre-prohibition days there used to be published a book much in demand among barkeepers.

It was called "The Barkeeper's Friend," or something like that. In it were the recipes or formulae or whatever you call 'em for mixing about every kind of cocktail anybody ever had devised.

And now comes announcement that the prohibition equivalent is soon to be on the presses under authorship of no less a person than Mrs. James M. Doran, wife of the prohibition commissioner of the United States. And its title is to be "A Book of Juices."

Probably "Kickless Kocktails" would fit better if the sample provided under Mrs. Doran's formula at a Washington W. C. T. U. luncheon is a measure of what the book will contain.

It was described as "the cocktail that satisfies but does not inebriate" and Mrs. Doran got the idea from a railway dining car chef.

A Horde of New Ones

But just think of the book on "Kickful Kocktails" Dr. Doran himself could write if he were so minded! Part of the business of prohibition enforcement machinery all over the country has been chemical analysis of all sorts and conditions of liquids, searching for that outlaw excess over one-half-of-one-per-cent.-by-volume of alcohol.

Without doubt the records of these tests disclose ways of getting a "kick" never dreamed of before prohibition.

The test laboratory at the treasury department now is in a basement room and its goings-on are heralded about the corridors and even out into busy Fifteenth street.

Just now a temporary penthouse arrangement is being superimposed atop the south wing of the treasury building. It is to house, the Bystander has been told, some of the laboratory activities within the huge building. So the illegal smells are to be banished to the roof.

Temporary Banishment

And while Mrs. Doran was disclosing her plans for the "Book of Juices," Mr. Roy C. Potts, department of agriculture economic sharp, came along with a belated bit of Thanksgiving day information.

Mr. Potts finds that only one American family in every four actually serves a turkey dinner on Thanksgiving. The trouble is, he contends, that turkeys don't come small enough to meet average family needs, allowing six ounces per person for a generous portion, even at Thanksgiving dinner.

Unless the family is willing to stand for cold turkey, turkey soup and turkey hash for subsequent days, a 10-pound bird is an economic loss.

To meet the problem, the government experts propose to urge sale of half turkeys next Thanksgiving. That, they saw, would double the number of family tables serving turkey and stabilize the Thanksgiving time turkey market.

IN DAY'S NEWS

"From Paris to Paris and return"—a fitting title for a narrative of the recent Europe-Asia flight of Coste and Bellonte, intrepid French long distance flyers.

But where is Paris in Asia?

"Hanoi is the capital of French Indo-China and bears many earmarks of the European capital," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic society.

Sidewalk Cafes

"A modern train brings you into a modern railway station at Hanoi. Here you may lail a shiny new French-made automobile with a French chauffeur. In a tour of the city you ride along wide streets and boulevards bearing French names and pass imposing French buildings and spacious parks where stroll French women and men; some of the latter dressed in the natty blue uniforms of the French army.

"In the business district, Parisian gowns are displayed behind plate-glass show windows. French theatre fronts blaze with gaudy signs to attract patrons. Parislike sidewalk cafes invite passersby to imbibe their favorite beverage while melodious strains frim a French orchestra filter through the open windows of a French restaurant.

"Now and then you bump over street car tracks. You notice the absence of peculiar oriental city odors because of Hanoi's modern sewage system; you feel free to drink the city water because of the excellent water supply system, and at night the streets are bathed in light from thousands of electric bulbs. These and the Botanical gardens and Zoological park are but a few reminders of the French capital about 7,000 miles away.

"Europe" and "Asia"

"The French quarter is fathest from the right bank of the Red river on which Hanoi lies about 80 miles from the sea. A lake, surrounded by promenades, separates this quarter from the native quarter which begins on the congested riverside. Once inside the narrow byways of the native quarter, it is easy to forget the westernized portion of the city. A few centuries ago Hanoi was divided into about 100 villages, each with its own chief. Now its division appears only according to merchandise sold or the trades at which the natives work.

"Each street is jammed with humanity. Shopkeepers disregard the bounds of their open-front shops and are often found in the middle of the street bickering with prospective purchasers. Soup vanders carrying small bells announce their approach, itinerant photographers and fortune tellers vocally make known their professional skill. And added to those noises and the ordinary chatter of groups of loiterers, is the yelling of sweatmeat vanders, and the noisy warnings of rickshaw boys who plunge through the human mass. Wearers of conical, lampshade-shaped bamboo hats dodge one another without damage to the headgear. Some of the hats are two feet in diameter.

"One who knows French will have no difficulty shopping in native Hanoi. The sugar merchants' shops flank Rue du Sucre (Street of Sugar), while Rue du Riz (Street of Rice) is the rice merchants stand. Women travelers enjoy the Rue de la Soie(Street of Silk) where merchants display a gay array of silk scarfs, some handsomely embroidered. There is a Street of Cups where the finest to the cheapest China cups are on sale; a Street of Dyes where the dye business is dominant and a Street of Hats where thousands of hats are strewn about over the shops.

"The odor of herbs will lead you to the Street of Medicines and if you follow the tap tap of the tin and brass workers' hammers you will come upon a splendid display of metal vessels of all shapes and sizes in the Street of Brass workers and the Street of Tinsmiths. Most of the merchandise displayed is made in congested rooms in the rear of the shops."

Stories That Recall Others

Holding Out.

Reading in the paper that her teacher had entered the state of matrimony during the summer vacation, a little girl rushed home from school all excited.

"Mother," she exclaimed "there's something wrong somewhere. Today teacher was telling us all about her trip this summer and never once did she mention going through the state of matrimony."

Bold.

Three little four-year-olds were discussing in a very serious way what they were going to do when they grew up. Joe said he was going to shoot lions. The next little fellow was going out on a train and ride forever. The third, Donald, wanted to be more daring than the rest and in a babyish voice said: "I'm going to buy an ice cream cone and get on the street car and eat it."

Jolly One—Cheer up, old boy, why don't you drown your sorrow?

Dejected One—No! In the first place she is stronger than I am; and, second, it would be murder.—Exchange.

Gleaming hair!

The way modern hair dressers accentuate your hair by lovely lines and contours makes it important to keep the hair in perfect condition.

Now, millions know the quickest way to give the hair new life and lustre; to bring out its natural color, is with Danderine. It is so easy to use; you simply moisten your brush with it each time you arrange your hair.

Danderine dissolves the crust of dandruff; stops falling hair; puts the scalp in the pink of condition. It helps the hair grow long, silky, abundant; gives it more lustre than brilliantine. It makes the hair easy-to-arrange; holds it in place. Waves look nicer; stay in longer when "set" with Danderine.

MAYOR AND SCOUTS CONSPIRE TO DELIVER SECRET MESSAGE

As the clock strikes one Saturday afternoon, eight Boy Scout spies in uniform will start from eight different compass directions eight blocks from Franklin square in an attempt to deliver a secret message written by Mayor Lee Roy Robbins, to the spy chief on Franklin square. Every registered Scout in Norwich is expected to take part and wear his uniform if he has one. The spy getting the message through will receive a reward from the mayor's hand. The Scout first capturing a spy and his message and delivering same to Scout headquarters will receive an award from the chief.

According to Scout Executive John L. Sullman this is a chance for every Scout in the city to have a good time in a lively game which calls for real scouting knowledge. The rules of the game are as follows:

There are eight unknown Scout spies.

Spies will be summoned to a secret meeting and be given instructions by an unknown and masked chief. The spy chief is a first-class Scout.

On Saturday, when the court house clock strikes one, all spies will start from various points of the city at least eight blocks from Franklin square; some from the north, some from the south, some from the east and some from the west.

Spies will be in Scout uniform.

Hunters will have to wear uniforms if they have them, but the fact of not owning a uniform will not bar any Scout from entering the hunt.

Each spy will bear a copy of a message from the mayor addressed to the editors of the two local newspapers.

Spies will seek to deliver messages to any chief waiting somewhere on Franklin square and wearing a secret identification known only to spies.

Spies may travel only on foot.

Any spy may be captured by addressing him exactly in these and no other words: "There is always a good time at camp. Let's go, Scout." Upon hearing exactly these words every spy is honor bound to immediately surrender his message to the Scout thus addressing him. If but one word is wrong the spy need not disclose himself.

All troops reporting at the Thayer building entrance at 12:45 will be assigned the part of the city they are to cover in intercepting the spies. In general each troop will have the eight blocks in the general direction of its troop headquarters from Franklin square. The spies are to telephone Scout headquarters before 9:30 Saturday morning for instructions. According to reports there has already been a meeting of the spies with Mayor Robbins where it is understood the very latest methods of camouflage and stalking were discussed.

The mayor is confident that the eight spies, despite their uniforms, will be able to reach the square safely with the secret message, but Scout Commissioner A. L. Peale in a statement issued Thursday night expressed equal confidence that not a sinuous spy would get through the blockade made by the Scouts. Members of the Boy Scout executive board are divided in their opinion. However, Saturday will tell the story and full details of the winning troops and Scouts participating will be published for the benefit of anxious parents.

JURY RETURNS VERDICT AGAINST PLAINTIFF IN SUPERIOR COURT

Shortly after 3 o'clock Thursday afternoon a jury in the superior court, at New London, returned a verdict against Martin Wrobel of Montville in his $15,000 damage suit against Samuel and Kate Santeniello of New London. By the jury's verdict the defendant lost a counter claim in the suit.

The case was given to the jury about 2:30 o'clock following arguments by Attorney V. P. A. Quinn of this city, for the plaintiff, Attorney Thomas E. Troland of New London, for the defendant and a charge by Judge Earnest C. Simpson.

Mr. Wrobel claimed that while he was operating his automobile on the highway leading from the Robert Gair Co., mill in Uncasville, onto the highway leading to the New London-Norwich turnpike, it was struck by an automobile owned by Kate Santeniello and driven by Samuel Santeniello. He filed suit for damages to the machine and for personal injuries. The defendants filed a counter suit for damages of $500.

There will be a short calendar session of the court today (Friday) at New London after which the court will recess for a week because of the Christmas holiday season.

JOHNSON AND WAINWRIGHT IN NATIONAL CONTEST WINNERS

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—Jonathan L. Johnson of New London, son of Henry D. Johnson, No. 21 Lincoln avenue, Norwich, Conn., and Brian Wainwright, No. 171 Broadway, Norwich, each won one of the prizes in the national idea contest of the National Food Preservation council, it was announced here today. Each was awarded a $5 prize for an essay on "Why Fifty Degrees is the Danger Point," which described the vital importance of food to the welfare of mankind.

First prize in the contest—a choice of $10,000 in gold or a $10,000 model home to be constructed anywhere in the United States—was awarded to Dudley L. Harley, of Martinsburg, W. Va., a senior at Lehigh university, Bethlehem, Pa. Second prize of $3,500 went to Miss Grace Hampson, Edgewood, R. I. Altogether, 835 prizes were awarded, aggregating $25,000.

The contest attracted thousands of entries from all parts of the United States, and quite a large number from foreign countries, although the latter were ineligible under the rules. Contestants were limited to 400 words and entries were judged on the basis of knowledge of the subject of food preservation, personal experiences shown, originality and clarity. Judges in charge of the contest were Dr. Walter Hollis Eddy, authority on food chemistry and biology, Columbia university; Merle Thorpe, editor of Nation's Business, and B. C. Forbes, editor of Forbes magazine.

"The results of the contest were extremely gratifying to us," said C. E. Greenwood, vice-chairman of the executive committee of the council, "because they showed conclusively that the nation was conscious of the importance of keeping food properly, both from the standpoint of health and as a question of household economics.

"With so many thousands actually entering the contest, it is surely true that many more thousands took an active interest, either in aiding contestants or in writing essays on the subject which they failed to turn in. Such an active interest should result in marked improvement in the public attitude toward food preservation, and this would be a great benefit to the country from the standpoint of prevention of disease and conservation of wealth.

HOSPITAL ORDERLY BELIEVED TO HAVE SUICIDED

Leaving two notes, expressing dissatisfaction with life and stating that he intended to commit suicide, Mark Wollard, 17-year-old orderly at the Seaside tuberculosis sanatorium at Crescent beach, disappeared Wednesday night and the state police, believing that he has carried out his intentions, are conducting a search for his body.

The youth was formerly an inmate of the institution, but some time ago he was pronounced cured, but he had become very fond of Dr. John F. O'Brien, the superintendent, liked his surroundings and asked that employment be provided for him so that he could remain at the hospital. He was put to work as an orderly and was said to be performing his duties in a very satisfactory manner although of late, according to attaches of the sanatorium he had become despondent and very moody.

Wollard was described as five feet, eight inches in height, weighing about 130 pounds. He had brown hair and a scar on the back of his left wrist. When last seen he was wearing a blue flannel shirt, light gray trousers, a dark cap and rain coat.

PRAISES WORK DONE BY PUBLIC HEALTH NURSES

The splendid work done by our public health nurses, which includes that of our tuberculosis nurses, is one of the greatest aids we have in the prevention and cure of disease, said Dr. Edward J. Brophy, city health officer, Thursday, with reference to the sale of Christmas seals. Continuing, Dr. Brophy said:

As the money which is realized by the sale of Christmas seals is used to further the work of these nurses in caring for those afflicted with tuberculosis, everyone who purchases these seals may have a just pride in realizing that he or she is aiding someone to get well and also is helping others to escape disease.

Connecticut has done well in its treatment of the tubercular but it is also a fact that a great many cases of tuberculosis with fever have been obliged to wait for a period of from two to three months before they can be admitted to our local state sanitorium after they have made application. If the Backus hospital could not take in patients until two or three months had elapsed after the sick ones had applied for treatment, I am sure that a considerable uproar would ensue.

Why should not the state of Connecticut take steps to increase the facilities at the sanitorium so that there would be room for all who are anxious to be treated?

The public health, tubercular nurses, take care of these sick ones, who are unable to enter, as best they can, but we must remember that there is a certain amount of danger to others in the household and in the community at large until these afflicted ones are treated in a sanitorium. After they have been discharged from the sanitorium, the nurses again look after them to see that the instructions which have been given by the efficient and courteous Dr. Campbell and his staff are carried out, thus continuing to aid the patient and prevent others from developing the disease.

RECOMMENDS REDUCTION IN NATIVE TURKEYS PRICES

A reduction in the price of turkeys ten cents a pound under that paid at Thanksgiving in order that native birds might be within the price range of all Connecticut families, has been recommended by the turkey growers committee of the Connecticut department of agriculture. The committee, in a statement issued Thursday, explains that the turkey growers could make a worth while contribution toward a merry Christmas by reducing the price of their birds.

The statement says that in the past the Connecticut turkey growers have catered to a trade which did not hesitate to pay a premium price as long as it was assured that no table in the country would be graced with a better bird. Now in order to give everyone a chance to know what a Connecticut turkeys tastes like, it was suggested that they charge the Christmas trade 45 cents per pound live weight, 50 cents wholesale and 60 cents per pound retail for dressed turkeys. In round numbers this means that the Connecticut turkey growers will contribute approximately $10,000 to the Christmas stocking.

Consumers who wish to be sure that their turkey is Connecticut grown are urged by the state department of agriculture to look for the yellow tag on the right wing of the turkey. The tag bearing the New England Quality label, together with the name and address of the producer is the official inspection certificate allowing the bird to be sold under the Connecticut Native Fancy grade. While all Connecticut turkeys are not tagged, the majority of the select birds are sold under this grade and the department of agriculture through its inspection service assures the consumer that birds bearing the official yellow tag are of the highest quality.

The Thanksgiving trade consumed more than a million pounds of turkey meat and it is anticipated that approximately the same amount will be used during the Christmas holidays. Importation figures furnished by the state department of agriculture show that Texas was the principal source of slipped-in turkeys.

Five Connecticut markets imported 14 carloads from Texas, four markets imported 10 1-2 carloads from Minnesota, while three markets imported 6 carloads from Kansas. Other states including Oklahoma, Missouri, Illinois, Oregon, North Dakota, Colorado, New Mexico and Tennessee brought the grand total up to 51 1-2 carloads. This represents approximately 1,030,000 pounds imported by freight.

TAKE A SUN BATH; YOU STAY BATHED

PHILADELPHIA, (AP)—The up-to-date sun bather may not need his ultra-violent immersions on the Saturday night schedule once common for aquatic ablutions.

In a report to the Illuminating Engineering society W. W. Coblentz, physicist of the bureau of standards, says:

"Recent experiments by Russell are of interest in showing that there is a holdover so that a thorough exposure to ultra-violent (at least in chicks) will continue effective for a week or two.

"From this it would appear that it will not be necessary to take sunbaths or baths of artificial light as frequently as formerly was supposed to be required."

Henry M. Boss, Jr., was sworn in as United States attorney for Rhode Island for a four year term beginning December 16.

"Chinking" Cellar Windows

Simply because the boiler is located in the cellar many people figure that this part of the house doesn't need insulating. It needs it fully as much as any other portion of the house. A surprising quantity of cold air seeps in around loosely fitted cellar windows and in one way or another finds its way upstairs. Windows should be "chinked" either from the inside or outside, thus removing drafts and lightening the boiler's task.

PHILOPENA IS FINED ON TWO COUNTS THURSDAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Dec. 19.—The police were busy last night and this morning conducting raids, two men being arrested charged with violation of the liquor law and one woman taken into custody charged with conducting a disorderly house.

This morning a warrant was issued calling for a search of the premises, 640 Bank street, conducted by Jack Philopena, former taxicab driver. Automobile Patrol Officers Augustus Ray and William Corcoran and Patrolmen Thomas Cavanaugh, Elwood Bailey and George Labouc went to the house and upon gaining entrance found much evidence of the nature of the business conducted there, for a quantity of liquor was seized. Philopena was arrested charged with violation of the liquor law on two counts, possession and keeping with intent to sell. He pleaded guilty when given a hearing in the police court and was fined $200 and costs on the first count by Judge Daniel M. Cronin and on the second charge a fine of $100 was imposed.

Found Still and Liquor

Last night the place of Leon Pableski, 39 Terrace avenue, was raided by Sergeant John Courtney, Automobile Patrol Officer Clarence Martin and Patrolman Michael Dorsey. A quantity of liquor and a still, which were found there, were seized. In court today, Pabloski was fined $100 and costs on the charge of keeping liquor with intent to sell and a fine of $150 and costs was meted out on a charge of maintaining and operating a still.

CONNIE BURT AND PALS GET OFF THROUGH RED TAPE

The resort at 16 Hill street, conducted by Connie Burt, colored, which has been raided several times, last night again received the attention of New London's vice squad, who, apparently are maintaining a close watch on the resort. Although the woman was arrested on a charge of conducting a disorderly house, and two other women, Barbara Kenney and Zelma Williams, colored, and a sailor, Thomas Dillon, white, were found in the house and were arrested on a charge of frequenting, the raid was not a success, for the accused were discharged when their cases were presented in court in presenting the case, Prosecuting Attorney Max Boyer informed the court that he recommended an absolute nolle being ordered in each case because he was without sufficient evidence upon which he could hope for a conviction in the event that the cases were tried. He said that the women and solitary man were arrested by a raiding squad who battered their way into the house without authority and that there was no semblance of information in his possession that a disorderly house existed at the time of the raid. Judge Cronin ordered a nolle entered and reminded the officers that they had no right to enter a building for the purposes of search without a warrant and from the utterance of the court it was plain that he endeavored to impress upon officers the necessity for conducting raids and making searches in strict conformity with the law. Last night about 11 o'clock a raiding force consisting of Sergeant John Courtney, Automobile Patrol Officer Clarence Martin and Patrolmen Frank Philopena and Michael Dorsey went to the house after Dillon had been seen to enter. When the officers demanded admittance it was refused when it became known to the occupants that the former did not possess a search warrant. After demanding admission for 20 minutes without success, the ocicers battered down a door and entered. They found the three women and Dillon seated at a kitchen table. A search of the house was made but no liquor was found.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Palace Theatre

One lone woman locked in a jury room with eleven men—and one of those men her lover. That is the dramatic situation to be found in "The Love Racket," which opens at the Palace theatre, here tomorrow, with a distinguished cast. "The Love Racket" which is the screen adaptation of the famous stage play, "The Woman on the Jury," features Dorothy Mackaill, Sidney Blackmer and others.

Alone among the jury she sits, one woman, with the fate of another woman held in her hands, another woman accused of murder, and the only way she can save her is to sacrifice her own happiness. It is a strangely new kind of courtroom drama, this "Love Racket," it is the epic of love, its agonizing, burning story. It vaults to the heights, sinks sullenly to the depths, engulfs itself in sacrifice and despair.

In this film one is taken behind the scenes, as it were, and initiated into the fascinating secrets of jury room procedure. Not many people have served on juries, and in consequence, this is a treat which will be new to many a person. The picture was directed by William A. Seiter, who has directed Corinne Griffith and Colleen Moore in some of their recent films.

Today, for the last times, the Palace flashes upon the screen that greatest of all film musical comedy extravaganzas, "The Gold Diggers of Broadway." This is the last day of the return showing, the last chance to see Winnie Lightner, Nancy Welford, Conway Tearle, Ann Pennington, Nick Lucas and all the other stars who have been gathered for this one production.

Postage Stamp Album Free

Postage stamp collecting is fast becoming popular in the United States, and the Palace theatre of this city is going to give every boy and girl an opportunity to start a stamp collection at no cost. Every boy and girl attending the Saturday matinees starting at Palace theatre will be given absolutely free a package of genuine foreign postage stamps, and they also will give away free, 50 beautifully illustrated junior postage stamp albums each Saturday matinee. So boys and girls here is a chance to start a valuable stamp collection at the expense of the Palace theatre.

The educational value of the postage stamp can only be appreciated by those who have enjoyed the collecting of stamps. How easily and readily the child accepts this form of learning because it is very entertaining. Stamps are generally in color and of unusually artistic reproduction, and it is an absolute fact that children become far more efficient in their school studies when versed in stamps, and in view of this many prominent educators highly recommend that the children take advantage of this most benefiting subject.

In addition to stamp collecting being educational and entertaining it is also very profitable. Stamps increase and never decrease in value. Stamps enhance in value to unbelievable proportions. Thousands of dollars have been paid for but one single stamp. Many stamp collections have been sold at fabulous prices and have thus proved very profitable to those collecting rare stamps throughout the world. Some of our foremost citizens are stamp collectors, not only for the intrinsic value of the stamps but for the entertainment this fascinating and pleasant endeavor affords. Any child now has the opportunity of acquiring a collection of stamps representing the different countries of the world by simply taking advantage of the offer of the Palace theatre.

Broadway Theatre

The songs, the yells, the slang, the comradeship and the romance—yes, there is romance, otherwise what good would the moon be?—of co-ed college life have been captured and imprisoned on film for the first time in the all-talking, all-action collegiate hit, "So This is College," which opens at the Broadway tomorrow. Here at last is a picture of college life, actually filmed at one of the biggest colleges of the country, the University of Southern California (where they raise football players!) filmed as it is, with all the usual moving picture hooey left out, but all the riotous fun and frolic left in. Telling a coherent story of two pals, each heart and soul in love with the same girl, their friendship turning to enmity, only to find out that she is a conscienceless flirt, "So This Is College" reaches the peak of entertainment. You see the noisy return to college after vacation, the new "rookies" from high school being rushed for the "frats," you step out in the various class proms, you attend the frat "stags" and smokers, you're on the sidelines for the big game with Stanford at the Los Angeles stadium before a roaring crowd of 100,000—in fact you're in college and a part of it in this captivating picture of American youth, screened as never before. The cast itself bespeaks youth, with Robert Montgomery, Elliot Nugent, "Ukelele Ike" Edwards and Sally Starr, a new find who will win everyone with her pep and vivacity. Max Davidson, Polly Moran, Lee Shumway and Phyllis Crane are also prominent in the cast, with the entire student body of the U. S. C. and their glee and musical teams making the college atmosphere real and life-like. The huge bonfire rally, the fraternity whoopee parties and the big U. S. C.-Stanford football classic are among the highlights of this great picture. The surrounding program is on a par with the feature, including the latest Paramount Sound newsreel, "Noah's Lark" the first all-talking cartoon ever made in which Father Noah takes his family and animals to Coney Island on a personally conducted tour, and "Mexicana," a singing, dancing musical revue produced in gorgeous natural colors. That merry musical drama of the A. E. F., "The Battle of Paris," with a long program of short featurettes closes with today's showings.

WESTERLY

GEORGE SHIPPEE SHOOTS MRS. STEWART AND HIMSELF

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., Dec. 19—There was a double tragedy resulting from a death pact in the early hours of Thursday morning at 100 Canal street when Mrs. Edith M. Stewart, '5, and George Shippee, 40, both living at the same address came to their death by revolver bullets, in what is believed to have been premeditated murder and suicide.

George Shippee, former patient at the State Sanitarium at Wallum Lake, R. I., shot and killed Mrs. Stewart, widow of Harry Stewart, and then committed suicide. A note found in the overcoat pocket of Shippee, which was signed by the couple, gave evidence that the act was premeditated. The note read: "This is a suicide pact." Signed: George Shippee and Edith Stewart.

Five shots were fired from a 25-calibre Colt automatic pistol and through all the noise of the shooting four small children of Mrs. Stewart, the oldest nine and youngest one and one-half years, slept, not knowing what had happened until they awoke as usual later in the day Thursday.

The police believe that the woman may have fired the first shot. They earned that Shippee has a wife who is employed in Providence.

The fact that persons residing in the house heard loud talking in the Stewart apartment some time before the first shot was fired, has led the authorities to believe that Shippee might have forced the woman to sign the suicide note. The message was written in ink on an ordinary piece of writing paper and was wrinkled in Shippee's pocket. This note was taken by Dr. M. H. Scanlon, medical examiner, who was called to the Stewart home and investigated the affair with Chief Thomas E. Brown.

When the bodies were discovered lying on the bed, both clad in night clothes, Shippee's hands were folded on his chest, the weapon being held by a death grip in his right hand. Five shots were fired from a 6-chamber weapon. Examination of the body of Mrs. Stewart showed that four bullets had pierced her breast, two of the bullets passing through her body. One went through the mattress. Shippee shot himself through the temple.

There was one loaded cartridge left in the revolver. An examination by Dr. Scanlon showed that the bullets aimed at Mrs. Stewart were fired at close range as her night dress was badly scorched.

The police secured the first information that there was trouble at the Stewart home when a call came by telephone to Lieut. George H. Champlin from Mr. and Mrs. Henry Richards who occupy a tenement adjacent to the Stewart apartment. With Officer Robert Kessel, Lieut. Champlin hurried to the Stewart home. They found the doors locked. From the landing place on the stairs leading to the second story they looked through a kitchen window and could see into the bedroom where an electric light was burning. The officers saw the bodies of two persons lying on the bed. The kitchen door was forced.

Other occupants of the apartment house had heard the muffled reports. Both Shippee and Mrs. Stewart were dead when the police entered the room. Mrs. Stewart was lying in a natural sleeping pose on the bed and the body of Shippee lay crosswise, his head hanging over the edge of the bed.

The officers, knowing that Mrs. Stewart was the mother of four children, first directed their attention to them. The children, June, aged 9, Duncan, 8, Ella, 6, and Edith, the one and a half year old baby, were found asleep in two beds in a room out from the living room. The children were not disturbed by the officers and slept until the usual hour Thursday morning when they found Mr. and Mrs. Richards in charge of their home.

Mr. and Mrs. Richards when questioned said that they heard a loud voice down in the Stewart apartment, which sounded like that of a man. This noise was followed by the report of four shots and about two minutes later the fifth shot was heard. They then realized that something serious had happened and called the police.

The bodies were turned over to a local undertaker at about 3 o'clock Thursday morning and Chief Brown placed Mr. and Mrs. Richards in charge of the children until proper authorities might care for them.

The police know little about George Shippee. Papers found in his pockets showed that he belonged to the Odd Fellows in Pawtucket and the police say that he has been a patient at the State Tuberculosis institution at Wallum Lake. How long he has been away from the institution the police were unable to determine at an early hour today. Among his belongings was a letter addressed to him in the care of Mrs. Stewart which was dated December 12, last. The police thus draw the conclusion that he has been in Westerly since that date. The police believe that Mrs. Stewart became acquainted with Shippee while visiting her husband at Wallum Lake, the husband having died there March 12, 1929.

Mrs. Stewart was born in Abington, England. According to the marriage certificate she married Harry Stewart at the parish of the Church of St. John the Evangelist, May 17, 1917.

Mrs. Stewart had been a citizen of this country since last September. The authorities learned that Shippee's wife is employed in Providence and he has two sisters, Mrs. H. Forsberg of Providence, and Rena M. Salisbury of Pawtucket.

Miss Lucy Crowley, executive secretary of the Westerly chapter of the Red Cross, took charge of the children Thursday morning and it is understood an effort will be made to procure a housekeeper so that the children may remain at their home for some time.

For their annual Christmas observance this year employes of Westerly Automatic Telephone Co. enjoyed a turkey dinner Thursday evening in the rooms of the telephone company on Main street. This took the place of the Christmas treep rogram held in previous years.

Big Derrick Providence-Bound

The large steel-boomed hoisting derrick, "Northwestern" of the A. L. Savin Co. of Hartford, of the Northwestern Engineering Co. passed through the business section of Westerly at 1:30 p. m. Thursday. The ponderous engine was loaded on a low gear of front wheel drive and was preceded by a heavy motor truck with stone ballast. Coming over the Boston Post road from New London the convoy was bound for Providence to be engaged in a state road construction job. It required considerable maneuvering to get through Dixon square and up High and Canal streets where care had to be taken to avoid the overhead wires and traffic beacons and at the same time care for motor traffic on these busy streets. At the overhead New Haven railroad bridge on Canal street the stack and even the exhaust steam pipe had to be removed to permit passage. To avoid crossing the west of High street overhead bridges the route by way of Canal street and Railroad drive was taken before the cranks and low gear was able to reach the cement roadbed of the Noose Neck Hill route of No. 1A. state road at High street.

Erecting Safety Fence

Between the east and west-bound tracks of the New Haven railroad at the Westerly station carpenters in the employ of the railroad have begun the erection of a wooden fence to prevent the dangerous practice of crossing the main line tracks. In the freight wreck of the first of the week when 23 freight cars were derailed and smashed that the former iron fence was dragged from its fastenings and folded up like so much ribbon candy. Already there have been a number of close escapes from serious accidents through passengers crossing in front of trains.

Hilltop.

Come take a walk with me one day
Beyond the wood, across the lea,
And I will lead you on the way
To hills that loom, where winds are free;
And where the sky will seem to stand
So still, and be so close to you
That if you raise a questing hand
You dust a finger with its blue.

We need a day when clouds are white
And floating high above the pale
Where dimly falls the leopard-light
Of sunlight sifting through the veil.
Perhaps a wheeling hawk will soar
And from a stark old oak that grows
Exposed to all the north wind's roar
Will wing a pair of startled crows.

I know a knoll that faces west
Where we can sit and watch the day's Cool shadows creep from crest to crest
And mist the hills with purple haze;
Then, when the heights begin to blur
And once again we cross the lea,
You will be richer than you were
Before you climbed the hill with me.

—George Lawson.

OBSERVING CHRISTMAS

(Written Specially for The Bulletin.)

Some heretic asked, soon after our November festival had passed: 'How much of it was thanks-giving, and how much was just turkey-stuffing?"

One is tempted to speculate, as the Christmas 'ha-ha, ho-ho reverberates around the frontiers of Christendom, how much of the expressed hilarity is real and how much is put on as a play-acting Santa puts on his stuffed paunch and his white whiskers and his red robe. Convention has decreed that such are the outward appurtenances of the conventional Santa Claus and so papa or gran'pa or uncle puts them on, with strings and gum-stickum and numerous pins,—and a very emphatic thought judiciously muffled wish that the whole durn tomfoolery were over.

One of the most urgent and compelling impulses to pessimism is that afforded by the spectacle of what "human nature," given free rein and ample rope, has made of the Christmastide. If that "human nature" has so debased and tainted the festival of the Christ-child of the Babe in the Bethlehem manger, how can it be trusted not to debase and taint every thing else it touches?

The pessimist answers promptly that it can't be. And we who protest against him and actually want to be optimists, we simply fortify him with confirmation of his pessimism with every stone of rebuke we throw at him.

For years people of finer tastes and keener susceptibilities have been warning that Christmas was in danger of being commercialized. Their day has passed. The prophets foreseeing danger can now give place to the historians chronicling its arrival. Christmas is no longer exposed to commercialization, for the excellent reason that its commercialization is already practically complete.

So universal has the understanding of this come to be that even the cartoonists and self-called "funny men" of the newspapers are taking it for subject of their lampoons. I'm this very moment looking at a cartoon by "Ding," the very clever artist of the Herald-Tribune, which depicts a crushed and nerve-distracted paterfamilias holding his head with both hands to prevent its splitting, as he contemplates the list of gifts he is called upon to hunt up, dig out, dive after and audit, while a very business-like Santa Claus, with a profit-calculating gleam in his eye, holds a big order-book and urges poor pater with a "Yes, yes, go on!"

In dozens of cities merchants, recognizing the value to them of the popular obsession, institute every year Christmas parades with all sorts of quaintly accoutred characters from Santa and his reindeer, to Mother Goose and Jack the Giant-killer, all to draw the extra trade which the conventional gift-making of the season involves.

For months before Christmas factories and shops all over the so-called civilized world are feverishly at work turning out fripperies and folderols for the Christmas trade. For days before Dec. 25 the post-offices and the railroads and the express companies are smothered and submerged in a flood of "Christmas matter"—some small part of which represents the spirit of benevolence or friendship, but most of which is simply the result of a mad scramble to pay back last Christmas's debts or anticipate this one's expectations

The merchants and the other followers of commerce are not to blame for this. They simply, like wise stewards, take advantage of the opportunity afforded them by popular improvidence to 'make hay while the sun shines." It isn't they who have commercialized Christmas All they do is to accept our commercialization of it and turn our unwisdom to their own profit.

It's a curious and difficultly explainable but an undeniable trait of human nature to run everything it handles into the ground There is hardly a single human organization in existence which didn't originate as a benevolent and well-intended help to humanity. And there is hardly one in existence which, under the management of "human nature," hasn't deteriorated into a drag or a shackle. What was meant as an aid in the carrying of a load had itself become an added burden. That seems to be the almost inevitable outcome of even the best meant endeavors. They start out with colors flying gaily and lances gleaming brightly in the sunshine of hope; they end up with colors trailing in the mire and lances broken and shivered in defeat.

No poet ever packed into a single line more of truth and of vision than Tennyson when he put into the mouth of King Arthur, accepting heroically the end of his goodly Table Round, the words: "Lest one good custom should corrupt the world."

I think I have quoted that line before, and I probably shall again, if the old typewriter hangs together much longer, and my fingers continue able to pick out the letters. For it is a simply wonderful line. It tells the stories of thousands of aspirations and hopes, of thousands of high endeavors, of thousands of devoted services, all foredoomed to failure as soom as "human nature" got its claws into them.

Have you such a thing as a Bible in the house? If so, look up Jeremiah, 17, 9, and consider that prophet's explanation of various things which puzzle would-be optimists.

There never was a better custom than that of Christmas-keeping. The Festival of the Children; the anniversary of that Birth which forever sanctified all childhood; the glorification of the cradle, when the wisest men brought their most precious gifts to the Baby King.

The spirit which instituted the observance of Christmas was a wholly beautiful and admirable one. 'Except ye all be as little children,"—you know the rest. There was something more than mere sentiment in setting aside one day for the little ones who had just come, "trailing clouds of glory from heaven which is their home." There was something specially fitting in putting that day on the accepted anniversary of the Christ-child.

But "human nature" has, again in this case, had its will of the day It has wrested the observance from its proper form and turned it into a commercial proposition. It has ceased to be the children's day, entirely, and has come to be a sort of conventionalized "swapping" time.

Instead of letting the heart explore the blessedness of giving where there can be no expectation of return, people make "lists" so they can be sure not to forget Aunt Jane or Cousin Gladys or the mail carrier or the furnace man.

And the worst of it is that Aunt Jane and Cousin Gladys and the mail carrier and the furnace man come to expect that they will be "remembered," and consider themselves slighted if they are not.

All of which may be quite "business-like." But wherein is it Christmasy?

What is its association with either the Manger of Bethlehem or the cradle of Hardscrabble Hill?

The other day I was privileged to take a peep into the locked closet where were being kept in readiness the gifts destined for a certain only son, of three or four years. There were electric trains and erector blocks and a bright red sled and a dozen or more other contraptions, all from some store's "Toyland," all made to sell to the first buyer with the money. And the mater heaved a little sigh as she remarked: "He'll probably have most of them broken in a week."

Coming homewards, my thoughts reverted to an old Christmas which I can remember, because it was the first one I ever had, after babyhood. There was a pair of fleecy mittens which mother had knit evenings after I had been more or less forcibly retired. There was an orange and two sticks of striped candy—or was it three? I think there must have been three, one from mother and one from father and one from older sister. And there was a sled, which father had whittled and draw-shaved out of first-growth hickory, and shod with bits of worn-out cutter-shoes. It wasn't painted; it wasn't even sandpapered perfectly smooth. But the governor had spent long hours making it into a perfectly practical "jumper" which not even a destructive boy could smash, hours when I was carefully watched to see that I didn't intrude on him and spoil the "surprise."

That was the first Christmas which I can recall and, selfish little animals as boys are, I remember how I appreciated the loving thoughts and love-inspired labor which had been put into it.

The oranges and the candy were soon disposed of; the mittens wore into rags in time, but that sturdy sled resisted all my abuse of it till I had grown into my teens and considered "slidin' down hill" rather beneath my overweening dignity.

It is not likely that that Christmas cost anybody as much as ten cents in money. But it meant more to one small boy than $10 worth of factory-made doo-dads mean to similar youngsters, today.

The true Christmas doesn't depend on things given. 'For the gift without the giver is naught." It is not a time for trading gifts in the expectation of getting gifts in return. It is the one day of the year when the heart should take charge and the business mind take a back seat and keep mum.

And it is especially the children's day. They come first Their elders are second considerations.

Down dropped the policeman's arm and immediately the traffic stream was in motion, one car shooting out in front of the other vehicles.

At that moment a pretty girl made an indiscreet dash for an island in the center of the roadway.

She would have been knocked down by the swiftly moving car had not the driver jammed on his brakes.

INTERESTING GAME IS BROUGHT DOWN BY HUNTERS

Five years ago this season, a pair of Canadian lynxes, commonly called bob cats, was known to have wintered in the densely wooded districts off to the east of Pachaug pond. Tracks in the snow, down in the vicinity of Arba Browning's farm, showed on several occasions where they had crossed the road. Jim Crary saw one of the animals, while he was ice fishing with tip-ups, over in Burton's cove. Several attempts to trap the creatures proved a failure. Mr. Watson lay in wait for the pair, with his musket all one night without getting one within range. Last summer, on the Browning farm, deer did considerable damage to growing peach trees, and three were killed as they were devouring the new tender twigs. The latest marauder showed up one night last week. Again peculiar foot-prints in the snow gave full-time evidence that a strange animal had been abroad. Mr. Browning is some hunter himself and a dead shot, but believing that more fire-arms would be needed, judging from the sport, he sent out the hunters SOS, with the result that just at nightfall, Wednesday, reinforcements arrived from the borough. Two well known hunters and trappers appeared, real two-gun men of the wilds, Jimmie [illegible] and Linwood Page. It was a real night, rain fell in torrents, but the trio was determined and desperate, as they secreted themselves in the corn-house. Along after midnight, one of the dogs showed signs of uneasiness, and Jim let all four of them out. Straightway, with much howling and barking the hounds made for the nearby orchard. Closely followed by the hunters. In the top of a tall peach tree some sort of an animal could be dimly seen, clinging to the topmost branches. A handy bean pole brought him to the ground. It was a hedge hog, seldom if ever seen in this section. Mr. Browning has the game in a box, where visitors may see the little chap eat carrots, and stick on his "fretful" quills.

4 lbs. bananas 25c, large California Navel oranges 75c dozen, large grape fruit 2 for 25c, English walnuts and fancy mixed nuts 21c, 3 lbs. 60c, are among the hundred specials at Dearnley's.—Adv.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA AND ITS WASTE LANDS

From the Hotel Barbara Worth, Dec. 10, the Ross party writes: I have seen more waste land in the last two weeks than would cover all New England.

We were anxious to reach Phoenix, Arizona, as we expected to get our mail there and thanks to Jamie Palmer we received letters we were wishing to get.

These wastelands were mountains and deserts in Texas, New Mexico and Arizona, and today we have come nearly 100 miles in Southern California, through worthless land. From Tuscon, Arizona, north to Phoenix we saw some cattle and off the U. S. highway were copper and silver mines. As soon as water is put on the land there is a transformation that is almost beyond belief.

Coming into Phoenix, perhaps for 5 or 6 miles, were ditches of water beside the road and although we had seen our first palm trees in El Paso, Tex., this long street, perfectly straight, was lined with palms.

Leaving Phoenix on the U. S. No. 80 route which we have followed about 2,000 miles, the irrigated land was most productive. There were acres and acres of spinach and more of lettuce. I thought there were hundreds of acres, but just before we reached this city, a sign read, "Mr. Co and So Ranch, 4,000 acres of lettuce," so I think in Arizona there may have been hundreds of acres of lettuce.

The cotton fields were very extensive, thousands of acres, and this cotton was very large, some six or seven feet high, and the crop is not half picked. Advertisements in the papers asking for cotton pickers, $1.35 per 100 lbs. Most of the cotton pickers were Indians. The land is divided into sections and quarter-sections and our road would go west about 2 miles then turn south about a mile and at every other corner would be a group of tents, sometimes as many as twenty and of large size. The Indian tents were of the cone or tepee style and around these tents were children playing. Children of 10 or 12 years old were picking cotton. After the cotton fields, came fields of hundreds of cattle mostly white faced or Herefords. Then were a few hundred head of Holsteins, black and white.

Then came sheep and lambs; the lambs were from a day old to two weeks old. These sheep and cattle were a foot tall and when the sheep lay down we could just see their backs. In one field I saw small black birds resting on the sheeps' backs and on their heads. Then came the desert, hundreds of miles. Yesterday was the first day when we were really hot and uncomfortable.

Last night was extremely cold. We stayed in a little town called Welton. It was so dusty and as the sun was setting, the sun shining through the dust, it was impossible to see just where the road turned.

This place had been recommended to us. The Welton hotel was one story, about as long as from your house to the Baptist cemetery, a hall through the middle and rooms on each side. They were very kind to us there and, as the host and hostess owned the whole city, except the post office, they did all they could for us. They owned the filling station, the "cafe", etc.

But the dust! This dust, in the sun light, is a pure white and at a distance looks like steam. It is just about as opaque as a large jet of steam from a locomotive.

This morning we left Welton and, after a dozen miles, we came to an oiled road. This led us up through a mountain pass for 11 miles, so it is said, but I hardly think it was so far. Now the desert spread out into a vast plain with hardly a vestage of vegetation.

At Yuma we saw the first oranges. This land is of course watered. At Yuma all of our baggage was examined, every bag and coat and parcel.

There were state officers trying to prevent the introduction of the citron fly and the boll weevil. I said to the officer this must be sport to examine everybody's belongings. He laughed and said: "Now see those two women? They had two small nugget-head cactus plants and we had to take them away from them. I tell you, Mister, it was no sport!"

One of the officers having seen our registration plates, said, "I think I can help you if you stay in California after the first of Jan., 1930, and he was kind enough to fill out a blank for me and said, "Now, on or before the first of the year your plates will cost you three dollars and your license one dollar." I thought it was good of him. Yesterday we came around the great Gila bend.

This bend is the Gila river—it is somewhat larger than the bend of the river in Lisbon.

We were driving almost directly west, when we turned south, crossed the river on a very long iron bridge, (built, I understand, by the federal government) kept south for about 25 miles, then turned west again. Some bend.

We drive miles (sometimes 10 to 20) and do not see a home. Along this road we meet or overtake men that are on foot, some going west, some east. The older men all have a bundle on their backs and a canteen hanging by their sides. The younger men were not so well prepared, either for cold nights or thirst.

Tomorrow we expect to reach San Diego.

EASTERN VOLUNTOWN

Mr. Bitgood and Jefferson Barber hired man, cut and drew wood to the wood pile for Mr. Bitgood.

James Dixon is quite sick of rheumatism.

Joseph Bitgood of Voluntown is confined to the house with rheumatism and his mother, Margaret Bitgood, is quite feeble. She has a bad sore on her forehead.

Maurice Harington called at the Pine Grove farm Tuesday.

Visitors at Mr. and Mrs. Lee Remington's Sunday were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Barber and son Joel and granddaughter Ruth Richmond of Jewett City and they had callers from Providence. They were Mr. and Mrs. Harry Leonard and Mr. and Mrs. Fraisler.

Mr. Remington of Oneco recently butchered three hogs. One weighed 313, one 260 and one 209. They were all spring pigs.

Mr. and Mrs. William Bitgood received news of their grandson being married. It was quite a surprise to them. They wish them good luck and hope they will live to be as old as they are and always be happy.

Mrs. Bitgood had a telephone from Mrs. John Stankovich Wednesday morning. She had not talked with her before in a long while. Mrs. Stankovich used to live near Mrs. Bitgood. Now she lives in Moosup on a large farm where they keep lots of cows and young stock. They have three horses.

VOLUNTOWN

Nature's great snow removers, fog, rain and warm weather, have been at work and as a result the village streets are practically clear. Wells, streams and ponds are showing the effects of the thaw.

Men of the Eastern Connecticut Power Co. are at work stringing electric light wires and with good weather it is possible that the hopes of the residents of the village for electric lights during the Christmas season may be realized.

Tax Collector George B. Sheldon, who has just started his first term in that office, has been busy the past month collecting personal taxes and has made an enviable record. On the rate book were 266 names and Saturday evening when he closed his books he had collected taxes from 230 persons, or nearly 100 per cent. The six whom he has not heard from are all out of town and will be assessed an extra dollar. This record will be hard to beat.

There was a large crowd in attendance at a dance in Union hall, Friday evening. Mohegan orchestra, of Norwich, furnished music.

Christmas decorations are beginning to appear in town. Wreaths and other decorations adorn the windows of many local homes.

MOOSUP

At Moosup Baptist church Thursday evening, the December covenant and consecration meeting was held. There was also business for consideration, the appointment of the dedication committee, the meeting of the deacons, and matters of choir vestments and preparations for dedication for decision.

This (Friday) night there will be a final dress rehearsal of the Christmas pageant "The Way" to be presented by 27 characters besides the choir Sunday afternoon.

Sunday, the morning service will be at 10:45 and Sunday school at 12. "The Way," a Christmas pageant of peace and brotherhood, is to be presented at 4:30, Sunday afternoon, in the church. The pageant is given in three parts. The first part, Waiting for the Christ, presents the following characters: The Voice, Rev. R. W. E. DeWolfe; Abraham, Harry West; Moses, Paul Roper; Elijah, George Sanderson; Isaiah, Anthony Parazino.

The second part depicts The Coming of the Christ: Mary, Miss Alice Smith; the Angel of the Lord, Mrs. Mack Mott; Herald Angels, Dorothy Mortimer, Margaret Hope, Dorothy Barnes, Dorothy Bennett; Shepherds, William Pratt, Oliver Pratt, Olin Miller; Wise Men, Roy Playdon, Edward Mortimer, Arthur Mott.

The Christ Among Us is the third part and in it the following represent the nations of the world: China, Mrs. Paul Roper; Japan, Mrs. George Sanderson; Italy, Mrs. Anthony Parazino; France, Mrs. Edward Mortimer; Germany, Mrs. Andrew Pember; Russia, Mrs. Roy Playdon; England, Chalsey Dawley. At the close the usual silver offering will be received. A choir of fifteen voices will sing hymns which interpret the actions of the characters. There will not be any service at Sterling Hill Sunday morning. The Sterling Hill congregation will unite in the local Baptist church pageant service.

The Christmas tree will be held Monday night in Moosup and Tuesday evening on Sterling Hill.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Dec. 19—(AP)—Sports at Harvard closed the year ending June 30, 1929, with a surplus of $217,171.92, the report of Henry L. Shattuck, treasurer of Harvard college, today revealed.

The athletic association during the 12 months ending last June 30 took in $1,070,617.61, of which $618,892 was contributed by varsity football. Receipts increased approximately $56,000 over those for the preceding year and expenses were reduced approximately $52,000.

The excess for 1928-29 added to previous surpluses, gave the association a total of $611,111.62 on hand, from which $500,000 will be taken to complete the new indoor athletic building now under construction.

Except for football all the sports conducted at Harvard showed a deficit, the largest being contributed by rowing, which cost $39,705.57 and brought in only $2,387.66. Track was a close second, costing $47,336.87, and netting only $12,398.15. Baseball and hockey each cost approximately $5,000 more than they returned to the H. A. A. coffers. Minor sports and physical education cost $94,588.95 and brought in nothing.

FORDHAM CONQUERS YALE IN EASY FASHION

NEW YORK, Dec. 19—(AP)—Fordham's basketball team conquered Yale of the Eastern Intercollegiate league here tonight 30 to 16. Except for a brief period at the start of the game Yale never threatened.

Coach Ed Kelleher of Fordham started his second team as usual but sent the regulars in soon after the start with Yale leading, 4 to 2. The regulars quickly shot into the lead and never relinquished it. Yale put on one rally that carried the score from 17 to 4 against the Blue to 17 to 12 but the Maroons pulled away steadily.

It was a fast well-played game featured by clever passing on both sides. Yale found the Fordham five-man defense very difficult to pierce. Albie Booth performed very capably for Yale although he did not score.

The victory, third in succession for the Maroons, continued Fordham's record of never having been beaten by an Eastern Intercollegiate league team.

RICE NAMES HIS CHOICE FOR ALL-AMERICAN TEAM

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—(AP)—Collier's Weekly, which for years published the All-America football selections of the late Walter Camp, today made public an All-Star team for 1929, picked by Grantland Rice.

Rice's selections, which include six from the middle west, four from the east and one from the southwest, follow:

Ends: Donchess, of Pittsburgh, Schoonover, of Arkansas.

Tackles: Nagurski, of Minnesota; Sleight, of Purdue.

Center: Ben Ticknor, of Harvard.

Quarterback: Carideo, of Notre Dame.

Halfbacks: Cagle, of Army; Glassgow, of Iowa.

Fullback: Welch, of Purdue.

NO GOLF AT LOCAL COURSE UNTIL FURTHER NOTICE

The green committee of the Norwich Golf club has notified the members of the club that there will be no more winter golf playing at the local course until further notice. The rains of the past few days have softened the fairways and greens to such an extent that considerable damage could be done by playing on them. A few of the more ardent golfers have been playing regularly at the course despite the cold and snowy weather. This was all right as long as the ground was frozen hard but the softness of the ground at the present time puts the course in such shape that a great deal of harm can be done.

JOLIAT STARS AS LES CANADIENS BEAT RANGERS

MONTREAL, Que., Dec. 19—(AP)—Back in the lineup after an absence enforced by an injured shoulder, Aurel Joliat scored four goals and led Les Canadiens of Montreal to a 7 to 2 victory over the New York Rangers here tonight. The victory was ample revenge for the 6-3 pasting the Canadiens absorbed at the hands of the Rangers in New York last week.

Joliat scored twice in the first period, once in the second and once in the third. The other Canadien goals were scored by Lepine and Larochelle in the second period and Morenz in the third. Bun Cook scored both Ranger goals in the second period.

MORGAN DEFENDS CROWN AGAINST BASS TONIGHT

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—(AP)—For the sixteenth time in four years, Tod Morgan, of Seattle, Wash., junior lightweight champion, will defend his title tomorrow night at 130 pounds, this time in Madison Square Garden, against Benny Bass, of Philadelphia, in a 15-round bout.

Despite the "trick" aspect of the class, invented by Tex Rickard for Johnny Dundee seven years ago, Morgan has made the division popular and himself wealthy by whipping contenders as fast as they appeared. Morgan has risked the crown he won from Mike Ballerino at least a half dozen times here.

In Bass, a rugged puncher, Morgan is tackling the roughest of his contenders. Bass fought Tony Canzoneri for the featherweight championship in his last major appearance here and waged a spectacular struggle despite a broken bone in his shoulder. The bout will be the first title test in the Garden within a year. Bass is a 7 to 5 favorite.

Morgan, like Dundee for whom the class was originated, is a bit too heavy for the featherweights but just shy enough in poundage to be unable to meet lightweights on an equal footing. His tireless campaigning has brought him purses of $150,000 in the past four years.

In the ten round semi-final, Al Ridgeway, Jersey City featherweight who is being groomed for a "shot" at Kid Chocolate, will meet Nel Tarleton, of England. Another busy fighter from the British Isles, Dom Volante, will engage Frankie Marchese of New York in an eight-round go.

McEWAN DENIES HE SENT MOVIES TO ARMY

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—(AP)—Taking cognizance of reports that he had furnished motion pictures of Stanford's football team in action to the Army, Captain John J. McEwan, head football coach of the University of Oregon today issued an emphatic statement of denial to the Associated Press.

His statement follows:

"I wish to deny emphatically the report that motion pictures of the Oregon-Stanford football game were sent by me to West Point. These pictures were taken for the specific purpose of showing my own players the mistakes they made against Stanford so that they could correct them. No West Point coach or player has ever seen those pictures. The report that I had sent them is untoward and untrue.

"My plans for the ensuing year are to continue my duties at the University of Oregon. I shall return to Eugene, Oregon, about January 6. I expect to fulfill my contract, which has one year more to run, completely and I trust the university will do the same."

Captain McEwan's statement was issued as a result of confusing reports as to his plans, arising from the fact he announced in November his resignation at Oregon, effective upon the termination of his contract in 1930.

TWO MORE ADDED TO HIGH GOAL POLO PLAYERS

NEW YORK, Dec. 20.—(AP)— Earle A. S. Hopping, young polo internationalist, and C. R. Barrett, a former teammate of Winston Guest at Yale, were added to the list of high goal players of the indoor galloping game today. Both were ranked at seven goals in the revised handicap list announced by the Indoor Polo association for the new season.

The top ranking players were unchanged, Guest still leading all others as the only ten-goal man indoors while Archer W. Kinny and Gerard S. Smith, New York players, remained at nine goals.

Although one of the country's leading stars and a member of the United States team in the international matches of 1928, Hopping never has played the indoor game and neither he nor Barrett was ranked last year. He will play with the Riding club and Barrett with Guest's Optimists.

Handicaps of several Chicago district players were revised upward and seven new clubs were elected to the association.

BLIZZARD FORCES ARMY TEAM TO FOREGO PRACTICE

CHICAGO, Dec. 19.—(AP)—Caught in the blizzard that is paralyzing traffic throughout the middle west, Army's football team, en route to California for an intersectional game with Stanford, had to forego practice plans today and remain in its special train.

The cadets were three hours late arriving in Chicago and it was dark by the time their cars were switched from the New York Central tracks to the Santa Fe for the journey westward. Hence, plans for their first outdoor practice of their trip at Galesburg, Ill., were abandoned. However, the cadets should arrive in Syracuse, Kan., in time for a drill tomorrow.

All were pronounced in good physical condition but slightly weary from the slow, snowbound journey.

COUGARS DOWN BLACKHAWKS IN ROUGH ENCOUNTER

DETROIT, Dec. 19.—(AP) —Holding the lead all the way after the first period, Detroit's Cougars downed the Chicago Blackhawks, 4 to 3, here tonight, in a rough National league hockey contest that called for 19 penalties.

George Hay, Cougar right winger, came through with two goals to keep the Detroit lead intact each time it was threatened, and the Cougars showed improved skating throughout the game. The Hawks held the only goal scored in the first period, Frank Ingram tallying on Arbour's pass. Chicago's team arrived several hours overdue and the team showed plainly the effect of a long train ride, tiring after the second period, but putting up a hard fight to get into the lead. Several roughing penalties and one minor fistic encounter marked the second period, during which the Cougars piled up three goals.

VANCOUVER, B. C., Dec. 19.—(AP)—Bill Phillips, captain of the Vancouver team in the Pacific Coast Hockey league, has been sold to the Windsor club of the International Hockey league for $10,000 it was announced here today. The Vancouver right winger leaves for the east tomorrow and will reach Windsor next Tuesday.

CRIMSON ATHLETICS DISCUSSED AT FOOTBALL BANQUET

BOSTON, Dec. 19—(AP)—Harvard's varsity football team made merry at a victory dinner in the Harvard club tonight, presided over by Governor William Tudor Gardiner of Maine, former Harvard athlete.

There was much good humored fun in song and story at the expense of Yale, whom the Crimson defeated 10 to 6 this year, and concerning Eli's great little halfback, Albie Booth, whom Harvard stopped, but at the end of it all came Director of Athletics William J. Bingham's pronouncement greeted with ringing cheers:

"No one can or ever will take Yale's place on the Harvard schedule as the final and the objective game of the season."

The question, is football over-emphasized, received the attention of the two principal speakers during the more serious moments of the evening. Said Governor Gardiner, "the better you play the game, and the better your football organization is, the more you will enjoy the sport."

Bingham asserted: "Never while I am in charge of sports at Harvard will the football team be overworked. Football never will be started before September 15 and no football practice will last more than two hours a day."

The athletic director also threw some light on the crew situation and on the appointment "to the coaching staff" of Charles J. Whiteside, former Syracuse coach. Remarking that Harvard has had five head coaches in ten years and that he didn't blame any one for not wanting the job, Bingham continued:

"This year we were faced with two possibilities. We could either go out and get one of the few successful coaches in the country or we could take a young and promising coach and hope that he would develop. Harvard has taken the second course."

Bingham has so far refused to say that Whiteside will be the new head coach.

Coach Arnold Horween, who will return for another year, was on from Chicago. In his speech he asked that Harvard men follow the example of Yale and throw a win-or-lose party like the annual affair at Roberts' barn in Montclair, N. J. He pointed out that at present the Crimson team is feted only on the occasions of victory over Yale.

Brief talks by Captain James Barrett and Captain-elect Benjamin Ticknor, the presentation of gold footballs to 23 lettermen and silver footballs to the rest of the varsity squad and the seconds, and moving pictures of the great victory were other events of the evening.

MANY INTERSECTIONAL GAMES SCHEDULED BY COAST TEAMS

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 19.—(AP) — Intersectional football will reach a new 'high' during the 1930 season as result of games scheduled by Pacific coast conference teams and independent far western college elevens with eastern and mid-western opponents.

Stanford listed two—Minnesota at Minneapolis October 11, and Dartmouth at Palo Alto, Cal., November 29.

St. Mary's college, the little independent team that finished the 1929 season with the best record in the far west, eight victories, one tie, and no defeats, will show its wares in New York city next November 15 against Fordham.

PLAYERS FOR ANNUAL EAST-WEST GAME ARRIVE

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 19.—(AP) — Football stars from all parts of the country who will make up the East-West teams in the annual Shriners charity game here New Year's day arrived here today.

The Eastern squad of 22 players, headed by Coaches Andy Kerr of Colgate, and Dick Hanley, of Northwestern, came in this morning and turned out for a light practice in the afternoon. The workout consisted of kicking and passing the ball to unlimber muscles stiffened by train travel.

Twenty-one members of the Western team had checked in today with only Tom Churchill, University of Oklahoma end, missing. He will arrive Saturday. Coach Percy Locey of the West squad had his players out for a morning practice but made no attempt to select a starting eleven.

After A Defense Man

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Dec. 19.—(AP)—Manager Freddie Frederickson of the Pittsburgh National league hockey team today said he is negotiating with a Canadian club for a defense man but has no intention of disposing of Hib Milks and Harold Darragh, Pirate ice stars, despite offers received from the New York Rangers and the Toronto Leafs. Frederickson said he had rejected an offer from the Rangers of $35,000 for the two men and an offer of $25,000 and Dit Pettinger by the Leaf officials.

De Glane Throws Hanson

BOSTON, Dec. 19.—(AP)—Henri De Glane of France threw Jack Hanson of California in a feature wrestling match at the Opera house here tonight. It took the Frenchman one hour and 32 minutes to do the trick.

In the semi-final Ed George of the University of Michigan, tossed Bob Wilkie of Buffalo, in five minutes and seven seconds.

I see where a man has used the same collar-button for 37 years.

And on top of that he says he has spent only a few hours looking for it during those 37 years, and then found it in his sock.

He's a minister up in Taunton, Mass. and used to preach in Danielson so we really cant doubt his word, but just the same it's some record, if we know our collar-buttons.

There's only two ways in which this record could be made, one is that the man wore the same shirt for 37 years, or second, that the darned thing grew to his neck. Both of which seem improbable.

But just 'magine wearing the same collar-buttor for 37 years, day in and day out, and what a companion that collar-button must be to him. I don't suppose he could preach a sermon if that button wasn't nestling against his Adam's apple or his backbone, depending on whether it's a front or a back.

I imagine if he ever went to church without that button he'd feel like he was indecently nude. And think of the green spot that button has worn on his neck, if it is that kind of a button.

That collar-button should have a seat of honor in the Smithsonian institute. I don't believe there's another collar-button as old in the world now actively performing its intended function like this one is doing. There may be other collar-buttons as old but they have never been found.

The claim of the clergyman sort of knocks the cartoonist out of one of his old standbys—the poor husband getting into his dress-suit and losing his collar-button. It also disproves the old simile of "as elusive as a collar-button."

Those are out from now on. But just think what it means to the collar-button manufacturers. You'll see a collar-button advertisement with a photograph of the 1892 model with the caption, "In use for 37 years." Or, "Our collar-buttons are easy to find." Or, "No more worry for the wife—our collar-buttons can't be lost."

That lost collar-button feature has been one of the greatest promoters of family squabbles since Eve handed Adam the well known apple. Many a divorce has had its inception in the insignificant lost collar-button episode.

How many women have tapped holes in their dainty evening slippers waiting for friend husband to find the lost button? How many men have uttered their first oath while on their knees, peering under the bed or the dresser, to find that button? It was the elusiveness of the collar-button that made the shirt with attached collar so popular.

Now, if that clergyman will only sell his formula for keeping a collar-button in use for 37 years to the public he'll reap a financial harvest.

And not only that but he'll make this world a better place to live in.

MAROONS RALLY TO WIN FROM YANKEES

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—(AP)—Rallying after a poor first period, Montreal's battling Maroons gave the New York Americans, tail-enders of the National Hockey league, their eleventh defeat of the season tonight. The score was 5 to 3.

The Americans made a great start while Montreal was having trouble with its passing game and ran up a 3-1 lead in the first period. The Maroons tied it up in the second frame and won out with two more goals in the final period.

Jimmy Ward, scrappy spare wingman, scored the deciding counter for the Maroons, ending a fine single handed attempt with a quick shot past Benny Grant in the American goal. Grant, a Toronto spare, served in place of Roy Worters, New York's midget star, who was recovering from a slight leg injury received Tuesday.

GREENLEAF REGAINS POCKET BILLIARD TITLE BEATING RUDOLPH IN PLAY-OFF

Greenleaf and Rudolph played off a tie which was reached last night when Rudolph lost to Greenleaf in the last game of the 28 game tournament. Greenleaf was the only player who defeated Rudolph and the new champion was defeated only by Marcel Camp of Detroit. Greenleaf won seven games and lost one. Rudolph won six and lost two.

The championship match was a tensely contested game throughout, both contestants playing on the defensive most of the time, making it a battle of safeties.

Greenleaf miscued twice and fouled once, while Rudolph made four costly misses. The new champion's high run tonight was 44 and Rudolph's 22.

The victory was worth about $8,000 to Greenleaf.

The first place prize was $1,200 plus a percentage in the gate which would bring it to about $2,000. The world's champion also gets a $6,000 a year contract from the National Billiards association.

Rudolph won $1,000, also a percentage in the gate and a $3,000 a year contract.

Greenleaf held the championship from 1919 until May, 1926, when it passed to Frank Taberski. He regained it the following fall, but lost it to Rudolph in a challenge match in New York in January, 1927. He won it back in 1928 in Chicago but lost it to Taberski again in December of that year.

Taberski was the defending champion in the tournament here, finishing third.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Breed Theatre

Before a single foot of film was shot for "The Trial of Mary Dugan," every player in the all-star cast had to learn the entire dialogue from beginning to end.

Bayard Veiller, who personally directed the talking picture version of his famous play for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, went about the task just as he would prepare to present his play for the stage, rehearsing for weeks before taking his company before the microphones and cameras.

Norma Shearer, who plays the title role, had to learn every single word of the murder drama within two weeks but Raymond Hackett, who plays the leading male role, had nothing to learn since he played the same part on the stage for more than six months. Myra Hampton, Adrienne D'Ambricourt and Mary Dorne also duplicated their stage parts.

Lewis Stone, H. B. Warner and Raymond Hackett are featured with Miss Shearer in the 100 per cent talking picture which opens soon at the Breed Theatre. Many players of note are in the supporting cast.

PRICES DEPRESSED TO LOW LEVELS UNDER SUCCESSFUL DRIVE BY BEARS

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—(AP)—After playing a waiting game for the past three days, bears grew bold in today's stock market and launched a drive which depressed stocks generally to their levels of Thanksgiving.

The market continued to drift in purposeless manner until the last hour, when a wave of liquidation depressed most shares from 1 to 11 points. Covering during the final dealings caused rallies of a couple of points or so. The late activity boosted total sales up to 3,412,020 shares, compared with 2,284,850 yesterday.

Announcement of a receivership for International Combustion, while foreshadowed by various events during the past two months, was an adverse psychological factor, and aided the bear cause. The company's difficulties are directly attributable to the collapse of the stock market. Despite its valuable assets, it has been unable to launch financing to meet working capital requirements.

Its predicament was similar to that of Fox Film, for which a trusteeship was recently formed. Psychological effects of the combustion receivership were intensified by the fact that it appeared only a day after receivership for another major corporation, American Piano. The latter company, however, had been laboring for years with individual problems arising from changes in public buying habits.

Rumors of unsatisfactory holiday sales of radios and other luxury products had an unsettling effect upon radio and merchandising shares, although reports from New York department stores indicated that the volume of holiday trade still holds around the levels of last year at this time, and in some lines higher. Dividend actions included substitution of a stock for the usual cash payment by Murray Corp. Packard Motor placed its new stock on $1 annual basis, equal to $5 on the old stock, which paid $3 and extras.

Call money held at 4 1-2 per cent. The Federal Reserve weekly brokerage loan compilation showed a drop of $39,000,000, which more than cancels last week's gain of $33,000,000 and carries the total to a new low for the movement. Bankers' acceptance rates were a little easier, with the 60-day rate shaded 1-8 of one per cent. Total outstanding acceptances at the turn of the month were reported at a new high, $117,161,801 above the total of Oct. 31, reflecting primarily the demand for short term investments during the sharp curtailment of brokers' loans.

Exports of gold for the week were disclosed at $33,499,000, a little less than most estimates. An additional $5,000,000 shipment to France is reported to have been negotiated, however, and additional shipments will probably be sent on the Olympic sailing the end of the week.

General Electric dropped 10 points, and closed off 7, net. Columbian Carbon dropped 11, then reduced its loss to 4. U. S. Steel sagged 5 points, and closed 3 1-2 lower, net. Such shares as Air Reduction, Allied Chemical, American Power & Light, American Water Works, Chesapeake & Ohio, Continental Shares, Eastman Kodak, Johns-Manville, Hershey Chocolate, Macy, Montgomery Ward, Sears Roebuck, Simmons, and Western Union lost 4 to 9 points. Several shares broke to new lows for the year or longer, including American Piano, Kolster Radio, National Bellas Hess preferred, and the United Stores issues. Fox Film dropped 12 points to a new low at 23, and closed at 25 1-4. International Combustion common and preferred touched new lows at 5 1-2 and 18 1-2, respectively.

Commodity markets were largely reactionary. Wheat and corn futures dropped about 3 and 1 cents respectively, influenced by bearish crop reports. Cotton futures held barely steady, although aided by favorable dry goods consumption reports.

European exchange rates were largely firm, but the Latin-American currencies sagged further. Sterling cables held at $4.88 1-8. French francs were a shade higher, with cables at 3.94 cents.

BOND MARKET.

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—(AP)—Argentine government loans again took the leading position in the bond market today, moving up 2 to nearly 6 points in sharp contrast to their weakness on Wednesday. Much of the loss made by this group in the past two days on the news that Argentina had virtually suspended gold payments was thereby recovered.

Other Latin American listings were irregularly lower at the close, although lower at the close although had displayed sympathetic strength. San Paulo 8s were particularly weak in the late trading, finishing with net losses of between 2 and 3 points.

Aside from the lively performance in these sections of the foreign list, the market moved with extreme apathy. First grade rails and utilities, where support has been strongest in the recent period of easing prices, advanced in the forenoon but shaded off in the late dealings, with the result that small net gains and losses were evenly divided. Governments changed hands in inconsequential volume on a downward price scale.

The apathy in listed securities is in contrast to the good reception being given to new offerings. Dealers report heavy subscriptions from all parts of the country for these issues, most of which are in the municipal classification. Large customers are placing funds in short maturities.

Although the trend has been downward since early in December. The Associated Press combined average for 40 representative bonds has shown only a small decline and is now two points above the year's low, at 96.16, this composite figure is about midway between the 1929 maximum and minimum. The peak was reached early in the year, while bonds struck bottom late in September, except for the brief reaction accompanying the stock market break.

Low coupon rails turned over in average amounts during the day's quiet trading. There was a fair demand for Atlantic Coast Line collateral 4s, Chesapeake & Ohio general 4 1-2s, Rock Island refunding 4s, Nickel Plate issues, Pennsylvania 7s (maturing next year) and general 4 1-2s and St. Louis & San Francisco 4 1-2s, all of which varied only slightly from the previous close.

Telephone bonds were popular and held firm, but there was a trace of uneasiness in Light and Power Company obligations. Industrials again idled.

Extreme dullness marked the convertibles. American Telephone 4 1-2s showed a volume of less than $500,000, an unusually small total, and were off 3 points at the close. International Telephone 4 1-2s showed a similar loss, while Missouri Pacific 5 1-2s dropped 1 1-4.

Money rates were unchanged, but there was a small reduction in rate on bankers' acceptances of the 60 day maturity.

The Chicago loan of $7,278,000 in 4 per cent. improvement bonds went to a syndicate headed by the First National Bank of New York which bid 97.44.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

The Success of Reddy's Plan

To have one's plans work out just right
Is always cause for real delight.
—Reddy Fox.

Reddy Fox and Mrs. Reddy were watching Hooty the Great Horned Owl sailing back and forth above the old apple tree, in which 11 turkeys were roosting and were fast asleep. The two Foxes were hiding as near that tree as they could get without being seen. They didn't want to attract the attention of Hooty the Great Horned Owl. They needn't have worried. Hooty had eyes for nothing but those turkeys.

Back and forth, back and forth, sailed Hooty above that turkey tree. He was looking those turkeys over. He was making up his mind which one he would choose for his dinner. The big gobbler Hooty passed over. He was too big. Presently he decided on a young turkey that was roosting somewhat off by herself. Hooty flew over her once. Then he turned and came back and this time he struck and struck hard. The turkey gave one faint startled yelp—and that was all. Down to the ground she crashed and Hooty with her. She was too big for him to carry away. He would have to eat his fill right there.

For a moment after they struck the ground, Hooty stood erect, turning his head swiftly this way and that way, looking all around with great glaring eyes. So swiftly did he turn his head that, had you been there, you would have said he turned it all the way around. Of course, Hooty cannot do that. If he could, do that, he would be very likely to twist his head off. Satisfied that no one was watching him, Hooty prepared to enjoy that turkey dinner he had waited for so long. He didn't even think of Reddy Fox or Mrs. Reddy. In Hooty's mind there was no room for any thought but that of turkey.

Hooty had just started to tear off the feathers when without warning there was a sudden rush and before he could put himself on the defensive he was knocked off that turkey. It was Reddy Fox who had struck him. At the same time Mrs. Reddy seized the turkey by the neck and began to drag it away. Hooty was furious. Do you wonder? How he did hiss and snap his great bill! Back he came, striking at Reddy with his wings and claws. Reddy nimbly jumped aside and Hooty immediately turned towards that turkey. But the instant Hooty turned, Reddy was at him again.

It was two against one. Hooty couldn't fight Reddy and fight Mrs. Reddy at the same time. He did the best he could, but despite all he could do, he had to see that turkey dragged away. Meanwhile, the turkeys had been wakened and some of them were craning their necks as they tried to see what was going on down below.

While Reddy kept Hooty occupied, Mrs. Reddy succeeded in carrying the turkey to the former hiding place where they had taken the first turkey, which was as you know under the barn. Hooty didn't see where she took it. He was too much occupied with Reddy. But presently Reddy suddenly darted off around the corner of the barn and Hooty was left alone, hissing and snapping.

Reddy was in high spirits. Everything had worked out exactly as he had planned. Hooty had brought down a turkey for them, just as he had hoped would be the case. "I wonder what Hooty is thinking," thought Reddy. "I'm sorry to cheat him out of a dinner, but there are more turkeys here and he can get another. I know my plan would work out. Now Mrs. Reddy and I will have another glorious feast. I guess it will be the last one we'll have on turkey this year. That farmer probably will shut those turkeys up now. I hope Hooty has sense enough to fly away before that farmer gets up in the morning."

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—(AP)—Gold exports from New York between Dec. 12 and 18, were the largest for any similar period in about a year and a half. The total was $32,499,000, of which $21,624,000 went to England, $11,000,000 to France, $1,334,000 to Germany and smaller amounts to India and Mexico. Imports amounted to $998,000, mostly from Colombia. Gold earmarked for foreign account increased $3,000,000. Reports today said that an additional $5,000,000 in the metal would go to Paris on the Olympic tomorrow.

—Due to the unusual expansion and growth of the natural gas industry in the southwest and west, the natural gas department of the American Gas association will close its Pittsburgh office Jan. 1, and reopen at Dallas, Texas. E. J. Stephany, secretary of the natural gas department, will continue in charge of that division of the gas association's work at Dallas.

The outstanding volume of American banks' and bankers' acceptances set a new high record as of Nov. 30, the American Acceptance council reported today. The total on that date was $1,657,899,924, an increase of $117,161,801 over the Oct. 31 total and $457,544,200 higher than at the end of November, 1928. The current increase gives abundant evidence, the council said, that the peak of the acceptance creating season for this year is still some weeks away.

An additional issue of $4,000,000 National Electric Power company 7 per cent cumulative preferred stock was announced today at $97.25 a share and accrued dividend, to yield about 7.20 per cent. The company is part of the Middle West Utilities system, and its subsidiaries operate in New England.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET.

CHICAGO, Dec. 19.—(AP)—Predictions that a large increase of domestic wheat acreage would be announced tomorrow afternoon had a decidedly unsettling effect on the wheat market today, prices gave way in one sinking spell after another, accelerated by the fact that the official estimate of 1929 wheat production in the United States showed 14,000,000 bushels excess over the previous forecast. Besides, general heavy snows relieved anxiety as to crop damage from zero temperatures and there were no clearances today of wheat or flour from this country overseas.

Chicago closing prices on wheat were unsteady at about the bottom level reached, 2 3-4 to 3 1-2 a bushel under yesterday's finish. Corn closed 1-4 to 3-8 to 1 1-4 off, oats 1-2 to 1 1-4 down, and provisions varying from 5@7 cents decline to a rise of 7 cents.

Sharp breaks in Liverpool quotations led the way to the series of price downturns witnessed today in the wheat markets here, and it was current talk that the Liverpool setbacks were a result of selling orders from this side of the Atlantic. Meanwhile, export business today in wheat from North America was nil, and assertions were frequent that no improvement would develop until after the holidays. Storms which seriously interfered with the working of telegraph and telephone wires today did a good deal also to restrict speculative dealings, and were a noticeable factor in depriving the market of power to rally.

Argentine harvest developments today were of a character which ordinarily might be expected to set the wheat market here on fire, threshing returns being sensationally meager. Instead of affecting wheat values, however, the news from Argentina was virtually ignored. Reports that domestic milling inquiry for wheat is better were likewise given but scant notice, it being contended that there is not enough flour buying at present to cause mills to draw on storage stocks at terminals.

The main element in lowering the value of corn and oats today was wheat weakness. Until near the finish, however, corn showed stubborn resistance to selling pressure, December delivery in particular being influenced by reports that the corn belt is entirely snowed in, and that there is little chance of any large movement of corn during the remainder of the month.

LEBANON

The sermon Sunday morning at the First Congregational church was based on Matthew 6, verses 1-18, in which our Lord teaches that life is to be lived before God rather than before men. The subject was "The Master Motive of Life."

At the Christian Endeavor service there was an attendance of over 160. The subject was, "What Have Young People to Give?" and was in charge of the 4-H club, under the leadership of R. W. Whaples, county club agent. Accounts of their trips to St. Louis and Chicago, respectively, were given by Stephen Manning, of Lebanon, and Frances Lamb, of Franklin. Other members from the clubs of Franklin and Preston gave interesting talks on club work. The choruses and instrumental trio, harmonicas and Jew's harp, was a novel and acceptable feature. Professor Brumdage, of Storrs college, spoke very encouragingly to the young people. The candle lighting ceremony, under the direction of Miss Lamb, symbolizing the spread of the club spirit, was very pretty and impressive. Pop corn and apples were distributed at the conclusion. Everybody was delighted with the programme as well as with the efficiency and promise of the young people present in such large numbers. First Church looks forward to a repetition of Sunday evening's meeting. Mrs. George MacDonald and Mr. Whaples, who got in touch with so many young people, received many compliments for the success of the meeting.

The sermon topic for next Sunday will be, "The Human Response to Christmas." In the evening a Christmas pageant entitled "The Nativity" will be given to which the Baptist church, the Goshen church and Franklin church have been invited.

The annual Christmas tree and entertainment will be given Tuesday, Dec. 24, at 7:30. A Christmas pageant by the children of the Sunday school will be given.

Natives of Kingstown, St. Vincent, West Indies, were delighted recently when a circus visited the island for the first time.

JOHN KIRBY, FORMER RESIDENT DIES AFTER LONG ILLNESS

Patrick Kirby has returned to his home on Fifth street after attending the funeral of his brother John Kirby, which was held in Providence Wednesday morning with requiem mass at St. Mary's cathedral. Burial was in the family plot at St. Mary's cemetery. Mr. Kirby died Saturday after a long illness at Fall River, Mass., where he had lived the past few years. He is survived by one son, John Kirby, Jr., of Fall River, Mass., one brother, Patrick Kirby, and one sister, Mrs. Anna Caffery, of Prospect street, this city.

Mr. Kirby was born in Ireland and came to this country when a young man. He resided for a long period in Greeneville and his many friends in Greeneville will extend their heartfelt sympathy to the members of his immediate family.

Through error in the donors of flowers to Mrs. Michael Pusatert the name of Jerry Barnett was used in place of Jerry Bonney. Pillow marked "Sister," from brothers, spiritual bouquets, Mrs. J. Walsh, Miss Verna Hall and Edward J. Coyle were not mentioned Thursday.

NORWICH TOWN

"GOOD WILL TOWARD MEN" SERVICE AT THE M. E. CHURCH

Sunday night in the Methodist Episcopal church there is to be a dramatization service in charge of the pastor. This special Christmas service is entitled "Good Will Toward Men." The scene is laid in a Methodist home just before Christmas anywhere in the United States. The characters are: Mr. and Mrs. Williams, the father and mother of the home, (Walter D. Kelley and Theodora Brown); Mary, a daughter in her junior year at college, (Doris Pease); "Bob," the son in high school, (Wallace Wagner); Grandmother, (Mrs. Albert Miner); The Minister, (Rev. George Warren Potter); choir singers, (Muriel Rose and Mildred Potter); soloist in the junior choir, (Virginia Ward). The regular C. E. service is to be omitted. The drama service will begin at 7:15 and an invitation has been given to all the members and friends of the church to attend. The Christmas offering to be taken at this service will support a scholarship in international good will, the new Oldham hall for Colegio Americano, in Buenos Aires, Argentina.

Sunday schools of the Methodist Episcopal church throughout the United States are co-operating in the erection of a building which will be a tribute to Bishop William F. Oldham, retired, of Columbus, Ohio, first a missionary bishop in the church, then secretary of the board of foreign missions, then a bishop. He was 75 years old December 16th.

The Christmas entertainment and tree for the children in the church school is to be held in the vestry Christmas night and Santa Claus has promised to be present.

NEW YORK RABBI TO CONDUCT SERVICES HERE

Abner Schwartz, president of the Norwich Community synagogue, visited the Jewish Theological seminary at New York and was promised by the seminary authorities that they will send one of their honor students to take charge of the week end services. The services will be held at the B'Nai Brith rooms at 8 o'clock this (Friday) evening and at 8 a. m. Saturday.

The young rabbi is one of the outstanding orators of the seminary, and is also well able to chant the services. He will deliver the sermons both on Friday evening and on Saturday evening.

Master Plumbers Inc.

The Master Plumbers Ass'n of Norwich, Inc., have filed with Town Clerk Harold S. Burt incorporation papers approved by the secretary of state. The incorporators are Harold C. Dahl, Jeremiah A. Fitzgerald, George Blum, Thomas F. Burns, William J. Haggerty, Patrick J. McMahon and John Morton, all of this city. The corporation will have no capital stock and will elect its officers annually, the officers to be president, vice president, secretary, financial secretary, treasury and an executive board of three members.

FILES APPLICATION FOR DISSOLUTION OF FRINK DAIRY INCORPORATED

Charles W. Frink, president of Frink Dairy Incorporated, a Norwich dairy concern, has brought application in the superior court for dissolution of the company and appointment of a temporary receiver. Hearing on the application for appointment of a receiver has been set for 10 a. m. on Dec. 27 at the superior court session in New London. In the application, Mr. Frink states that he is president of the company and the owner of 140 shares of the capital stock. The company is capitalized at $31,800, with 318 shares of capital stock, par value $100, its pasteurization plant is at 40 Town street and its office at 20 Lincoln avenue.

In a suit brought in the superior court for dissolution of the corporation, which is returnable in January, Frink claims that he holds promissory notes of the corporation to the amount of $2,000, which are overdue and unpaid. He also charges that through Samuel Antzis, an agent and employe, the dairy company has refused him access to the books and statements of assets and liabilities.

He alleges that certain capital stock of the par value of $100 has been issued for $50 a share, 12 shares at this price to Samuel Antzis and six shares to Michael Antzis, his brother, this issue having been without adequate consideration.

Frink further alleges that real estate of the corporation is encumbered with mortgages and that Samuel Antzis, as general manager, has assumed powers not delegated to him by the directors and has used methods tending to waste the assets.

Suits at law have been brought against the concern, Mr. Frink alleges, and checks have been issued without the knowledge or approval of the president and have not been paid by the bank for lack of cash to the credit of the corporation.

It is further claimed by Frink that the corporation owns the ten-room house, 20 Lincoln avenue, where the office is but to which he has been denied access. He also alleges that a motor truck belonging to the corporation has been mortgaged for $1,400 to William R. Frisbie.

ACCOUNTING SUIT FILED AGAINST WM. A. SOMERS

John J. Somers of Bridgeport, has brought suit in the superior court against William A. Somers of this city, asking for an accounting and judgment for the amount found due him from rents collected by the defendant. In his complaint, which has been filed with the clerk of the superior court in this city, the plaintiff represents that he and the defendant, prior to July 10, 1909, were partners in the grocery business in Norwich under the name of Somers Bros., and in connection therewith were the joint owners of a lease to certain premises known as 214, 214 and 216 Main street, Norwich; for a term of years ending Oct. 1, 1917, with a privilege of renewal for five years.

The plaintiff claims that on July 10, 1909, he sold his interest in the grocery business but retained his interest in the lease. The plaintiff claims that prior to that time he had been negotiating on behalf of himself and William A. Somers with the owner of the building and premises at 212-218 Main street for the purchase thereof and on or about Oct. 11, 1909, he delivered to William A. Somers a power of attorney By this document John J. Somers appointed William A. Somers to collect rent moneys due or to become due for him and to do and perform all necessary acts in the execution and prosecution of the business.

It is charged by the plaintiff that subsequent to October 11, 1909, the defendant on behalf of himself and the plaintiff, continued negotiations and on or about December 19, 1914, took title to the Main street property in his own name.

According to the complaint the defendant has been in possession of the premises as tenant since July 10, 1909, and as owner since Dec. 19, 1914, and has made leases and sub-leases thereof, and has collected large sums as rent, but has never accounted to the plaintiff therefor, nor made any payments on account thereof, and has never accounted to the plaintiff (John Somers) for any acts done by him under the power of attorney.

President Frank R. Murdy will preside at the meeting and Arthur M. Brown will act as toastmaster. This will be the last official occasion at which Secretary Walter H. Pilcher will serve. He is leaving Monday morning for Worcester where he has become associated with the Worcester chamber of commerce.

James L. Case, chairman of the committee on attendance for the dinner, reported Thursday night that over 125 reservations had been received and it was his confident belief that at least 200 would attend the dinner tonight in honor of Dr. Barbour.

Judge Allyn L. Brown is heading the reception committee, which is planning to meet Dr. Barbour on his arrival in the city and entertain him until time for the meeting.

Walter T. Camp heads the committee on decorations and they have made adequate preparations for the occasion. E. LaRue Bliven is in charge of the menu and service.

Members of the Norwich chamber of commerce who can possibly do so should by all means hear Dr. Barbour, as he is without doubt one of the greatest speakers in America today, on a par with Dr. Cadman, the well known radio preacher. He is forceful and energetic and always leaves a deep impression upon the minds of his hearers. All interested men and women in Norwich have been invited to attend on this occasion, regardless of whether or not they may belong to the chamber of commerce.

William G. Park is to act as song-leader and Henry LaFontaine is to be at the piano which assures a lively period of singing. President Murdy in a special invitation issued Thursday night asks all of the directors of the chamber of commerce and the past presidents to be seated at the speakers' table.

NORWICH MAN CHAIRMAN TELEPHONE CONFERENCE BOARD

According to an announcement issued Thursday Henry A. Freeman of Norwich has been elected chairman and A. N. Dicklow of New London, secretary of the New London district plant conference board of the Telephone Employes association and will direct the affairs of this important branch of the association during the coming year.

The board at its annual meeting elected officers for the different units which make up the district board. Chairman-secretaries were elected to lead the local conference boards in each of the larger exchanges of the district as follows: Frank E. Coombs of New London, Louis J. Bakanowsky of Norwich, B. F. Reynolds of Willimantic, V. H. Reynolds of Putnam, John B. Salern of Saybrook.

Council committee chairmen were named as follows: A. F. Kjellander of New London, L. J. Bakanowsky of Norwich, Louis R. Berthleson of Willimantic, William E. O'Brien of Putnam, John B. Salern of Saybrook. An instance of the brotherhood which prevails among employes of the telephone company, a friendliness that is a distinct credit to these men, developed at the meeting.

A report was made that an employe was painfully injured at the summer outing of the New London district telephone employes and as a result contracted a sizable physician's bill. Another employe also has been ill and unfortunate and to aid their two fellow workers the plant men of the New London district have begun a subscription among telephone workers, which it is expected will clear the unfortunates and return them to work in good physical condition. This is the fine spirit that prevails among the telephone men.

AMERICAN LEGION HOLDS FIFTH DISTRICT MEETING

That the parents of ex-service men, who are aliens, ought to be allowed to enter this country before and in preference to others seeking entrance into the United States was the gist of a brief address made by Mr. Lopaz of the Stonington American Legion post at a fifth district meeting of the American Legion and its auxiliary in Ponemah hall, Taftville, Thursday evening, with an attendance of approximately 200. It was indicated at the meeting that action would be taken on the matter in the future by the fifth district.

Mention was also made at the meeting of an intensive membership drive to be stazed following the holidays, the reports on which will be rendered at the national convention and which are hoped to be most encouraging. Following the business sessions of the posts, over which Joseph Bellefleur of this city presided, and of the auxiliary, at which Mrs. Ruth Sears of Taftville, was in charge, a baked bean supper was served by members of the Taftville auxiliary.

The remainder of the evening was given over to dancing, for which the ideal orchestra played.

PLEASING EXERCISES MARK NIGHT SCHOOL CLOSING

Appropriate exercises marked the closing of the town's night schools Thursday evening, for the Christmas holiday recess. The students of the night school classes at Greeneville, Occum, Taftville and the West Side, held a joint social Thursday evening at the Broadway school house. The programme opened with violin and saxophone numbers by Frank Panik and a member of the Broadway school class, followed by a welcoming address by the director, Miss Bernice Willey. After selections by the duo, there were stereopticon lantern slides showing the signing of the Declaration of Independence. The slides were secured through the efforts of Faith Trumbull chapter, D. A. R., Inc., and two Boy Scouts operated the lantern.

Mrs. Albert M. Van Wazenen, regent of Faith Trumbull chapter, briefly addressed the gathering, speaking of the activities of the D. A. R. and voicing appreciation of the splendid work being done by the night school director and instructors. In behalf of the D. A. R. Mrs. Van Wazenen presented a prize of $5, divided, to Maxime Daigle of the West Side and Joseph Bruno of Occum, for perfect attendance at the night schools this year and who were instrumental in securing four new students, each, for the night school classes. This prize has been offered by the D. A. R. annually for the last three years. A year ago the prize was won by Mr. Daigle.

Following instrumental selections the meeting came to a close with the singing of America, after which refreshments of ice cream and cake were served.

MOVIES FOR CHILDREN'S NEW YEAR'S PARTY

Reports on the New Year's party sponsored by the Norwich Lions club in co-operation with Manager Hamilton of the Palace theatre were made at the weekly noon luncheon meeting of the club in the Wauregan hotel Thursday with the president, Charles W. The committee reported that Manager Hamilton had secured for the children's party a feature picture, Frozen River, starring Rin Tin Tin, the famous picture dog. Our Gang comedy, Small Talk and the well known Dinner Time Fables. George B. Dobsevage of New York addressed the meeting, speaking of the contribution to the welfare and happiness of the American people by the sewing clubs of the country, and also spoke of the doctrine of democracy prevalent in the United States, illustrating his line of thought with a Biblical fable.

CHRISTMAS FLIGHT ENDED IN FIVE TRAGIC DEATHS

Representative Kaynor of Massachusetts, One of Five Killed Immediately After Take-Off at Bolling Field, Washington—Plane Fell 350 Feet and the Engines Were Buried About Three Feet in the Ground—Kaynor Was to Fly to His Home in Springfield to Surprise His Wife and Six Children—Everything Pronounced "Fine" Just Before the Take-Off.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20.—(AP)—The airplane that was turning toward Massachusetts to speed him homeward as a joyful Christmas surprise for his family plunged Representative William K. Kaynor and four others to death today less than a minute after the take-off.

Everyone aboard was killed outright in the impact as the tri-motored plane hurtled downward from 300 feet, first bounced on Bolling field, then burst apart and dug furrows three feet deep in the rain-sodden earth. Wounds showed they had died from head injuries, indicating each had been pitched forward or onto the ceiling as the diving ship twisted.

Besides Representative Kaynor, those killed in this worst accident in Washington air history were:

Stanley B. Lowe, secretary to Mr. Kaynor.

Private Vladimir Kuzma of Bolling field, the mechanic.

Representative Kaynor had arranged to be flown to his home in Springfield to surprise his wife and children with a Christmas visit. It was his first flight, his interest in aviation having been spurred by a recent appointment to the house military affairs committee. If the trip had been a success, he had planned an air visit to his family at home every other week-end. The representative was serving his first term.

Cold winds were tearing across Bolling field when the happy party arrived there shortly after 9 a. m. All bundled themselves into heavy clothing and donned parachutes. Meanwhile the motor of the transport plane was being warmed up for Captain Dinger, a widely known army pilot.

All ready, he raced the plane across the field to lift it into the air and attempted a bank turn at 300 feet altitude. The ship's nose went down and did not come up again. Before field men watching the maneuver realized what was happening, the huge cabin monoplane was a twisted mass near where Lieut. George E. Cuddihy had crushed a few days ago.

The first news of the tragedy was received at the capitol from an unnamed woman who drove hysterically from the field. The white house and war department were notified immediately and tonight an investigation was under way to determine the cause of the accident.

The plane was a counterpart of one of the finest commercial passenger planes in the country and was said to have cost approximately $50,000. It was designed for use by high government officials, and specially was used by F. Trubee Davison, assistant secretary of war for aviation. Representative Kaynor had obtained war department authorization for the flight.

His secretary, who also lives in Springfield, and is survived by a widow and three children, accepted an invitation to make the flight, as did McGill, who originally had intended to fly to Boston yesterday with Representatives Martin and Foss, of Massachusetts. McGill was to have been married in January and was going to Boston to spend Christmas with his fiancee.

Captain Dinger, a crack army pilot and one with the greatest experience with transport ships, was assigned as pilot with Kuzma, an army private, as mechanic. The plane was warming up this morning when the party reached the field. The three men were assigned to their places, given parachutes with instructions how to use them, and then were strapped in with safety belts.

Captain Dinger tried out the motors, pronounced "everything is fine" and took off southward down the field in the face of a 25-mile wind. Eyewitnesses said the plane left the ground easily, climbed steadily until about 350 feet up and then started on a left turn.

Those first to reach the scene found all of the five men dead. The engines were buried about three feet in the ground and the Fokker plane was badly smashed. The bodies were moved to the field clinic and Assistant Secretary Davison, who was hurriedly summoned, directed that an inquiry be made. He issued this statement later:

News of the accident saddened the house, which adjourned out of respect for Mr. Kaynor, who was serving his first term but had made himself popular. He only recently had been appointed to the military committee.

Word of the crash went out from Bolling field, but it was difficult to obtain accurate information as field officials barred all newspaper men until overruled hours later by their superiors in the war department. Several camera men were arrested by guards, but later released.

WOULD WITHDRAW $500,000 SUIT AGAINST TUNNEY

BRIDGEPORT, Dec. 20.—(AP)— The $500,000 breach of promise action brought by Katherine King Fogarty, of Fort Worth, Tex., and New York city, against James J. (Gene) Tunney, of Greenwich, former heavyweight champion of the world, was on the verge of collapse here tonight.

Counsel for Tunney expect the finishing blow next Friday when Judge Carl Foster of superior court will be asked to pass upon a motion for judgment on Tunney's cross complaint to the suit. The cross complaint bars Mrs. Fogarty from prosecuting the action based upon a claim that Tunney failed to keep his promise to marry her.

That Mrs. Fogarty had authorized her counsel, Col. Lewis Field, of New Haven and Judge Frank L. Wilder, of this city, to withdraw her suit, was learned here from Judge Wilder. This order from Mrs. Fogarty embraced in a short note, was dated from Boston on November 4, but reached the hands of Col. Field Thursday afternoon. Judge Wilder's letter to the same effect was also sent to Col. Field.

Attorney Homer S. Cummings of Stamford, counsel for Tunney, said today that "we will not agree to a withdrawal of the action. We want a judgment in this case and hope to get it next Friday."

Mr. Cummings' motion for judgment was filed with the clerk of the court immediately after Judge Carl Foster had ruled against a demurrer entered by Judge Wilder and then allowed the local attorney to withdraw his appearance for Mrs. Fogarty.

RUSSIA AND BRITAIN RESUME DIPLOMATIC RELATIONS

LONDON, Dec. 20—(AP)—Soviet Russia and Great Britain today formally resumed full diplomatic relations in London. The Prince of Wales, acting for King George, received M. Sokolnikov, the first ambassador of the communist regime to come to England, and accepted his letters of credence.

The prince, wearing the full dress uniform of a colonel of the Welsh Guards, received M. Sokolnikov and his staff in the audience chamber of St. James palace, which will be used by the five power naval conference in January. The Russians were in diplomatic uniform.

M. Sokolnikov, who is the successor of Leonid Krassin and Christian Rakovsky, but has the rank of ambassador instead of charge d'affaires, drove to the palace with the embassy staff in two British state carriages from the royal mews. The carriages were driven by scarlet-cloaked coachmen and accompanied by out-riders, also in scarlet.

"DRY" LAW INDICTMENT AGAINST POLICEMAN

BOSTON, Dec. 20.—(AP) —A federal grand jury today returned indictments against Patrick J. Prendergast, a Boston policeman, and three others for conspiracy to violate the prohibition act. Among the others indicted were two persons who had been involved in the investigation of the white slave ring which extended along the Atlantic coast from Maine to New Jersey.

BRUSH FIRE RAGING IN SUBURB OF LOS ANGELES

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 20.—(AP)— A brush fire, raging over the dry hillsides of beautiful Griffith park on the edge of the city before a 30-mile an hour wind, threw residents of the exclusive Los Feliz district into a panic today, burned one home and was battled to a standstill by a thousand men after five hours of frantic effort.

In the confusion attending the blaze five men were injured, one probably fatally, in traffic accidents as all available fire apparatus in the city sped to the scene.

A zoo, in the southwestern corner of the park, narrowly escaped damage when a timely change in wind swung the flames away from from their initial course toward the reserve. The wild screams of frightened animals in the zoo rose above the roar of the flames.

The yellow clouds of smoke billowing from the mile long fire front spread a pall over Los Angeles and Hollywood, obscuring the sun for a while. Traffic, on nearby streets through the park, was halted.

The blaze originated from an undetermined cause at the end of Nottingham avenue on a knoll in the park. The brush provided an extremely dangerous situation and at one time residents in the adjoining Los Feliz district were ordered to evacuate their homes.

80 PERSONS INJURED IN SUBWAY STAMPEDE

NEW YORK, Dec. 20—(AP)—Eighty persons were injured, 35 so seriously that they were taken to a hospital, as a crowded subway train, speeding through a tunnel 30 feet under the bed of the East river during the rush hour, was halted by a grounded third rail and a stampede among the passengers ensued.

All of the 80 were suffering from inhalation of smoke from burning insulation on a conduit, and many had been trampled on and cut as they beat with their fists against windows and doors in their frenzied attempts too get out of the train.

At no time were they in any particular danger from the burning insulation, which was a small blaze quickly put out by a repair crew which was already at work on the conduit and had dropped back as the train approached at 8 o'clock this morning.

CAMBRIDGE BOOK STORE MANAGER SENTENCED

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Dec. 20.—(AP)— A sentence of one month in the house of correction and a fine of $500, was imposed on James A. Delacey, manager of the Dunster House Book Shop, a favorite shopping place for Harvard students, by Judge Frederick W. Fosdick in superior court here today after he had been found guilty of selling an obscene book. The case of Joseph Sullivan, Delacey's clerk, found guilty of a similar charge, was placed on file.

A stay of sentence was granted Delacey pending the outcome of exceptions to the supreme court. Both men had appealed sentences to the house of correction and fines imposed by a district court.

BARCELONA, Spain, Dec. 20.—(AP)— Fifteen persons were killed and sixteen injured when a local passenger train struck an auto-bus at a grade crossing between Santa Sadurni De Nova and Gelida.

BERLIN, Dec. 20.—(AP)—Demonstrations of the unemployed were staged simultaneously at the behest of communists in several large German cities last evening. Serious clashes with the police resulted and it was reported that two men had been killed in the Berlin riots. Scores of persons were injured.

POPE AT ST. JOHN LATERAN FOR FIRST TIME SINCE 1870

ROME, Dec. 20—(AP)—The bishop of Rome, in the person of Pope Pius XI, today took possession of his own cathedral of St. John Lateran, the mother church of Christendom, for the first time since 1870.

Pope Pius, ending the voluntary seclusion of the popes in the Vatican since their loss of temporal power, left Vatican soil early this morning and entered Italian territory to celebrate mass at St. John Lateran. The last pope to do so was Pius XI, who ruled over all Rome as a temporal monarch.

The pontiff's exit took Rome by surprise, and no one was aware of his history-making trip until the Stefani News agency announced it in a bulletin at 9:55 a. m. He drove to the cathedral in an automobile of American make, which recently was presented to him.

Profiting by the provision of the Lateran treaties, by which Cardinal Gasparri and Premier Mussolini settled the Roman question on February 11, his holiness left the Vatican at 6:45 a. m. He went to the Lateran hill where on September 19, 1870, Pius IX, with the Italian forces threatening at the gates, went to pray.

In the cathedral Pope Pius celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of his ordination, saying mass at the very altar of the confession before which he was made a priest half a century ago to the day.

SUN WAS ABSENT 12 DAYS IN MIDDLE WEST

CHICAGO, Dec. 20.—(AP) —Winter's deep white spread today reflected glaring evidence to a doubting, chilled middle west that the solar system has not lost its sun.

After 12 days of absence, the orb of day slid across clear skies to shine on scenic splendors left by yesterday's devastating blizzard.

Dusk found traffic again moving over lanes and highways that had been choked with snow, trains running on or nearly on time, air mail and passenger schedules resumed and the thermometer in places at a much more comfortable position.

Despite the cheering rays that found their way to earth, there was still a hint of snow in the atmosphere, and brief return of the flakes was predicted for Michigan, Wisconsin, Missouri, Nebraska and Kansas. Drifting was believed ended and highway officials hoped to have all the principal thoroughfares throughout the middle west in good shape for traffic by tomorrow.

Sub-zero temperatures for tonight were predicted for the lower Great Lakes states.

AGRICULTURE DEPT. SUPPLY BILL PASSED BY THE HOUSE

WASHINGTON Dec. 20.—(AP)— The annual supply bill of the agriculture department carrying three amendments which increased its total to $153,284,000 was passed by the house today without a record vote.

The measure was sent to the senate where it will be acted on after the Christmas holidays.

The three amendments provided $15,000 for three game wardens to protect fur bearing animals in Alaska; $10,000 for study of cranberry diseases and $4,210 to control the peach moth in Tennessee.

With the amendments, the measure was about $9,000,000 in excess of the appropriations for last year and was below the budget estimate by nearly $200,000.

JAMES T. MORAN MAY BECOME CHAIRMAN OF S. N. E. T. BOARD

NEW HAVEN, Dec. 20.—(AP)—James T. Moran, president of the Southern New England Telephone company, may become chairman of the board of directors in 1930, it was reported here today.

He has served 45 years with the company, and now becomes subject to the retirement rules. He is 65 years old.

It is not likely that he will resign as president, but rather that the post of chairmanship will be created for him by a meeting of stockholders. Then it is expected that a new president will be elected to succeed him as president.

"CHRISTMAS PARTY" BY BEARS IN STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, Dec. 20.—(AP)— "Bear" traders, who have had little joy at holiday time in the past five years, took advantage of recent unfavorable business developments today to stage "a Christmas party" by hammering down scores of issues on the New York stock exchange $2 to $24 a share, but many of these declines were cut down $1 to $5 a share by last minute covering. Total sales crossed 5,500,000 shares, the largest total since full five-hour sessions were resumed, with the ticker an hour late at the close.

SEVEN PERSONS KILLED AT A GRADE CROSSING

CLARINDA, Iowa, Dec. 20—(AP)— Seven persons, six of them members of one family, were killed near here early tonight when a Burlington railway passenger train struck a truck at the intersection of highway 71.

The dead:

F. E. Glass, his wife and four children.

An unidentified man.

The family was returning from a shopping trip to Clarinda and the truck was laden with toys and Christmas things.

Death Of A Former President Of France

Emile Loubet Died Last Night at Montelimar, France, Aged 91 Years.

MONTELIMAR, France, Dec. 20—(AP) —Emile Loubet, former president of France, died at 9:35 p. m. He was 91 years of age.

The statesman was conscious to the last although for hours he had been in such agony that his physicians had said that he could not live long.

At the bedside when death came were his son Paul, his daughter Mme. De Saint Prix, and his physician Dr. Albert.

Dr. Albert, however, told newspapermen that M. Loubet had suffered from no special disease. "His light was just extinguished by old age," the physician said.

Emile Loubet was president of France during a period when the entente cordial between France and Great Britain was negotiated. What appeared in 1904 to be merely a settlement of long standing disputes of minor importance between France and England blossomed into that powerful aggregation of nations which the world afterward designated as the entente. It aligned France, Russia and England in a friendly understanding that held them together at the beginning of the great world conflict ten years later, as no "scrap of paper" could hold Germany.

Other events of great importance to France transpired during Loubet's term as president from 1899 to 1906. Coming into office suddenly he faced the turmoil over the trial and conviction of Captain Dreyfus and left the office when France was in the throes of the political upheaval over the separation of the church and state. As official head of the French government Loubet had little actual power but his influence was exerted at least in the case of Captain Dreyfus whom he pardoned after the trial court had convicted that officer. His attitude on the division of the church from the state was known to be opposed to the violent clerical feeling which then dominated the French people, but he signed the separation bill which was passed by the chamber of deputies.

In 1867 Loubet, when thirty nine years old married Mlle. Marie Picard. They had three children, two boys and one girl. The elder son, Paul Loubet, is a physician.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20.—(AP)—The operations of J. A. Record For Incoming Ship In N. Y. Harbor

As Fog Lifted, 58 Vessels Proceeded to Their Piers—Had Been Fogbound.

NEW YORK, Dec. 20—(AP)—A new record for incoming vessels was set in New York harbor today as 58 ships, most of them fog-bound outside the channel for from 12 to 48 hours, preceded to their piers as a stiff west wind lifted the heavy fog which has paralyzed shipping for days.

The previous record of 57 ships docking in a day was set on January 19, 1926, when a heavy fog which enveloped the harbor brought about a similar delay in arrivals.

Ten trans-Atlantic liners and seven other passenger ships were among the incoming vessels today, several of them two days late in docking because of the fog.

Together with 42 freighters and tankers, they had anchored outside the harbor waiting for the fog to lift, unable to penetrate the thick blanket in view of the added menace to navigation, presented by the wreckage of the liner Fort Victoria, rammed and sunk by the Algonquin Wednesday. The wreck lies in 60 feet of water in the channel with a part of her hull awash.

Among the ships making their docks in the general harbor movement that followed the lifting of the fog, was the Algonquin which limped up the harbor from Ambrose lightship where she has been anchored for more than 36 hours after her collision with the fort Victoria.

The Algonquin carried 189 passengers, bound for Miami and Galvestor and the Clyde line made arrangements to send the passengers to their destinations either by train or other south bound ships. The Algonquin damaged her bow in ramming the Fort Victoria and was unable to proceed on her voyage.

The outbound movement down the harbor was nearly as brisk. Thirty-six liners, steamers and freighters, fog-bound at their piers, at last departed. More than 2,500 passengers were marooned on the fog-bound ships.

Besides the $1,500,000 loss suffered by the Furness-Bermuda line in the sinking of the Fort Victoria, thousands of dollars additional damage to shipping interests has been caused by the fog. Sailing schedules were disrupted, causing great loss of passenger revenue, and there was considerable damage to perishable cargoes delayed in transportation.

There had been virtually no movements of craft in the harbor for 24 hours until this morning.

The United States steamboat inspection service today began its inquiry into the collision of the Fort Victoria and the Algonquin. Captain J. W. MacKenzie, master of the Algonquin and his officers appeared before the board.

The Fort St. George, a sister ship of the Fort Victoria, took 106 of the latter's 280 passengers on to Bermuda today.

GUARDIANSHIP OVER GERMAN MUNICIPALITY

BERLIN, Dec. 20.—(AP)—For the first time in the history of German municipal self-government a municipality has lost its right to administer its own finances. The provincial governor today ordered the Berlin city administration to be placed under provincial guardianship.

This drastic action, which has few analogies in the entire world, resulted from recent disclosures of municipal maladministration and graft by which the city lost millions of marks.

The climax came when the city parliament voted an appropriation of 6,000,000 marks (about $1,440,000) for Christmas relief to the unemployed despite the fact that the treasury was virtually empty.

DEBATE IN SENATE ON LAW ENFORCEMENT COMMISSION

Democratic Dry Leaders Are Clamoring For an Early Report of Some Sort—Favor Opening to the Public Proceedings of the Commission—Senator Glass, Author of the $250,000 Provision For Law Enforcement Inquiry, Said the Commission Was Shunting Aside the Real Purpose, "an Inquiry Into Prohibition."

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20—(AP)—Curious concerning what President Hoover's law enforcement commission is doing, two democratic dry leaders served notice in the senate today that efforts would be made to open its proceedings to the public and to get an early report of some sort.

Senator Harris of Georgia, who sponsored the increased dry fund appropriation, was blocked in an attempt to have the senate adopt a resolution requesting Mr. Hoover to obtain a preliminary report from the commission for use in appropriating next year's enforcement fund.

A republican dry leader—Senator Jones of Washington—halted consideration of this resolution. He explained that he did so because he thought it an extraordinary proceeding for the senate to be asking the president for such a report.

Senator Glass of Virginia, another democratic dry who was the author of the $250,000 provision authorizing the law enforcement inquiry, said the commission was "shunting aside" the real purpose of congress for the expenditure of this money—an inquiry into prohibition.

Both Harris and Glass notified the senate that they would seek to withhold funds for the continuance of the commission unless some manner of report was made and Harris also demanded that the commission hold its hearings in public.

In the first debate on the commission in the senate, Harris struck out at Chairman Wickersham, declaring he did not "believe the prohibitionists are going to get any report from this commission to the congress if the chairman of the commission and some others can prevent it."

A democratic wet leader, Senator Hawes of Missouri, some time ago demanded that the commission open its hearings to the public and urged that it be required to submit an early report.

Republicans so far have not disclosed their attitude on the issue but the Harris resolution still is before the senate and promises to become an issue after the holiday recess.

The Georgian dry predicted today that the commission did not intend to make a report before four years and said he knew of a member of the commission who had been looking for a home in Washington and was prepared to enter a four year lease.

"Every enemy of the prohibition law is in favor of this commission staying there just as they are," said Harris, "acting behind closed doors, and conducting their deliberations for years. They expect to stay there for four more years and never make a report and it will not do us any good."

Senator Glass contended the commission had failed to give attention to the main purpose of the congressional authorization for its existence investigation of prohibition enforcement and declared:

"It is the most extraordinary exhibition of indifference to the expressed will of congress that I have ever known."

"This commission was appointed principally, if not solely," said the Virginian, "for the purpose of inquiring into prohibition but until last week not a member of the commission had read the provision in the appropriation bill authorizing its constitution.

"I am going to insist that before we appropriate another dollar that the commission or the president make some report to congress on what it proposes to do."

The $250,000 fund for the commission's work was appropriated for the fiscal year ending next June 30 and there was some speculation whether this money may be expended during the next fiscal year without express authority from congress.

TWO BANK ROBBERS SHOT AND CAPTURED

GRACEMONT, Okla., Dec. 20.—(AP)— Two men were routed and shot by William Granger, president of the Graceland bank here late today while they were attempting to rob the bank.

The two men, Oscar Logston of Tulsa and Joseph Cherry, were in the county jail here tonight wounded. Logston's condition was said to be dangerous. Cherry had been shot through the right elbow.

Cherry said he lived in Fort Smith, Ark.

The men entered the bank, Granger said, with a sawed off shotgun and a sack, compelling him to put all of the handy cash, about $1,628, into the sack.

One of the men forced him to go with him to the vault. Finding it locked, the man retreated and with his companion bolted from the bank.

Several merchants grabbed arms from a store nearby, and pursued in an automobile.

Longston and Cherry abandoned their car about a mile from town and fled through a field. The small posse closed in upon them, firing and the robbers surrendered.

The sack containing the money was recovered.

WILLIMANTIC

MRS. FARNUM GRANTED STOCKS AMOUNTING TO $13,159 BY JURY

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Dec. 20.—After 40 minutes of deliberation, a jury of the Windham county superior court this afternoon returned a verdict in favor of the plaintiff in the case of Jennie Lilly Farnum of Worcester, Mass., vs. Edward A. Winter, proprietor of the Hotel Hooker, returning to Mrs. Farnum $13,159 in stocks plus interest from Oct. 31, 1927, which Winter alleged was given as a "gift" to him by the late George L. Wheeler. Mrs. Farnum, who was administratrix of the Wheeler estate of which she was also sole legatee, entered civil action to recover the amount of the stocks. The case was heard Thursday when arguments were started by the attorneys late in the afternoon. Arguments were resumed this morning by Attorney Samuel B. Harvey, who was associated with his son, John B. Harvey, for the defense, and Attorney Earl C. Richards of Worcester, Mass., associated with Attorney W. A. King of this city for the plaintiff. Judge Yeomans delivered his charge to the jury just prior to the noon recess. The jury retired at 2 o'clock and returned at 2:40, when the verdict was made known through Fitz H. Paine of Pomfret, foreman. The stock in question consisted of 17 shares of preferred capital stock of the Union Pacific Railroad Co. worth about $1,394 and 65 shares of capital stock of the American Telegraph & Telephone Co. worth $11,765. The defense claimed that the stock was given by the deceased to Mr. Winter as an outright gift, while the former was in a sound state of mind.

With the return of the verdict in the Farnum vs. Winter case, the jurors were selected to hear the cases of Matthew F. Lynch, Admr., against Earl J. LeClaire and Rose Yvonne Ewart vs. Earl J. LeClaire, which are being tried jointly. In the first action Lynch, administrator of the estate of Edward K. Ewart, is seeking damages of $10,000 on behalf of the estate. Rose Yvonne Ewart, widow of the deceased and niece of the administrator, seeks damages of $5,000. The case is the aftermath of an accident that occurred on the Putnam-Brooklyn road, south of Attawaugan, about 11 o'clock on the night of Aug. 25, last. Mr. and Mrs. Ewart were riding with Earl J. LeClaire in the latter's Chevrolet roadster when the machine collided with a Ford sedan operated by Charles A. Tracy, Killingly young man and employe at the Powdrell & Alexander Co. Ewart died within a few minutes after the crash. Mrs. Ewart suffered injuries, including the loss of two teeth. Tracy, who was one of five in his car, was the only one of that group to be injured. He suffered a bad wound on his left arm. His car was wrecked, while the LeClaire machine was only slightly damaged. LeClaire is a resident of Moosup.

The first witness called for the plaintiff this afternoon was Rose Yvonne Ewart of Central Village, the widow. She testified to riding with her husband and LeClaire and to certain details of the accident in which it is alleged that LeClaire pulled his machine out to the left of the road into the path of the Tracy machine. LeClaire was driving toward Putnam at the time, while Tracy was headed toward Brooklyn. She told of the death of her husband and the injuries which she sustained.

Charles A. Tracy, driver of the second car involved, said that Miss Lillian Junkens of Boston, Mass., was seated on the front seat with him. Occupying the rear seat were Miss Charlotte Johnson of Boston, Renee Cote of Brooklyn and G. Elliott Goodell of Killingly. Tracy said that his speed was about 20 miles an hour. He said that there were no cars in front of him, but that he knew that there was a machine to the rear and others were coming from the opposite direction. He said that when less than two car lengths away, Le Claire, who approached from the opposite direction, pulled out to his (LeClaire's) left, blocking the road and making an accident inevitable. Under cross-examination, Attorney Carpenter of Hartford attempted to show that the machine trailing Tracy was attempting to pass at Tracy's left about the time of the crash with the LeClaire car. He said that it was a clear night and that he had a good view of the road ahead.

G. Elliott Goodell, who said that he was seated on the right of the rear seat of the Tracy car, also placed the speed at about 20 miles an hour. He told of slowing up near a gas station at this point to see if Renee Cote's brother was there. Renee Cote said that Miss Johnson sat between Goodell and himself. He also watched for his brother, who had planned to be at the gas station to take him home. When it was found that his brother's car was not in front of the station, Tracy said that he would drive on to Cote's home. The crash took place about 100 feet beyond the station while the Tracy car was ascending a slight grade. John W. Chase of East Killingly said that he was driving a car and trailing the Tracy machine. He had a man named Shippee with him. He said that he saw the LeClaire car veer to the left. He stopped his car behind the machines involved in the accident and remained at the scene quite a while. He denied having made any attempt to pass the Tracy car just prior to the accident and under further cross-examination said that he was not sure whether there was another car ahead of the LeClaire machine, which approached from the opposite direction. He was the last witness heard today. Court adjourned at 5 o'clock until next Thursday morning, Dec. 26, at 10 a. m., at which time the case will be resumed.

The jury hearing the case follows: Edwin L. Backus and William A. Burleson, of Windham; Edwin Buck and Edward Zeller, of Ashford; Clinton E. Frink and Fred Hicks, of Canterbury; Roy E. Latham, of Eastford; John Scott, of Hampton; Fitz H. Paine, of Pomfret; Morrell Roberts, of Scotland; John E. Griffiths, of Sterling, and Gustave Hagstrom, of Thompson. Other jurors drawn on the list were excused for the term.

The tree and many of the gifts were donated by the Ladies of St. Anne society. There was the singing of hymns, recitations and remarks by the priests of the parish.

At St. Joseph's parochial school Christmas trees were located in two of the grades where all of the 400 pupils gathered to share in the distribution of gifts by the sister teachers. Mrs. Ruth O'Neill, widow of the late Dr. Owen O'Neill, presented every pupil in the school with a supply of candy and oranges. The program of singing and recitations was appropriate to the occasion.

A play entitled The Christmas Carol was given in the assembly hall of the Windham street school this afternoon with all grades participating in singing and recitations. Instead of receiving gifts the children brought them for distribution to needy children. Principal F. R. Noble and the teachers were in charge of the program. In the kindergarten department the little ones received gifts from a tree.

The uncovered postcard for holiday mailing is practically a thing of the past. Postmaster W. T. Crumb said that it would be a hard and almost impossible proposition to handle the increased parcel post mail without the extra room at the rear of the Finn block, rented by the government for December.

NEW FREIGHT SERVICE AVAILABLE FOR DANIELSON

DANIELSON, Dec. 20—The N. Y., N. H. and H. R. R. company introduced a transportation innovation in this territory this morning—that of shipping freight by motor truck. It is understood that this new service, while more or less experimental at present, is very likely to be expanded and developed. At present this truck service extends no farther south than Danielson. It provides a fast means of transportation between Putnam and Danielson. Nothing relative to a schedule for the truck service was available here today, but a more definite statement relative to the service is expected to be available the first of the coming week. Supt. R. M. Smith is to be in this territory Saturday and his attention will be given at least in part to the new trucking line.

The truck that arrived here this morning was of 6-ton capacity and rates a unit of the New England Transportation company equipment, this corporation being a subsidiary of the railroad company. What the truck represents in the way of additional freight delivery service was of interest to numbers of business men.

Cars operated by Henry H. Stark reather of Winter street and by Charles Gordon of Dayville crashed at 2:30 today in Main street at Winter street, and both machines were considerably damaged, though neither Mr. Starkweather nor Mr. Gordon were hurt in any degree. Mr. Starkweather who had been proceeding northward along Main street made a left turn to go into Winter street just before the Gordon car, coming south, crashed into the other machine. The Starkweather car with its right side battered in, was tossed up onto the sidewalk near the residence of Dr. F. P. Todd. State Officer Royal Scranton, who investigated the accident, ordered Mr. Starkweather to make a court appearance to answer to a charge of failure to grant the right of way.

Mrs. Gilbert Pellerin

Mrs. Alphonsine Pellerin, 81, widow of Gilbert Pellerin, Sr., died about midnight last night at the home of her son, Gilbert Pellerin at the Fred Paine farm in the Squaw Rocks district. Today the body was conveyed by Undertaker L. E. Kennedy to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Provost on Connecticut Mills avenue, from where the funeral is to be held. Mrs. Pellerin was a native of Canada, but had been a resident of this town for many years. Alexander Pellerin, well known musician, is a son of the deceased. He is a resident here.

Chauncey Ganung, Hartford, special deputy commissioner of domestic animals, came here today and with First Selectman Charles A. Tillinghast visited the James Moran place on East Franklin street to check up on the killing of Mr. Moran's rabbits by two dogs that raided there earlier in the week.

The outcome of the conference is that Mr. Moran is to receive $300 from the town to partly compensate him for his loss. The settlement was agreed upon on the basis of $3 each for 100 rabbits that were killed or are missing. Of these 100 rabbits 55 were registered animals, so that the settlement price is regarded as being on a modest basis. Mr. Ganung said this afternoon that the dozen registered Belgian hares that remain of all that were in the yard are among the finest he has seen in Connecticut.

The town will be reimbursed for the money it pays to Mr. Moran.

The Killingly Theft Detecting society, organized back in 1847, and having as one of its original objects the pursuit and capture of horse thieves, has re-elected officers for another year. A. B. Simmons of Ballouville is the president, Frederick A. Jacobs vice president, John Z. LaBelle of Ballouville secretary-treasurer. There are about 50 members of the society, many of them long resident in this town.

Chief John McFarland had an unusual duty to perform this morning. Summoned to the graded school off School street, he found in one of the rooms there an unbidden visitor—a cute little puppy that had followed its little mistress to school, without permission. The little girl cried pitifully under the impression that the officer would take away her little four-footed friend, but she didn't know the chief. The officer summoned a taxi and saw to it that the puppy got home safely and in comfort, and little Mary was happy again.

During the early hours of this morning this town was deluged under such a downpour of rain as seldom has beaten upon it in the past decade. An incident of the storm was the vividly flashing lightning and rolling thunder. This opening of the flood gates of the skies came after three days of rain. It had its advantages. This morning reports began to come in of there being water in wells that have been dry since last summer and of the end of carting water for household and stock uses at some farms. Again, water was pouring over dams on streams hereabouts today as it has not done for the past six months. However, Danielson and the surrounding territory escaped the sleet reported from points farther north.

William Richardson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Richardson of Broad street, is to resume his collegiate course at Northeastern university in Boston at the opening of the new term, on December 26. For several months past he has been a member of the shipping department staff of Powdrell and Alexander, obtaining practical experience. Mr. Richardson is pursuing an industrial engineering course at Northeastern.

PUTNAM

MRS. DERUSHA FINED $50 FOR PASSING BOGUS CHECKS

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Dec. 20.—In justice court in Pomfret this morning before Acting Justice Louis A. Woisard of Danielson, Mrs. Ethel Derusha, 15 Lyons street, this city, was found guilty of charges of obtaining money under false pretenses and passing worthless checks. The state was represented by E. Newton Searls, who prosecuted in his capacity of grand juror. Mrs. Derusha was without counsel.

She was reticent when asked for reasons for passing the worthless checks and when asked for a plea she hesitated several minutes before giving an answer. When forced to act, Mrs. Derusha entered a plea of guilty, accompanied by reservations in which she declared she gave the bogus notes on condition that her creditor hold them until such time as she would be able to cover them with deposits. Arthur E. Darling, who preferred the charge that resulted in the Putnam woman's arrest, denied that he had accepted the check under Mrs. Derusha's conditions. When advised by the court that officials of the Citizens National bank had been summoned to testify, Mrs. Derusha withdrew the reservations made in her first plea and entered a plea of guilty. Accordingly, she was fined $25 on each count and received a 30-day jail sentence which was suspended for a period of one year. A severe reprimanding from Judge Woisard was also handed the prisoner. She was acquainted with the seriousness of her offense and told of the consequences she would be forced to undergo, which ranged from a heavy fine to a long prison sentence, should the courts decide to press the case.

Mrs. Derusha was arrested Thursday by Police Sergeants Liard of the local police and Gardner of the state police barracks at Danielson. Allegations contained in the warrant were that Mrs Derusha on several occasions had issued checks at times when her account at the Putnam bank had been overdrawn for months.

The attention of state police of Danielson barracks again has been directed to burglaries in country stores on the outskirts of this city. This week the store of Martin Nelson was entered and merchandise amounting to $65 taken. In the postoffice and general store thieves procured keys to a gasoline pump and stole a quantity of gas. State Officer Royal V. Scranton has been assigned to the case.

A woman giving her name as Mrs. Lucinda Gonyea, who claimed her address as 51 Middle street, this city, was presented in police court in Providence today on a charge of shoplifting. She was found guilty and a fine imposed. Unable to raise the fine she was being detained at police headquarters in that city awaiting the arrival of a good Samaritan to release her from the clutches of the law. Providence police communicated with Sergt. George Liard of the local police, who made an effort to inform relatives of the woman's plight, but at a late hour this afternoon he had been unsuccessful in locating any of her acquaintances.

Captain of Police William J. Jarvis is confined to his home on School street suffering from a sprained ankle which he sustained early this week when he slipped and fell while entering his automobile. It is thought that the police head will be indisposed for several days. Sergt. George Liard is acting captain, having transferred from his regular night shift to day duty. Supernumerary officers are patrolling the night beat left vacant by the sergeant's transfer.

Mrs. Genevieve Letters of Grand View returned to Springfield, Mass., today to visit with her sister, Mrs. John L. Shaw of that city. Mr. Shaw, dean of Springfield newspaper advertising men, died at his home there last week.

Police of two states were searching today for an unknown man who assailed Joseph N. O'Kane, town official and state representative from Webster at his home in Dudley yesterday. O'Kane was returning to his home after closing his lunchroom at midnight. When he was about to enter his home a man came out of a growth of hedge, pressed a gun against the town official ordering that he put his hands up. O'Kane turned upon the bandit, grappled with him. He called for help, but before the arrival of police the assailant wrenched himself free and made off in the darkness. O'Kane had $500 on his person. Police of Webster and Dudley combed the towns but without result and today extended their search into Connecticut villages on the border line.

An interesting address was given Wednesday by Dr. James L. McCartney, chief of the division of mental hygiene of the state board of health who spoke at the meeting of the Putnam Rotary club. Dr. McCartney spoke of his duties as an official of the state health board, which includes prevention work among mental and nervous subjects. A Christmas collection was taken up among the club members which will be used by the committee providing Christmas relief for the city's poor. Secretary E. Leslie Beebe said today that ample funds are available for this work that will insure new shoes for every needy child in the city. By a vote of the members, the Putnam club will hold a joint meeting with the members of the Danielson club in Danielson on the evening of Jan. 23. Visitors at Wednesday's session included Van Thompson, Henry Johnson and Henry Dubuc of Danielson and Dr. McCartney of Hartford.

THE AUBURN REPORT

Immediately following the riot at the Auburn prison in New York state, it was the claim of the deputy warden that there had been too much coddling in that institution and that the operations of the Mutual Welfare league were responsible for it.

Directly thereafter the governor of New York named a special representative in the person of Col. G. F. Chandler to conduct an investigation at Auburn. He has been at work on that task since then and in the report that he has made to the governor he corroborates the deputy warden. He declares "a veritable reign of terror has obtained in this prison through the machinations of the league."

That isn't all that he found there but it was enough for him to call for the abolition of the league and to declare that it was inconceivable that such conditions could obtain in that state. This organization among the prisoners was such in character that desperate characters could get control of it. That is what they did and they turned it to their advantage. They created an organization inside the prison walls that was as well organized for trouble as their gangs on the outside. They began their operations last July. They succeeded so well in making a shambles of the place that they were encouraged to continue. They found that they were not restrained in their league activities and it was quite the natural thing that they should lay plans for the December riot.

From the report of the investigator and the statement by the deputy warden it becomes apparent that conditions were known at the institution relative to the detrimental effects of the league and the coddling the prisoners had been receiving. The inference is gained that it was impossible to alter the leniency and to enforce discipline, but there can certainly be no further need for further demonstrations.

It is a serious position in which the public is placed when desperate criminals can gain control of penal institutions, kill keepers and insist upon being given their liberty. New York has a problem to solve in this respect which ought not to require any lengthy deliberations or another outbreak to produce action.

BETTER PROTECTED SUBS

In connection with the launching of the newest submarine for our navy, the statement has been made that such safeguards have been thrown about the present-day underwater boats that there is no danger of any repetition of the S-4 disaster.

It is certainly to be hoped that this is true and that the improvements are such as to accomplish all that is expected of them in case of emergencies. These safeguards have been the result of peace-time disasters, a recognition of the need of doing something to prevent the drowning of sailors aboard submersibles like rats in a trap.

While submarines are warships and have a limited amount of space for the necessary equipment, it has been found possible to equip them with "lungs," by the use of which the men can escape through a special hatch and rise to the surface in case an accident sinks the sub on the bottom. Previous to that they can release a buoy that will carry an electric light to the surface and provide a phone connection with the sunken ship. This serves to hasten the location of the missing vessel and facilitates the getting of information concerning conditions aboard.

All of this should be especially helpful in connection with the rescue of imprisoned crews but the saving of much time in the raising of sunken subs will be accomplished by the building into them of what are known as pad eyes to which cables attached to pontoons can be quickly fastened.

What has been done creates the impression that greater safety has actually been thrown about the submarine during peace-time operations and confidence prevails that the devices will give a good account of themselves if ever put to a test. Such improvements are the direct outcome of the two submarine disasters off the New England coast.

IMMORTAL POEMS

When Clement Moore wrote "'Twas the Night Before Christmas" he probably had little idea that it would be treasured all down the century and much read by succeeding generations. The chances are that he gave no thought to any such possibility, being concerned chiefly with his immediate present and in interesting American children at that particular time.

In all probability, as it has turned out, Moore's "A Visit from St. Nicholas" is better known than the author. Many might be able to recite the poem without having any knowledge of the author.

His name has come to attention recently because of the plans being made to build a subway which would call for the removal of the old homestead at Elmhurst, L. I., where Moore lived. It was back in 1822 that he wrote the poem, but there seems to be considerable uncertainty as to where he wrote it. Because it was claimed that he penned it at 429 23rd street in New York city a determined effort was recently made to bring about the preservation of the building located at that point which had been sold and was about to be torn down that a modern structure might take its place. The effort was not successful despite the resistance offered by a woman tenant who refused to be ousted.

Now, however, comes the claim that the homestead ought to be preserved because it was there the poem was written. Something seems to be a bit uncertain about these claims. Possibly the author had association with both buildings and may have done work on it in both places but so many years have passed without any positive information being obtained that there's no possibility of anyone being alive today who would have direct knowledge. Whether the story of the writing of it has been handed down in the family may decide the matter. There should be no great difficulty in moving the homestead to another foundation if a subway is going to endanger it, provided sufficient funds can be raised for that purpose and the building's preservation.

One thing seems certain, however, and that is that when poets complete a poem they should compile a record of all essential details concerning it so that if it becomes immortal the public that may be urged to create a literary shrine for it will know the circumstances.

HOPELESS FUTURES

Whatever you do, don't become a bank robber. Don't try to get away with the funds of such an institution by holding it up and don't try to loot it through an inside job. Too many have tried it and while there might seem to be a bit of temporary success at first it ended disastrously in the end.

There is nothing in the record of bank robbing that should offer the least bit of encouragement to those desperate individuals who believe the world owes them a living and who proceed to get it in such a manner, or to those who take funds because the taking seems easy. In either case, they invariably get caught and the end, to say the least, is inglorious.

Just at the present time those in the Flint, Mich., bank are facing the effects of misguided speculation. They robbed the bank to carry it on. They did what many others before them have done. They even got caught as others have done and now, like the others, they must pay the penalty and suffer the future effects. They are young men who held good positions and good prospects for the future. All is wreckage for them. The institution has received sufficient protection to safeguard its depositors but it was through no foresight on the part of the looters.

There are good reasons for believing, even before punishment has been experienced, that those who were responsible have received a lesson which will be sufficient to guide them during the future. If they haven't done so already, they will have an opportunity to realize that such methods do not pay, but there is the powerful lesson which any others who have not gone through the mill but who may be contemplating such a thing should grasp. Instead of insisting upon a personal experience, with all the distressing features that go with it, it is time to profit by the sad experience of others and to realize that it leads only to tragedy—tragedy for others as well as self.

Those who have taken the desperate chance and been caught understand the folly of it, and it is most unfortunate that it cannot be firmly impressed upon the minds of those, who indicate they are so fascinated by the possibilities that they cannot resist, that it is a hopeless venture.

EASTMAN RENAMED

New England is represented upon the interstate commerce commission by Joseph B. Eastman. With his term about to expire he has been renominated by President Hoover and his reappointment has been approved by the senate. This means that he will serve for another period. He has been a member of the commission for ten years and it must, therefore, be recognized that he has had most valuable experience in dealing with the problems before that body.

Mr. Eastman is a democratic member of the board and one who is inclined to be on the offside of some propositions. He has gotten the reputation of displaying such views that he has won the support of the western insurgents. Nevertheless, that was not regarded by the president as a reason for dropping him at this time. Rather did he consider the opportunity before him for greater service on the board because of his long experience and the manner in which he had displayed ability in dealing with railroad problems.

That no small influence in behalf of Mr. Eastman's appointment came from the fact that it was urged by the railroads of this part of the country seems probable. Certainly if it had been regarded that he stood in the way of the best interests of this part of the country railroadwise and was deemed objectionable by the railroads there would have been ground for considering some other democrat to take his place. He hasn't served with the view to making his decision please all the railroads in the country, and such opposition as manifested itself may have come from such reason, but it is difficult to see how any commissioner could think of his duty as simply trying to please all the roads all the time. It is not only an impossible task but that certainly isn't the measure of a good commissioner.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Think what a lot of shoveling there would have been had all this week's rain been snow.

The man on the corner says: Even fashion realized that skirts must start downward in order to remain skirts.

It is taking a long time to get those brooks, rivers, reservoirs and ponds up to the point where winter can get busy.

It has been a week of soaking rain and the wells and streams should show the good effects of it. As for the shoppers, they've spoken for themselves.

THE MAN WHO TALKS

Is it a fact, or is it a sheer imagination, that dark, gloomy weather has a depressing effect upon us. There is certainly a reason for dark, gloomy weather. It means that a storm is approaching of either rain or snow. It is an established fact that the earth needs snow and rain as much as it needs sunlight. In fact that continuance of our existence depends on both. Without the rain we should lack one of the essentials of life—that of water. Without sunshine necessary things would not grow. Why then, as intelligent beings, should we be made miserable under one of these weather conditions more than the other? But explain it as you will there is a certain type of mind that is rendered miserable if it is ever more than normally hot or cold; too dry or too wet. Mild sunshine only pleases them. O, if they could only have charge of the weather!

In a recent issue of the Review of Reviews, there is an interesting article on "Be Cured in America First." The thought that the writer has in mind is how many people rush to Europe to get the benefit of hot springs, while those in America would do the trick fully as well and at less than half the price. The writer of the article intimates that most people, with money enough to be sick in a fashionable manner, arrange to have their ailments reach a crisis in the spring and fall of the year. "In the spring they boil out after a hard winter; in the fall they do it again in preparation for another." Now Europe seems to have those springs that accommodate the ills of people of the long pocket book. They have nothing, however, that suits the ailments of the poorer classes. The writer of this article calls attention to the pertinent fact that America has hot springs of the same ingredients as those abroad.

In spite of the knowledge that the average person has of the necessity of the clouds as well as the sunshine, just as soon as a dismal day arrives there is a certain type of mind that bursts out with: "Oh, what a rotten day!" Now this clearly indicates that the source of contentment does not lie within, but is regulated by external conditions that are constantly changing. If joy and sorrow are not latent conditions of the human soul external circumstances will not give much satisfaction—at least not much that is abiding. These poor weather-afflicted people are always reminded when a dark day comes that it used to affect their dear old maternal grandmother in just the same way. In fact the poor old woman was compelled to take to her bed whenever there was a dark day, and that this sad affliction has been handed down to her by heredity.

The statement is sometimes made that a person does not use good judgment in spending time and money touring through Europe before he has visited the manifold places of interest in his own country. Now this depends very largely what Europe holds out to him at the time being. He can visit the worthwhile places in his own country far more readily than he can the points of interest in Europe. Possibly there is in London, Paris, Berlin, or some other large and notable city some international conference that is worth a trip across the Atlantic to attend, and while over there one had better make the most of his opportunities for general sightseeing, because he may never again have so favorable an opportunity. With the automobile there are very few important spots that may not now be easily reached. If there is no great convention on, or some other great international gathering, one had better look over more of America.

Is there anything in this world that a man is more lavish with or squanders more foolishly than time? It is quite generally the custom of young housekeepers in this country to make a budget of their probable expenses, and there is very much to be said in its favor. No one's time is fully as valuable as the amount of pork and beans he is supposed to devour in a given time. Hence would it be all sheer nonsense if one planned each morning when estimating the amount of work to be done that day, to make some estimate as to the amount of time to be given each item? Of course it might have to be modified with some things because it is found at the time being that they require more time than was planned or anticipated. But in the long run it would prove to be the conservation of much valuable energy.

The old saying that "the poor are always with us" is absolutely correct. Wherever we live or whatever be the season of the year, whether favorable or unfavorable, there are those about us that need our help. That condition is brought about by the fact that there are so many agents that contribute to poverty. The drink habit, of course, is one and it is discouraging to see so large an element of society that closes its eyes to this indisputable fact. There are other common sources of poverty such as laziness, incompetency, physical and mental disability, wastefulness, lack of prudence and the value of a dollar. To all these must be added the lack of steady employment, which in many instances unfortunately becomes permanent. As long as such conditions prevail we cannot cast them aside by merely saying, "I'm sick of this everlasting giving; isn't there going to be an end to it?" Remember these unfortunates are saying also: "I'm everlasting tired of being hungry, cold, sick and homeless." The situation faces us and we must face it.

The kind-hearted people of America have a high reputation for meeting these great human needs in the past, and it is not at all likely that either now or in the future they will turn down these great human needs. It is amazing what great sums have been given to the starving in the Near East, as the result of Turkish cruelty, and also to the millions of suffering from the wars and famines in China. Just at present there is a burning need to help the aged and disabled ministers. The following appeal has been sent out: "Let us remember those, now wounded and stricken in the service we all love. Without the help of the churches there will be actual suffering. What is voluntarily given at the Christmas season means food, shelter, and medicine to our aged and disabled brethren and their widows." To this appeal there ought to be a very generous response on Christmas and Sunday.

When we look about us at this cold, wintry season of the year, we specifly this, that and the other person we know and wonder if it is all right with them. I suppose that it is perfectly natural for those of us who have dear ones living elsewhere to ask ourselves if they are probably well and happy, or sick or in trouble. When we are in that state of mind it is well to recall what Sir John Lubbock has to say on this matter in his "Pleasures of Life." "We are all apt, when we know not what may happen, to fear the worst. When we know the full extent of any danger, it is half over. Hence we dread ghosts more than robbers, not only without reason, but against reason; for even if ghosts existed, how could they hurt us? And ghost stories, few, even of those who say they have never seen a ghost, ever profess or pretend to have felt one."

COURIER'S CHRISTMAS NEWS FOR READERS 130 YEARS AGO WAS STORY OF WASHINGTON'S DEATH

It was on Christmas day just 130 years ago that the Courier gave to this city the first tidings of George Washington's death. In those days a paper did not present the news in the order of relative importance, but classified the items under departments. Hence Editor Thomas Hubbard did not print the big story of his Christmas issue on Page One with the state laws and international discussions, nor yet on Page Two with his 11-weeks-old foreign "advices." Instead, it appeared on Page Three, with the "American news;" and, believing that it would be of more interest locally than any other tidings could be, he included it there among the local news. Moreover, he emphasized its importance by enclosing it in a broad black border, known to printers as a turned rule.

The item of local intelligence which received first place in that issue was Immediately under this thriller about the sale of pews there appeared as follows:

Sale of the PEWS

in the Meeting-House will commence on Monday next, at half-past one o'clock, P. M., without appraisement, absolutely to the highest bidder.

Chelsea Society, Dec. 25, 1799

Immediately under this thriller about the sale of pews there appeared the headline—

"MELANCHOLY!"

followed by the crude cut of a guiding hand which drew attention to this paragraph: "A gentleman of this city has politely favored us with a paper containing the following truly

"MELANCHOLY EVENT"!

Then came the news:

New York, Dec 19—6. p m.

"The anxiety of the public being roused yesterday on the melancholy news of the death of the great WASHINGTON, we think it will be highly satisfactory to the public to be put in possession of all the documents that have come to hand on this subject, which we have been at the pains to collect.

"In the first place we have seen

"A letter from a member of Congress from Virginia at Philadelphia, which announces the death of GEORGE WASHINGTON, but mentions no circumstance or date.

"We have a copy of another letter from a respectable merchant at Alexandria, dated Dec. 15th, which says,

" 'This is a day of mourning to us, and will be so to the United States, when the cause is known—Gen. GEORGE WASHINGTON is no more!'

"Another letter from Alexandria, dated the 14th, says—

" 'I shall only add, that last night, about 11 o'clock, departed his life, Gen. GEORGE WASHINGTON, at his seat, Mount Vernon.'

" 'Alexandria, Dec. 14.

" 'I have taken the earliest opportunity to inform you of the sudden death of the illustrious and much lamented Gen. GEORGE WASHINGTON; who died last night at his seat at Mount Vernon, after an illness of 24 hours, owing to an inflammation in his throat. The two Physicians who attended him, brought the melancholy news to this town. All the stores will be shut tomorrow morning, and a general mourning take place.'

"We have to add that yesterday, a letter was received in town from Gen. Hamilton, dated at Philadelphia, the day before, which is silent on the subject.

"We have had sight of another letter, dated Mount Vernon, Dec. 12, with Gen WASHINGTON's own signature to it, which does not even mention his own disposition."

As a matter of historical fact, Washington died at Mount Vernon of the complaint that Meeks reported. Its medical name then was the Cynanche Tonsillaris, which is now known as an oedematous (swelled) affection of the windpipe. However, Meeks made a slight error in dates Washington died on the 14th, not the 13th, of December.

"On the scope of the above melancholy tidings in"

Here the passage abruptly ends the rest of the sentence having been cut off from the paper when the issue came to be bound. The sentence probable went on to tell of some local action taken in recognition of the event.

At any rate it seems fairly certain that Norwich did not do much then about Gen. Washington's "melancholy" death. Nor, as a matter of fact, did Editor Hubbard. Neither in the issue of Dec. 25, 1799, nor subsequently, did the paper publish an obituary of Washington, or an editorial on his career.

Hubbard was, however, profuse of black borders. In the two succeeding issues he draped them around every column, including those filled with nothing but advertisements, and used them as well to set off the principal news items whether the news pertained to Washington or not. Hubbard explained as follows in the issue of January 1, 1800:

"As a tribute of respect to the memory of our beloved WASHINGTON we have thought proper to dress our paper in its present mournful garb."

The same paper notes:

"On Sunday last, the Rev. Mr. King's meeting-house presented a mournful and gloomy spectacle, being shrouded in black as a tribute of regard to the memory of the illustrious WASHINGTON. The citizens of every description wore a badge of mourning on the left arm, and every face was painted with gloom."

The meeting-house referred to was that of the Second Congregational society, now merged with Broadway church. The minister was the Rev. Walter King, of Wilbraham, Mass., who was installed May 24, 1787, as pastor of the Sixth, predecessor of the Second, society.

On Jan. 8 1799 the Courier published an account of George Washington's public funeral held at Mount Vernon, and of the services held in his honor in Norwich. The latter report is as follows:

"To the numerous marks of mournful respect paid to the memory of the now immortal WASHINGTON, we have to add those, from the inhabitants of this Society on the last Lord's Day—as but one voice appeared amongst us, on this national event all classes and sects united in performing the painful tho' pleasant duty—Divine service commenced in the Episcopal Church at 11 o'clock, and prayers adapted to the occasion were read by the Rev. Mr Tyler, which were preceded and followed by a solemn dirg from the Organ—a procession then formed, of both sexes, and moved, under the plaintive tones of muffled bells to the Presbyterian Meeting House, where the audience were entertained by a very pertinent and pathetic discourse by the Rev. Mr. King, from 2d Sam. 1st Chap. 27 verse 'How are the mighty fallen; and the weapons of war are perished!' at the close thereof was introduced, in a manner that did honor to the Speaker, and interested the feelings of his hearers, the annexed Hymn, borrowed from the Connecticut Courant of the 30th ult.—to these lines, the choir of singers immediately performed a piece of sacred music; in the two last verses of which, the whole congregation rose, in indication of their joint consent, to the entreaties therein expressed. After an appropriate address to the Throne of Grace, that beautiful Anthem, from David's Lamentation over Saul, concluded the solemn exercises

"The Pulpit, the Altar and Galleries of both houses of Worship were shrouded in all the sad habiliments of grief, and the personal emblems of mourning universally worn by the Sons and Daughters of Israel evinced their sincerity in paying this last tribute of regard to their late political FATHER—an undivided attention marked the whole scene, and each soul breathed the 'high, sincere'—

" 'Come, take our hearts and press them deep,
Angels may joy, but man must sleep.—' "

Then followed the hymn borrowed from the Courant, which is here omitted for lack of space.

The Rev. Mr. Tyler referred to was the Rev. John Tyler, of Wallingford, rector of Christ church for 54 years till his death on Jan. 20, 1823.

Sunday Morning Talk

CHRISTMAS

We all agree that of all the days of the year Christmas is the best. No other day is looked forward to as this day. How many reasons do we have for appreciating this day? First and greatest of all, it is the day on which humanity received the greatest and most wonderful gift. Heaven's choicest treasure. On this day our Heavenly Father gave to man His Son, that through this gift, we might obtain eternal salvation, which could be obtained in no other way. Have we ever realized what it would have meant if Christ had not come? It would have meant that there would have been no hope of salvation, no hope of heaven, no joy, no peace. How dark and hopeless would be our lives? All that was swept away when Christ came. All we have to do is to accept this great gift and our lives are filled with everlasting joy and peace. Knowing that in Christ alone we have hope, and realizing our utter unworthiness, our minds fail to comprehend what it means. If we study the life and conditions in countries that know not the Christ, we realize in a small degree what Christ means in this life. But we cannot begin to comprehend what He means in the next and the awful fate He has delivered us from. May this so fill our hearts with hearts with love and gratitude, that we may give our whole heart's love and life to Him. May His service and interest be our greatest joy and privilege. May our lives be lived wholely for His honor and glory. May nothing come between Him and our loyal service. As we draw near the Christmas season may our hearts overflow with love and gratitude as never before. May we show this love in telling others what He has done for us and in longing to do for all who will come to Him with their whole heart's love. May it be our daily prayer that we may more fully realize and appreciate this great gift. May we strive to pass on to others the true joy of Christmas and its true meaning. May it mean more than a day of getting, giving and worldly pleasure. In giving the greatest gift of all. How it must grieve the heart of the Master when we are so forgetful and indifferent? Enjoying all He has given and forgetting and ignoring the Giver. Not realizing that we are and all that we have is from Him. May each heart make a sincere Christmas resolve to show our love in our lives the coming year by our loyalty and faithful service.

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20.—It is a commentary on the sort of a chap President Hoover has picked to act as special ambassador in Tokyo during the London naval conference that everybody in Washington who knows him at all, knows him as "Bill" Castle.

And that, too, despite the fact that he is a Harvard man, about as seasoned a younger diplomat as the state department has on its rolls, and a lad who wears his diplomatic high hat, spats, etc., when necessary as though they belonged to him.

He may be "William Castle, Jr., assistant secretary of state," on the books; but he's "Bill" probably even to President Hoover, as theirs is a personal friendship.

In making the appointment, Mr. Hoover not only satisfied the urge of the state department to back up the London confab with contacts in Tokyo that might well help things along toward a new five-power naval treaty; but he also made it clear that the said Bill Castle's being passed by for the post of under secretary of state some months ago was not a white house matter.

It was very generally expected Castle would get that job. Gossip said President Hoover favored his appointment; but Secretary Stimson turned instead to Joe Cotton, New York lawyer.

Gratifying.

Publication of speculation as to Castle's probable selection in the circumstances, made the Cotton appointment rather an embarrassing moment for him.

Castel was known to have the backing of senators like Borah and Dave Reed and that, coupled with his personal standing with the president, was what underlay the news stories.

Which must make his present selection by President Hoover for the very special and delicate mission he will undertake in Tokyo all the more gratifying.

Another aspect of Castle's temporary job, however, is the light it throws on difficulties met in finding the right man to go as permanent ambassador to the Japanese court.

The vacancy has existed for months. The president is described as seeking a first class man for the post, yet he seemingly has no hope of finding him for some weeks or months to come. Otherwise, it would not have been necessary to hustle Castle eastward as special ambassador.

Wealth Needed

The trouble seems to lie in finding a man who has both the ability for the job and the private means to finance it. Until the new embassy in Tokyo is built and the ambassador relieved of the rent problem which his own purse must meet, that is one of the most expensive honors Mr. Hoover has to confer.

The cost aspect does not worry Castle. As special ambassador his Tokyo headquarters will be in a hotel and Uncle Sam will foot the bill out of contingent funds.

YOUR HEALTH

You Can If You Will

By George Kessel, M. D., Cresco, Ir.
(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

The doctor can do certain things for his patient. The patient has certain things he must do for himself. The two must co-operate in order to get results.

The doctor's part is to find out what is the matter, whether the symptoms the patient complains of are due to any recent or past illness, faulty diet, overwork, or work in unsanitary surroundings. Then the doctor perhaps may prescribe some medicine, or he may not; anyway, he will give the patient detailed advice as to his mode of work, diet, rest, sleep—and play for that matter.

The patient's part is to take the medicine, if any is prescribed, and to follow the advice given by the doctor—and the most important is the advice. Too many patients still think it is medicine they need. They think they know what is good for them—they must have medicine. It is dangerous to send a patient away without a prescription if you want him to come back again. He will manifest his disappointment by saying, "Aren't you going to give me any medicine?" Yet nine times out of ten it is not medicine the patient needs, but good advice.

Here again we get into trouble. Tell a fat patient of two hundred pounds that she must eat less, and eat the food that will let her weight come down to normal of one hundred and fifty pounds, and what does she say? "I have to work hard and I must eat. I cannot work without eating." Tell her she must cut down on the fattening foods, such as sugars and starches, and branch out into the mineral and vitamin vegetables, especially the green, leafy vegetables, which the body needs and what does she say? "I cannot eat cabbage because it makes gas. I cannot eat spinach because I don't like it." The doctor says, "Eat cabbage and forget about it." Much of the gas she complains of comes because she plans on its coming. She expects it, and by expecting it she invites it, and it comes. The doctor says, "Eat spinach and learn to like it."

"Just as the boy learns to like and tolerate cigarettes, so anyone can learn to like and digest food that is good for him. The first cigarette makes the boy horribly sick, but he does not stop with that; he takes another and another and finally says, "They are great!" It is now a habit with him, and a bad one. You can learn to eat the fruits and vegetables your system needs. Your system needs water. It needs at least two quarts every day. You can learn to drink two quarts of water each day by practice until it becomes a habit and the habit will be a good one. Your system needs that much water, more rather than less, every twenty-four hours in order to get a good internal housecleaning every day—and day after day.

Don't say you can't. YOU CAN IF YOU WILL.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

The Turkey Dinner

There's nothing more uncertain than
The certainty on which you plan.
—Reddy Fox.

It is curious how in this world things turn out so differently from what is expected. Just take the case of Reddy Fox and Mrs. Reddy and Hooty the Owl. All three had planned and schemed for a turkey dinner. All three thought they had been exceedingly smart. Hooty had spied on Reddy and Mrs. Reddy without knowing that all the time they knew what he was doing. So at last they had led him to a certain farm where turkeys roosted every night in an apple tree.

Reddy and Mrs. Reddy had thought themselves equally clever, because they had led Hooty there without letting him know that they knew he was following. Then Hooty had brought down one of those turkeys from up in that apple tree—a thing that Reddy and Mrs. Reddy could not do, for you know they cannot climb. Being two to one, they had taken that turkey away from Hooty. And while Reddy had been fighting with Hooty, Mrs. Reddy had carried the turkey under the barn, where they planned to eat it.

It was rather rough on Hooty to have that turkey taken away from him in that manner and, of course, it filled him with very great rage. He had been absolutely sure of that turkey dinner and just as he was beginning to make ready to eat it, it had been taken away from him. Just where that turkey had been taken he didn't see, for Mrs. Reddy had carried it off while he and Reddy had been fighting.

Under the barn Mrs. Reddy and Reddy grinned at each other across the body of that turkey. They were about to have a feast. "Now," said Reddy, "for the finest dinner in the world."

"I'll eat for you," said another voice. It was a most unpleasant voice. It was a voice that made the hair stand up the backs of Reddy and Mrs. Reddy. They sprang away from the turkey and as they did so, Yowler the Bob Cat stepped forward and planted his two big front feet on the turkey. Then he looked at Reddy and snarled. Oh, such an ugly-sounding snarl it was! Then he looked at Mrs. Reddy and snarled. Oh, such an ugly-sounding snarl as that was! Then he looked at Mrs. Reddy and snarled. Oh, such an ugly sounding snarl as that was!

Reddy and Mrs. Reddy backed away. They did a little snarling themselves, but it was feeble compared with the snarls of Yowler the Bobcat. Yowler suddenly turned away from the turkey and took two or more steps towards them. Once more he drew back his lips to show all his great teeth, and snarled. This was too much for Reddy and Mrs. Reddy. They turned tail and ran out from under that barn and headed for the nearest woods as fast as their legs would take them. They had no quarrel with Yowler the Bobcat and they didn't want one.

How had Yowler the Bobcat happened to be there? Why, Yowler had been having great difficulty in getting enough to eat and so he had taken to running, just as Reddy had. Yowler often goes close to buildings when there are no dogs around and people are asleep. He had come over to this farm hoping to catch a rat. Instead he arrived just in time for a turkey dinner. How he did enjoy it! When he had finished there was nothing left but feathers. He had even crunched the bones. His stomach was so full that he didn't feel like traveling. But he knew better than to stay there until daylight. So presently, like a gray shadow, he slipped out from under the barn and away to the woods.

So it was that Hooty the Owl did not eat the turkey dinner that he had been absolutely sure of. So it was that Reddy Fox and Mrs. Reddy did not eat the turkey dinner that they had been absolutely sure of. All of which goes to prove that being sure of anything is the greatest uncertainty in the world.

PRES. BARBOUR, BROWN UNIVERSITY, SPEAKER AT CHAMBER BANQUET

Addressing nearly 150 members of the Norwich chamber of commerce and their guests at the Christmas night party at the Wauregan hotel, Friday evening, Dr. Clarence A. Barbour, recently elected president of Brown university, Providence, stressed the art of worth-while living in the course of his convincing and interesting address upon the subject of "The Lure of the Undiscovered." Quoting from Dr. VanDyke's definition of worth-while living he said that a man must learn to accomplish the following things for a worth-while living: To think without confusion clearly; to love one's fellowman sincerely; to act from honest motives purely; to trust in God and Heaven securely.

During the supper, which was served at attractively arranged tables in the main dining hall, decorated with numerous Christmas trees, two of which were trimmed with vari-colored electric lights, there was spirited community singing and special quartette and group numbers, under the leadership of William G. Park, songleader, Henry J. LaFontaine accompanying at the piano. On the wall in the rear of the head table, was a Brown university banner. Grace was asked by Rev. David A. Pitt, D.D., pastor of the Central Baptist church, who was a student of President Barbour in his senior year at Rochester college.

As Frank R. Murdy, president of the chamber, wired that he was unavoidably detained at New Haven, Benjamin H. Palmer, Jr., presided at the meeting and at the conclusion of the supper introduced as the first speaker of the evening, Dr. Clarence Gallup of Providence, a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Lorin A. Gallup, former residents of Norwich. Dr. Gallup spoke of the growth of the city of Norwich since the time of his youth, when he resided here, and as a tribute to the speaker of the evening said that "this will be an administration second to none. He will bring to the college a contribution that will be recorded and applauded."

At this point, Mr. Palmer presented to Walter H. Pilcher, retiring secretary of the chamber, a beautiful Thermos jug and set of glasses on behalf of the board of directors of the chamber. He remarked that the gift was presented as an expression of the high regard the board held for Mr. Pilcher and extended him a very Merry Christmas and Happy New Year. In accepting the gift Mr. Pilcher was so deeply touched that he was unable to speak, momentarily, but finally controlled himself and expressed his thanks. He went on to tell of the cooperation he received from the members of the chamber, from the city and town officials and from the press. In closing he expressed the hope that his successor will receive the same measure of cooperation that he enjoyed while secretary of the chamber.

"I don't think the chamber has brought a better speaker to Norwich than Dr. Barbour during the time I have been connected with chamber interests," said State's Attorney Arthur M. Brown, who was accorded the honor of introducing the speaker. "We all know that he is nationally known as an educator and pulpit orator," he said, "and it is a distinct honor and privilege to introduce a great president of a great college."

After putting his audience in a humorous frame of mind with several witticisms, Dr. Barbour said that he was to speak upon the subject, "The Lure of the Undiscovered," and wanted to apply it in certain directions, but as a direct relation to the business of living. First of all I want to apply it to the intellectual realm. I've met a lot of "intellectual hoboes," people who have to have the wind at their backs to keep going. People who look for the easiest way. People who let somebody else do their thinking for them. That is why there are so many followers and such a small number of leaders.

I believe in spiritual new birth; also in intellectual new birth, he said. It is a great day in one's life when one really thinks for himself and ceases to be a blind follower. Your conclusions are as good as any other man's. There are a good many people who have just mush, where brains ought to be. It is their own fault, because they are not willing to pay the price of intellectual power. Intellectual power is battle.

Speaking of the attitude of people toward alleged new thoughts or truths, he said that this is an inquiring age. People do not take things for granted as they formerly did. The father and mother must be careful in how they try to smother the questions of their children. There are three possible attitudes, two of which are false and the other true. First, People accept the new thing because it is new. They say it is true because it is new. That is an absolutely false attitude. There are a lot of things that are old that are true and always will be.

The second is that people reject a thing because it is new. Where would we be if we had taken that attitude all through the times. The attitude to reject a new thing is unworthy and false. People should prove and test all discoveries and when the truth is found, be willing to follow at any cost. That's the only one worthy of intelligent people. What about the attitude toward worth-while living? That is worth-while living. I tried to live with men. I wanted to be a friend of men. I have my books, but I love people. Dr. VanDyke has come nearest to the definition of worthwhile living with these four points. To think without confusion clearly; to love one's fellowman sincerely; to act from honest motives purely; to trust in God and Heaven securely.

In closing, Dr. Barbour wished those present a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year and hoped that 1930 may be richly freighted with joy and satisfaction and useful living. A rising vote of thanks was extended the speaker for his instructive talk.

PURSE OF GOLD FOR SEC. WALTER H. PILCHER

About a score of his intimate friends were present at a surprise farewell dinner held Friday noon in the Wauregan hotel in honor of Walter H. Pilcher, secretary of the Norwich chamber of commerce, who has resigned the position and will leave the city Monday morning to take up his duties with the Worcester chamber of commerce. Mr. Pilcher's resignation became effective Friday evening.

James L. Case, who presided at the meeting, in behalf of a group of friends, presented Mr. Pilcher a purse of $50 in gold as a token of the high regard in which he was held by them and as a farewell gift. Other gifts received by the former secretary include a beautiful tie from John P. Morley of Morley's Men's shop, a salt and pepper shaker from Alexander N. Pasnik and a bathrobe and slippers to match from the Werman Shoe company.

In acknowledging the gifts Secretary Pilcher told of the work that had been accomplished under his regime, of the cooperation received from the city and town officials, of the chamber members and of the press and said that his resignation was due to an attractive offer from the Worcester chamber.

Among those who wished Secretary Pilcher success in his new endeavor and paid glowing tributes to him were Louis M. Crandall, James L. Case, Max Hanover, Edwin Hill, general secretary of the Y. M. C. A., Abner Schwartz, former president of the merchants bureau of the chamber of commerce, Rev. David A. Pitt, D. D., pastor of the Central Baptist church, and State's Attorney Arthur M. Brown, chairman of many campaigns under the secretary's regime of more than two years. State's Attorney Brown referred to Mr. Pilcher as honest, earnest, conscientious and a man whose services are entitled to recognition by the people of the city.

Among those present were Arthur M. Brown, Ernest O. Rodier, Harold Foote, Max Hanover, Judge Nelson J. Ayling, Abner Schwartz, Louis Crandall, Rev. David A. Pitt, D. D., Earl Taggart, C. W. Taggart, Charles Twist, Wilbur S. Williams, James L. Case, Melvin Worth, Henry Lyon, C. Edward Smith, Edwin Hill, Alex Pasnik and John Morley.

ANDOVER VOTES TO RETAIN HIGHWAY GRADE CROSSING
(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Dec. 20—The town of Andover voted unanimously at a special meeting tonight to keep the grade crossing now part of the main Hartford highway in that village. By another resolution the townspeople voted to accept the plans of Highway Commissioner Macdonald for the elimination of the two treacherous underpasses, providing that the grade crossing is left open. The plans as accepted include two recent amendments having to do with the construction of a road from Rosenblaum's store connecting with the Andover lake road by way of the so-called Cleveland underpass in the village. The plans as prepared by the commissioner's office provide for about one mile of new road beginning at a point near the Congregational church, running easterly and to the north of the railroad tracks, through the village at the rear of Rosenblaum's store and in front of the Baptist church to a point in the rear of the home of Constable Allison A. Brink, there connecting with the present highway.

CHILDREN SANG CAROLS AT SHELTERING ARMS

Friday morning at 11 o'clock, the children of the Norwich Private day school went in a body to the Sheltering Arms to sing their Christmas carols to the inmates of the house. As in previous years they had prepared pretty individual baskets, filled with fruit, nuts, stuffed dates and homemade candies for each member of the household. The eager young faces and the colorful baskets were a happy sight for all those who were able to go downstairs to the reception room, and it was very evident that everyone enjoyed hearing the old favorites and also some new songs, sung by the very young to the very old.

After having sung their carols downstairs, a number of the children went upstairs, to repeat some songs in the rooms of those who had not been able to go to the reception room.

With "A Merry Christmas to All" the children went home, made richer by a new experience.

A senator tells this one. A lady dining in a restaurant with her husband took him to task. "Why do you keep staring at that blonde, George?"

"Well—er, she reminds me of you, my dear."

"Then why not stare at me, darling?" was the sweet reply.—Boston Transcript.

NEW LONDON AUTHORITIES START TO BETTER UNEMPLOYMENT STATUS

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Dec. 20—Because of the large number of men out of work, City Manager William A. Holt has requested such men who are physically able to perform out-of-door work and who are citizens of New London, to file their applications for work at the office of the commissioner of charities, municipal building. It is planned to employ the men at Bates' woods clearing the several acres of trees.

After a few months have passed there should be a demand for labor in New London that will employ an unusual number of men. Then the first steps toward the construction of the proposed coast guard academy will have been taken it is supposed, and these preliminary moves will be the preparation of the land acquired from the Allyn and Payne estates on Williams street and Mohegan avenue. They are vast tracts of land and on the Payne property buildings must be removed and other work done, before steps are taken for actual construction work. The land must be graded also. It is high above the roadway and ledge will be encountered in grading, the land running back to Riverside park and to the Central Vermont railroad, sections of both these proporties having been deeded to the city and by New London to the government. The Allyn estate is in better condition for preparing it as it is comparatively level. There is a stone house on that land and it may be utilized, after alteration and additions, for the academy buildings. It is understood that the supervising architect's office at Washington has been at work on plans for the proposed buildings and that these were drawn after a complete survey of the land had been made. The hindrance to the actual beginning of the placing of stone, brick, cement, wood and mortar from which the buildings will rise into form is the preparation of the deeds transferring the land and all rights in it possessed by the grantors, to the satisfaction of the government representatives. Deeds dating back to the Deshon transfer of the land have been copied and the statements and measurements therein contained have been certified to under oath, as has been the case with deeds from the Hartford Trust company, the Central Vermont railroad company including officers who have but recently been chosen showing that they have the power to make the transfer and by what process that power was bestowed upon them. That methodical proceeding has been followed to the minutest detail in all that pertains to the transfer of the property. City Attorney Thomas E. Troland has had the oversight and approval of all that has been done in this work, and it has consumed a great amount of time. So it is apparent that while the proceedings for beginning the work have been slow, they have been thorough and accurate. The sum that will be spent in the work is expected to be a million and a half of dollars, quite a sum to be expended here during the months to come. No estimate of the time that will be consumed in the erection of the buildings and the wharves and repair shops has been announced, nor is it likely to be for it would be inconsequential at best. The knowledge that the property is to be developed and that it will be used for the purposes of the coast guard academy is sufficient to the townspeople.

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Dec. 20.—A search for the body of Marcus Willard, 17, of Meriden, who has been employed at the Seaside sanitorium, Crescent beach, is being made by state police and the United States Coast Guard. It is believed that Willard has committed suicide. Willard has been missing from the sanitorium since last Tuesday and all trace of him has been lost. When Willard disappeared two notes were found in his room, one addressed to the superintedent, Dr. John O'Brien, and the other to his relatives. Both notes made it plain that Willard intended to kill himself. The sanitorium being on Long Island sound, it is believed that Willard jumped into the water. UNUSUAL INTEREST IN TOWN HOME LIGHTING CONTEST

Quite an unusual amount of interest is being manifested in the Town Home Lighting contest. Some of the residences on Broadway, Sachem street and in Groseneville are already brilliantly illuminated, and the decorating is only in its inception.

The General Electric Co., through its Boston representative, Mr. Marsden, has offered an additional prize of $5, with the hope that the residential section will perhaps have a continuous decoration.

The time for sending in names to enter this lighting contest has been extended to Monday evening, Dec. 23. The judges, Charles W. Taggart, Dr. Hugh B. Campbell and Mrs. Archibald Mitchell, Jr., will carefully inspect the competing homes, and their decision will be most impartial.

Palace Theatre

The story of "The Love Racket," the all-talking Vitaphone feature, which opens at the Palace theatre today, is so famous throughout the world that it is almost unnecessary to tell about it. This great film, which was adapted from the stage success, "The Woman on the Jury," and which stars Dorothy Mackaill, Sidney Blackmer, Alice Day, Myrtle Stedman and others, has a striking plot, which, in a nutshell, can be given as follows:

The heroine is entrapped and betrayed by a man she loves. Desperate and reckoning naught of the consequences she shoots at him, and fails to hit him. Then, nine years later, comes the dramatic part, when she and the man she is going to marry are on the same jury which is passing judgment on another woman betrayed by the same man.

Knowing the dead man, and his evil ways, the heroine refuses to convict the young girl whom he made a mother, and from that point the situation develops into one of the tensest dramas Warner Brothers ever had the pleasure of offering the public through the medium of the talking picture screen. Before the play is over the audience begins to wonder which woman is on trial—the cringing wretch at the bar of justice or the pale-faced, tight-lipped woman who stays in the jury box as one of the twelve who were to decide the fate of the accused.

Sidney Blackmer, a newcomer to the talkies, is also sure to make a great hit in this emotional drama. Formerly the idol of the Broadway stage, he has forsaken that medium and is now an enthusiast of the talkies. It is his work, coupled with Miss Mackaill's extraordinary personality and the mighty sweep of the plot that makes this picture such a tremendous success wherever shown. Norwich is fortunate to be able to see it so early.

Sunday at the Norwich Y. M. C. A., the very appropriate moving picture, titled "The Christ Child" will be shown in five reels.

This is a faithful adherence to the atmosphere and circumstances that surrounds the early days of Jesus. Depicting the following scenes: the journey to Bethlehem, attack by the robber band, the stable in Bethlehem, the nativity, angel's message to the shepherds, the wise men visit Herod, Bachanalian feasts of Herod, adoration of the wise men, slaughter of the innocents, the flight into Egypt, presentation of the child in temple, Jesus as a child.

No character in history is so unique or so inspiring to all classes of people as Jesus of Nazareth, and this tender and interesting story of his childhood should make a strong appeal as we approach the anniversary of his birth.

It will be a good start for the observation of Christmas day to see this splendid production.

The adult public is cordially invited and youths fifteen and over will be admitted. Parents may bring their children down to eleven years, but none under eleven are expected.

Last Thursday evening the Ladies' Aid society sponsored a supper and sale followed by an entertainment at the church. Mrs. Frink and Nelson Carpenter comprised the program. For the first time the church was lighted by electricity, the wiring being put up temporarily as a try out for the location of lights.

STORES ARE CLOSED FRIDAY DURING MRS OPIE'S FUNERAL

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., Dec. 20—Westerly retail stores were all closed from 2:00 to 2:30 Friday during the funeral of Mrs. Sarah A. Opie, widow of Philip H. Opie retired founder of the P. H. Opie department store.

The funeral service, held at her late home, was conducted by Rev. Henry Charles Suter, pastor of Grace Methodist Episcopal church. In this church Mrs. Opie had taken deep interest, having purchased a new church organ and having the parsonage rebuilt and renovated a number of years ago. The services were largely attended and there were beautiful funeral pieces.

Burial was in River Bend cemetery, the bearers being Arthur Trotman, a neighbor; Arthur C. Vaughn, a relative from Providence; Arthur Thompson and Frederick Robinson.

Arriving in New York Thursday on steamship Olympic of the White Star line after several months' tour of Germany, France, Italy and Austria were Mrs. William D. Hoxie of 41 Elm street and Miss Elizabeth Perry of 2 Margin street. They came from New York directly to their homes in Westerly. The ship has been delayed in docking by the fog in New York harbor.

To illumine Fountain

During Christmas holiday week arrangements have been made by James M. Pendleton, trustee of Wilcox park, to have the Wilcox Memorial fountain opposite the entrance to the Westerly town hall, illuminated by flood lights from 5 to 11 each evening. The illumination will be a temporary one from a red and white light suspended from nearby trees. After the holidays the lights will be turned off and next spring permanent ones will be installed within the fountain, when the final regulation of the spray controls from the various nozzles will be completed.

Friday morning in the Third District court, before Judge Oliver H. Williams, business was disposed of as follows: Criminal docket, State, Oliver P. Crandall, director of public aid, vs. Edward F. Dennerey, White Rock. By request of Prosecutor John Ferguson, case was continued one week. Fiore Pignataro vs. Frank H. Eliven. Replevin case continued nisi. Aerovane Utilities Corporation vs. Al L. Savage; J. C. Tucker vs. Cyrus Williams, F. J. Bistang vs. Thomas Saddow, each continued one week.

In the case of State vs. Sullivan J. Bookataub, allegation of the forging and uttering of a promissory note, Prosecutor Ferguson informed the court that the case had been disposed of at the Kingston session of Washington county superior court and the exhibits in the case had been impounded in the Third District court in keeping of Sheriff Fred T. Mitchell. At his request Judge Williams directed Sheriff Mitchell to return the documents of Prosecutor Ferguson.

A meeting Friday evening of Deborah chapter, No. 9, Order Eastern Star, in Masonic hall, was held on this date by special dispensation by reason of the fact that regular meeting would fall on New Year's eve. Worthy Matron Mrs. Myrtle P. Campbell presided and following the degree work of the evening refreshments were served at small individual tables.

Thursday and Thursday night in Westerly numerous showers at times amounted to downpours, flooding streets and made auto traffic dangerous. Between 12 and 1 a. m. Friday by way of variety, thunder and lightning were added. Shortly after midnight two reports of thunder in close succession were not unlike those of a canon and were followed immediately by blinding flashes of lightning. Following the thunder reports rain descended almost in a cloudburst. The thunder cleared the atmosphere and clearing skies Friday were accompanied by a lowering of temperature. By Friday night the ground was frozen again.

Sale of Land

Dec. 19. J. Henry Burk, has sold to James A. Dunn, land on Elm street, deeded grantor Dec. 13, 1901 by Simeon F. Perry.

BODY OF GEO. W. SHIPPEE CLAIMED BY HIS SISTER

The body of George William Shippee, braiding overseer, of 618 East avenue Pawtucket, R. I., who died at 100 Canal street Westerly from a self-inflicted bullet wound in the head, in the early hours of Thursday has been claimed by his sister, Mrs. Fonsberg. Burial was at Forest Hills, Mass. The police are now of the opinion that Mrs. Stewart entered Shippee's room and following an argument Mrs. Stewart seized the revolver which was in Shippee's hand and thereby received burns on her hand when the revolver was discharged and the bullet entered her right side. Later Shippee is thought to have fired the three bullets into her heart before turning the gun on himself and firing the shot into his head.

It was reported that Mrs. Stewart had informed neighbors that Shippee had threatened to shoot himself but when cautioned that he might shoot her she had declared that he was too much of a coward.

Mrs. Stewart's husband, Harry Stewart, died March 12th in the Pulaski Lake institution. He had been a patient since January.

Shippee was a past noble grand of Good Samaritan lodge of Odd Fellows in Pawtucket. He leaves his widow, who is employed in a Providence department store, and two stepchildren, Consuela and Lawrence Davis. Before moving to Pawtucket some years ago he was a member of a minstrel troupe which toured the southern states.

Much Sympathy for Orphans

The four orphaned children have been objects of many charitable attentions, even the photographers of a metropolitan daily newspaper brought with him presents which he gave them before leaving. The children are three girls and a boy, ranging in age from one and a half to nine. They think their mother has gone away. They are being looked after by Miss Lucy Crowley, executive secretary of the Westerly chapter, American Red Cross, and a housekeeper has been secured to take temporary charge of the home. Three of the children are in school. Two applications have been received by Miss Crowley from people wishing to adopt one or more of the children. She stated Friday morning that a man called her on the telephone at midnight from Baltimore, and asked if he might adopt the youngest child.

Miss Crowley explained that since the children are left orphans it will be necessary for them to be turned over to the state and if they are adopted it will have to be done through the Child Welfare department.

HOW A RADIO PARTY CAME NEAR BEING SPOILED AND WHY

Harry MacGowan has an 8-tube radio which cost $900 and has got stations from Holland, Germany and Paris on his set. Buck is his nickname. He sure is a radio bug and has all of his friends beaten on getting stations across the water. He claims he can get sunny California as easy as rolling over in bed. Recently he had a few friends come in, also Lester Porter was asked because he told the radio bug he got China on three tubes at 4 o'clock in the morning. MacGowan could not believe that one. The party came and the program was a German orchestra. The time is about 6 hours different. In the meanwhile a bridge game took place and Miss Nellie Moore and Stretch Morrison beat Lester Porter and Miss Irene Burns two games out of three. It was then around 10 o'clock. All ready for the orchestra in Berlin and Miss Betty MacGowan tuned the dial to about 4. No sound came so Buck looked the $900 set over and could not find the trouble. It was raining and his friends were waiting for the music. MacGowan was mad and wanted to take an axe to the set; but his sister Betty, with a smile said, "Hold your temper! Call up a lineman in Mystic who knows the radio from A to Z!"

So he had to get the expert in Mystic out of bed to come down in the rain. It was then 11 o'clock. A transformer is in front of his house on a pole and the radio finder worked for 1 1-2 hours but the trouble cause was not there. So he asked Buck how the tubes were O. K. he thought. Lester Porter fell asleep waiting for the music to come across the pond. Betty came in with whipped cream, cake, with orange punch, while the $900 beauty was getting in working order, and Stretch told the radio bug to sell it and buy a horse; it would be cheaper. He sure felt bad over the trouble, to have all his friends there to hear it and all liking fine music over the air. At last the radio trouble-man from the up river town found the cause, when the hands on the cuckoo clock was straight up to one. He found a large Lawfield horse fly, about 4 inches long, under the tube that would not work well. It cost Owner MacGowan $7 for a new tube. But how did the mysterious horse fly get inside the radio? A weak voice came from Buck MacGowan's father, Peter, who is 99, and has long white hair and whiskers, said, "One day this summer, my daughter, Susan, was cleaning the parlor and had the door open when this monster horse fly came in. The top of the set was open. It must have got in then to plug a high priced radio!" The radio expert said, "That Lawfield horse fly caused plenty of trouble tonight! It is the first time in my life, since I been chasing wires and radios, that I ever saw a fly in under a tube in such a tight place!" Radio Bug MacGowan was working the dial for it was the wee hour, around 2:30, when the orchestra from Berlin, Germany, started to play. "When it is Wash Day in January, it is Hang-out Day over Here!" It came in some clear with not much noise, for the other radios were shut up and put to bed until later in the day. An orchestra of 25 pieces and the leader said they all wore pink uniforms with caps to match. All of them could sing and Paul Kieffer, the drummer, could play twelve different instruments and pick a tune on a violin with his teeth. Also he had a buck saw and played "Fifty Million Frenchmen Can't Go Wrong." Miss Moore claims it was the best music she had heard over the air in years. "You would think it was in the room!" And Buck turned to Porter and says, "Well, what do you think of the best set in the fishing village that can get a station in Germany, over 4,000 miles away?" His rival, Porter, came back with an answer, 'You had to send up to Mystic after a radio sharp to find a Lawfield horse fly, large as a Canada owl, before we got Berlin! But we Noank radio bugs have got to take off out hats to the wonderful set and the man at the dial!" Another station was got in China and they could not understand what they were talking about. So Peter MacGowan said, "That must be a bull fight in Spain!" They got a big kick and laugh out of that joke. It was getting on to 3:30 and Miss Burns, known to the party as "Silence," not saying a word all the evening, said "It is time to go home; for it will soon be time for the door of the church to be opened, and we will all be there!" So they bid Mr. MacGowan good morning as the roosters were crowing to tell the rest of the fishing men to get up and get some fish, for Christmas is right around the corner and fish is worth good money. We sure had a good evening but the horsefly almost spoiled the evening.

Open Saturday Evenings 6.30 to 8.30

IN NORWICH FIFTY YEARS AGO

An excellent entertainment was given fifty years ago, by the Caledonian society, at Greeneville, for the benefit of a large gathering and included "The Rose of Ettick Vale," a drama in three acts, and "The Kitchen Queen," a farce in one act

Other items of interest taken from the files beginning with the week of Dec. 15, 1879, are in part, as follows

Monday, Dec. 15 1879—Chief Engineer Carrier has just received photographs of Capt. Philip T. Brown, formerly of this place, and of the house and steam fire engine company at Stockton, Cal., over which he now presides.

Mrs. Lyman Brewer, residing on Washington street passed the 90th anniversary of her birthday on Friday, last.

Last Wednesday night a burglar attempted to enter the store of F. L. Gardner, on Market street, by cutting out a pane of glass in a rear window, but was evidently frightened off before accomplishing his purpose.

Sunday was the 80th anniversary of the death of George Washington.

Tuesday, Dec. 16, 1879—The Caledonians are making arrangements for their entertainment on Thursday night at Union hall.

Charles F. Thruber, of this city received two photographs from Kit Carson, Jr., yesterday, and a regular Texan sombrero.

A vehicle fell apart, as it were, like the "One Horse Shay," on Washington square, last evening, and the fore wheels and the body went meandering on while the hind wheels stopped to rest.

Strings of pickerel are appearing in the markets.

Apropos of the bill allowing foreign vessels to unload elsewhere than at a port of entry, it may be remarked that beside J. M. Huntington and Co., of this city, the Johnson Bros., of Montville, who import dye woods, are also sufferers, as also several lumber dealers of Norwich, whose vessels from the east used to be allowed to come clear up to our wharves, and the gas works, bleachery and Shetucket company, which used to bring coal from the British provinces via Allyn's Point.

Wednesday Dec 17, 1879—The finest game of football of the season was played on the grounds of Norwich Free academy by the classes of '80 and '81 yesterday, the latter team winning.

Fifteen years ago all horse shoe nails were made by hand and our hardware stores bought them at the rate of about two pounds daily from the manufacturers. Now they are all made by machinery and the dealers buy them by the ton.

The new international postal card has been received at the local post office. They are sold for two cents and will convey messages to any country belonging to the postal union. It is a great age when a message can be conveyed from Norwich to Paris for that price.

Thursday, Dec. 18, 1879—The Happy workers of the Universalist church, held a fair and entertainment at the church parlors last evening.

A gang of Western Union wire men are putting up two wires between Boston and New York. Both wires are to pass through the Western Union office in this city.

Potter, Jr., W. M.; Frank B. Durfey, S. W.; E. D. Johnson, J. W.; J. W. Gilbert, treasurer; John T. Crary, secretary; Howard L. Stanton, S. D.; Frank Fitch, J. D.; Frank Foster, S. S.; William H Armstrong, J. S.; John A. Bowen, marshal; and H. C. Albro, tyler.

L. W. Carroll, of this city, is increasing the number of carding and spinning machines in his mill at Voluntown, and is storing a large quantity of cotton.

A man with a cold is just as much in fashion today as a woman with a brown owl's head on the side of her hat instead of a pompon.

The Wauregan Hook and Ladder ball is to be given Friday evening, Jan. 20th.

Saturday, Dec. 20, 1879—The Caledonian society gave an excellent entertainment at Greeneville, Thursday night, to a large and appreciative audience.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theatre,

A hundred thousand wildly cheering football fans, massed in the enormous Los Angeles stadium for the annual Stanford-U. S. C. classic, one of the hardest fought games of each season, is but one of the many highlights of the all-talking all-whooped production "So This Is College," which opens at the Broadway today. Differing from any other college picture in that the entire production was filmed at an actual college, the University of Southern California, the real collegiate atmosphere prevails throughout, and nothing is lacking from beginning to end. The cast comprises the entire student membership of U. S. C., with Bob Montgomery, Elliott Nugent, Sally Starr, a new "find," Phyllis Crane, Ukelele Ike, Polly Moran and Lee Shumway leading in the fun. The nervous freshmen, fresh from high school, the cocky sophomores, the arrogant junior and the dignified (?) seniors, the various fraternity affairs, the "night before" the big game and the game itself, are depicted in smallest detail with comedy and action crammed into every foot of film. "So This Is College" has been stampeding audiences wherever shown, and it is expected to duplicate its success in Norwich, the home of clean school sport. N. F. A. students, both the "old grads" and the present classes, will enjoy every minute of its and "boiler" for more. Added talking features include the latest Paramount Sound News, "Noah's Lark," the first all-talking cartoon ever made, in which dialog supplants the sound effects of the usual cartoons, and "Mexicana," one of Gus Edwards' famous revuettes in natural colors. Music, singing and sensational dancing, with a plentiful sprinkling of comedy, are blended in a delightful revue, with the scene laid in the patio of a luxurious hacienda. The famous M-G-M ensemble, a score of lovely and talented girls furnish a colorful background for the alluring work of the principals altogether a delightful revue.

Probable Lineups Tonight

Norwich	Westport
Leffingwell, lf	lf, Sibiskie
Lynch, rf	rf, Harding
Harris, c	c, Ball
Eccleston, lg	lg, Bulkley
Pingree, rg	rg, Debish

The Norwich "Y" team will attempt to make it four in a row tonight at the Y. M. C. A. court when they meet Westport in a State league game.

LES PINGREE

Westport comes here with a good reputation but Coach Demarest's outfit is in fine condition and will give Westport plenty of action.

Norwich's lineup will be slightly revamped tonight due to the absence of Brown, stellar forward, who leaves today for Toledo to spend the Xmas holidays. Lynch who played most of the game in Winsted Wednesday night, will team up with Leffingwell at the forward berths. Harris, lanky center, will be in the pivot position and Eccleston and Pingree in the back course.

As an added attraction for tonight, Mgr. Leffingwell has signed Battery E, 2nds, of Westerly, to play the Junior Varsity. The Junior Varsity consists of the Academy players whom Coach Demarest has taken over until the Academy once again returns to the basketball court. The N. F. A. rovers will see Barber, Berardinzo, Dickerman, Golembeski and their other favorites in action as a unit, but under different colors.

The preliminary game will commence at 7 p. m. with the main attraction immediately following. Joe Belair will referee the main game with Ludlow handling the first game.

ARMY HAS SHORT PRACTICE IN FRIGID AIR

HUTCHINSON, Kans., Dec. 20—(AP)—Bad breaks on the weather, which have disorganized the trans-continental schedule of the Army football team en route to California to play Stanford December 28, continued today and cut short an emergency practice session arranged by "Biff" Jones here.

Frigid temperatures and a frozen field caused cancellation of plans for an hour's stiff workout and only 20 minutes of limbering up exercises was taken.

Dressed in sweat clothes, the squad boarded buses when the special train stopped here and was transported to the local gridiron a mile from the station. Frank Wandle used most of the time for a series of calisthenics, then the players did a little passing and kicking, closing the session with a run.

Major P. B. Fleming, graduate manager of Athletics at the Mikaca, said that the 12-hour delay in the schedule of the Army special due to the mid-west blizzard in addition to spoiling plans for practice, also had ruined arrangements for receptions at various stops along the route.

News that John M. Lazar, brilliant center who was left behind at West Point because of scholastic difficulties had been restored to eligibility and was leaving for the coast by air tonight, heartened his teammates.

Local schools and the business college dismissed their students early to permit them to witness the practice.

WEST TEAM PRACTICE WHILE EASTERNS ATTEND BANQUET

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 20—(AP)—Players who will represent the west in the annual East-West Shriners' charity football game here New Year's day, assembled on a short practice session today. Coach Percy Locey made no effort to select a team from the squad of 27 players but instructed them in a set of simple signals while kicking and passing took up some time. Formations will not be used until Kezar stadium field, now under repair, is available, probably tomorrow or the first of next week.

The eastern players, 22 in all, attended a luncheon given by the Big Ten club here and tonight were guests of honor at a banquet in Oakland. Head Coach Andy Kerr said he would have the squad out tomorrow for a workout.

Shrine authorities named officials for the game. They will be: Referee, Bob Evans, Milliken; umpire—Cort Majors, California; head linesman—Joe Lipp, Chicago; Tommy Fitzpatrick, Utah.

DONCHESS WILL GO TO COAST WITH PITT TEAM

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Dec. 20—(AP)—Associate coach Alex Stevenson today spiked reports that Joe Donchess, All-American end on the University of Pittsburgh's football team, might be left behind when the Panther goes to the Pacific coast to play the University of Southern California New Year's day. Stevenson said reports that Donchess would not make the trip because of scholastic difficulties were groundless.

The topic of the climate came to the fore in the discussion of Panther followers today as wintry gales sent Coach Jock Sutherland and his boys indoors while from the coast came word that the hot weather there is continuing.

WALLACE BEATS FLOWERS WITH TWO-FISTED ATTACK

DETROIT, Dec. 20—(AP)—Billy Wallace, Cleveland lightweight, won a [illegible] decision over Bruce Flowers, New Orleans Negro, in a ten round [illegible] bout at Olympia arena tonight.

Wallace used a two-fisted attack which passed Flowers. He had the Negro down for the count of eight in the second round. Wallace weighed 132, Flowers 126 1-2.

Marty Stone, 126, Detroit, outpointed Roy Ryan 124 1-4, Pittsburgh, in a six round preliminary.

Equals National Record

WATERBURY, Dec. 20—(AP)—Dr. W. Murray, of the Eagles Bowling club set a new city duck pin record and equalled the national mark of four successive strikes by scoring 155 here today.

CARRIGAN'S RESIGNATION IS ACCEPTED BY RED SOX

BOSTON, Dec. 20.—(AP)—Bill Carrigan, who piloted the Boston Red Sox to two world championships, today resigned that baseball berth for the second time in 13 years. He told President Bob Quinn, who visited him at his home in Lewiston, Me., that he had to quit baseball or neglect his own affairs.

When Quinn returned to Boston tonight, he said he was not ready to announce Carrigan's successor, who will probably be "Heinie" Wagner, "Wild Bill s" first lieutenant for many years.

"After a real man to man talk with Carrigan," Quinn said, "I am satisfied that it would be impossible for him to continue to manage the Red Sox and at the same time give his own affairs the proper attention, and I am not selfish enough to try and prevail on him to remain with our club under such circumstances. I realize fully that any man owes more to the welfare of his family and his private business than he does to outside interests.

"With the deepest regret I accept his resignation. Our relations for the past three years have been most cordial. I found him to be one of the very finest characters with whom it has ever been my good fortune to have been associated."

Carrigan, in announcing his decision over the telephone from Lewiston, said:

"I told Bob Quinn if it were a case of life and death with him, I would not think of leaving the Red Sox, but I do not feel that the condition is such.

"On the other hand, if I continued in the baseball business I would be compelled to neglect my own affairs to the detriment of my family. It is impossible to handle both and do justice to either, so in fairness to my growing family, I feel that I owe it to them to retire from active service in the game. There is positively no other reason for my decision."

Carrigan's business interests, which are extensive and varied in and about Lewiston, forced him out of baseball in 1916, when he was at the peak of his managerial career. During his two years at the helm he led the club to two world championships.

Several times during his retirement owners of the Red Sox tried to persuade him to return and at one time, when Harry Frazee controlled the club, he rejected a $20,000 a year offer to return to the game.

Bob Quinn lured him back in 1927, when the Red Sox fortunes were at a low ebb.

Carrigan, now 46 years old, has spent most of his baseball career in Boston as a catcher and manager. He was first signed back in 1906, while catching for Holy Cross. The Red Sox sent him to the Toronto International league club for seasoning but recalled him in 1907. He was one of the regular catchers until 1915, when he was first appointed manager.

TROJANS HOLD PRACTICE FOR NEW YEAR'S GAME

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 20—(AP)—Minus the advice of Head Coach Howard Jones who was kept from Bovard field by a bad cold, the University of Southern California Trojans today started their gridiron campaign for the Tournament of Roses clash at Pasadena New Year's day with Pittsburgh.

In the absence of their chief mentor the men of Troy went through a light signal drill with Bill Hunter, director of athletics in charge. The Trojan staff plans another light workout tomorrow. If Coach Jones is able to take up the task again, some dummy scrimmage probably will be held with the Trojan pigskin experts working on defensive tactics.

Frank Anthony, regular tackle, missing from the squad, was counted out with a bad cold but he is expected to be back again in a day or so.

The Trojans will have a busy time of it until Christmas when they will be awarded a day off pending strenuous final preparation.

WRAY NAMED HEAD COACH AT PENNSYLVANIA

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 20.—(AP)—J. R. Ludlow (Lud) Wray, line coach of the University of Pennsylvania football team for the last seven seasons, was today selected as head coach by the football committee of the Pennsylvania Athletic council.

Wray succeeds Lou Young, who recently declined re-election as head coach in order to become assistant to the chairman of the University of Pennsylvania athletic council.

It also was announced that Sydney E. Hutchinson had resigned as chairman of the football committee and that Lou Young had been appointed as chairman to succeed him. Hutchinson remains chairman of the council of athletics.

Jack Butler, coach of the 1929 Pennsylvania freshman eleven, announced his resignation tonight, declaring that he "will not work under Wray."

Gagnon Loses Decision

BOSTON, Dec. 20.—(AP)—The knife-like left jab of Armand Emanuel, the Los Angeles heavyweight barrister, carved for him a ten round decision over Jack Gagnon, Boston battler, here tonight in the Boston Garden's feature contest. The victor was off to a poor start, digesting terrific body punishment in the second round, but his boxing skill accounted for most of the rounds. The Californian yielded seven pounds to Gagnon, who scaled 190 1-2.

Susie Says

If it ain't one thing it's another.

Now here I've gone and got all the Christmas shopping done and am facing bankruptcy for the next few months when along comes the cheerful prospect of having to walk if I can't raise the price of the registration for Old Tinsides.

There's one thing you can say for the state, they sure insist on doing a strictly cash business. You can hang up the local merchants for a month or two, but the state it's either pay or walk.

Well, I got one hope and that's that somebody'll give me something for Christmas that I can hock for the necessary coin of the realm to keep the old bus on the roads. If I get weird neckties and dizzy looking socks like I usually do there ain't much chance of giving 'em away let alone raising money on them.

And if I do get the money then there's the joys of getting in line and waiting for an opportunity to pay the state some good money for a coupla tin plates with numbers on 'em. But them plates is the difference between quick and comfortable locomotion and fallen arches.

But it's the having to wait for the numbers at the motor vehicle office in New London that gets your angora. Just think of it only one branch office in all eastern Connecticut.

Now if there was a branch office in Norwich it would serve the northern part of New London county and practically all of Windham county. Just think what a relief that would be to all us good citizens up in this district.

I don't know how many cars are owned up here in this neck of the woods but it seems that there must be at least two to every family and they all want to get their numbers on the same day that I do.

I know I'm not the only one that would like to see a branch office in Norwich but it don't do no good to kick so the best we can do is to stand in line and grumble to ourselves. Perhaps if we grumble loud enough they'll hear it up in Hartford but the chances are they'll lay to the Moodus noises.

Anyway, you folks that are going on New Year's parties better have your 1930 registrations with you or you're liable to have to walk home. Of course, I understand that lots of people have walked home from New Year's parties but not for that reason.

And some haven't been able to wait if they'd had to, if you get what I mean.

HAGEN AND VON ELM TIED FOR FIRST AT PASADENA

By PAUL B ZIMMERMAN

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

PASADENA, Cal., Dec. 20—(AP)—The fighting heart of George Von Elm, Detroit, second ranking amateur in America, today carried him through the opening round of the Pasadena $4,000 open golf tournament to a tie for first place with his fellow townsman, the great Walter Hagen, both turning in cards of 69 for the par 71 municipal golf course.

A quintet of outstanding professionals which included Craig Wood, Bloomfield, N. J., defending champion, with cards of 70 followed close on the heels of the Michigan pair, while three others finished in par, despite a sandstorm which swept the course during the morning round.

Von Elm, only a short time removed from a long sojourn in the hospital, scored four birdies on the first nine for a 33, but weakned under the stress of action, to come home in one over perfect figures.

Sir Walter, displaying the best golf since his appearance in southern California this winter, was out in par 36, but came back in 33. His card also showed a quartet of birdies.

Sharing second place with Wood was Horton Smith, pride of the Ozarks region; Densmore Shute, Columbus, Ohio; David Hackney, Lawrence, Mass. and Lew Waldron, Boston. Waldron finished as darkness closed in on the 18th green.

Tied for third place were Larry Montes, champion of the Philippines; Jimmy Fouts, Chicago and Hutt Martin, Reno, Nev.

Darkness prevented half a hundred of the 225 entrants from completing their round, but indications were that scores of 78 would be necessary to qualify the low hundred for tomorrow's second 18. The low sixty and ties will continue in the final 18, Sunday.

McEWAN NOT TO MAKE FIGHT TO BE RETAINED AS COACH AT WASHINGTON

By ALAN GOULD

(Associated Press Sports Editor)

NEW YORK, Dec. 20—(AP)—The victim of an ouster apparently effected under extraordinary circumstances, Captain John J. McEwan, one-time All-America center and head football coach of the University of Oregon for the past four years, today found his name involved in the rapidly growing list of gridiron shakeups.

McEwan joins Enoch Bagshaw, of the University of Washington in the general upheaval among the principal colleges of the Pacific northwest but under different circumstances. Bagshaw yielded to pressure and resigned in the midst of an unsuccessful season, to be succeeded by Jimmy Phelan of Purdue. McEwan, with a contract carrying him through 1930, has been relieved in spite of his willingness to continue and after one of Oregon's best seasons, ending with a tie for the Pacific coast conference title.

"My only trouble was that the president of the university and I could not agree on whom to substitute at critical moments" Captain McEwan told the Associated Press today in making it clear that he would not put up a fight as Bagshaw did, to fulfill the remainder of his contract.

Another curious side-light of McEwan's case was an apparent attempt to show that as a former Army player and coach, he attempted under-cover to supply West Point with motion pictures of the Stanford-Oregon game, designed to aid the cadets in their forthcoming engagement at Palo Alto. No one at West Point saw the pictures in connection with McEwan's visit but this incident resulted in an exchange of telegrams between Army and Stanford coaches.

McEwan will remain in the east. He announced today plans to conduct a line-coaching school hereabouts, with spring and summer courses, but also may seek a new job as head coach.

The former Army star has been mentioned as a possible successor to Major Frank Cavanaugh at Fordham. Major Cavanaugh, in spite of a successful year, has not yet signed for 1930 and Fordham's graduate manager, Jack Coffey, said today nothing could be done about the coaching situation until after the first of the year.

Never in all the fifteen battles he has waged in successful defense of his crown during the past four years, had Morgan appeared to better advantage than in the first round. Almost at the start he nearly sang the challenger with a stiff right to the chin. Throughout the round he pressed his advantage fiercely.

Right hand punches to Bass' chin sent the challenger back to his corner reeling after the first round. It seemed as though Bass a 3 to 1 favorite, could not last more than another round.

In the second round, however, Bass tore from his corner and landed a sweeping right hand punch on the champion's chin. The titleholder went down on his face, squirmed to his knees and barely recled to his feet at the count of nine.

Bass was quickly upon the tottering king driving him this way and that under a fury of blows. Tod's eyes were closed and he groped frantically for the wild punching challenger.

Morgan reached out to hold and as he did Bass unleashed the mightiest of all his rights. It landed full on the chin and again Morgan went down. He lay face down, eyes closed and right cheek buried in the resin, until Referee Jimmy Crowley counted nine. Tod vainly tried to draw his legs up under his body. The count of nine found him motionless again.

It was a gallant ending to a title career that began four years ago with victory over the old champion, Mike Ballerino. Since then Morgan has met every challenger, fifteen of them in all. Among his victims were Joe Glick, Johnny Dundee and Cannonball Eddie Martin.

Bass made his first bid for fame more than a year ago when he challenged Tony Canzoneri for the featherweight title but lost the decision in an exciting battle. He claimed that he fought 13 rounds that night with a broken collarbone.

Bass was little more than a featherweight tonight in winning the championship that was originated seven years ago by Tex Rickard for Johnny Dundee, the great Scotch-Wop who was too big for the 126 pounders and not quite hefty enough for the lightweights. Bass scaled 127, Morgan 128.

A knockout brought an eight round victory to Al Ridgeway, brilliant Jersey City featherweight, over Nel Tarleton, clever Englishman, in a semi-final staged after the main bout. Ridgeway had his rival helpless from rights to the chin but could not floor or finish him. Ridgeway weighed 129, Tarleton 127 1-2.

Tom Volante, British featherweight, easily defeated Frank Marchese of New York, in an eight round preliminary. Volante weighed 130, Marchese 128 1-2.

PURSES OF MORGAN AND BASS ORDERED WITHHELD

NEW YORK, Dec. 20—(AP)—Chairman James A. Farley of the New York state athletic commission tonight ordered the purses of both fighters withheld by Madison Square Garden after Benny Bass, of Philadelphia, knocked out Tod Morgan, of Seattle, in two rounds to become the junior lightweight of the world.

Farley said a rigid investigation of the match would be conducted by the commission and in the meantime the purses of both fighters would be retained by the fight club. He indicated his belief that the match had not been fought on its merits. He summoned both Morgan and Bass to appear before the commission Tuesday with their managers.

As a general rule unless there is suspicion of a "fake" fight the commission withholds purses of fighters only when a foul occurs. Before the match Bass ruled a favorite as high as 6 to 1 to win the crown.

Before the match, Commission Farley warned Referee Jimmy Crowley to be on the lookout for "anything suspicious". Crowley did not hesitate in counting Morgan out and declaring Bass the winner on a knockout in the second round.

The match itself displayed an amazing reversal of form. In the first round Morgan several times staggered Bass with right hand punches to the chin only to go down himself under a sweeping right smash to the head at the start of the second. He rose at the count of nine, protected himself for a few seconds, and then was floored again for the knockout.

HEAVY DEPRESSION IN STOCKS HALTED BY SHORT COVERINGS IN FINAL HOUR

NEW YORK, Dec. 20— (AP) — The bear crowd indulged in its first Christmas party in years on the stock market today, a ceremony in colorful contrast to the bull orgy of last Yuletide.

Total sales of 5,532,600 shares were rolled up, the largest turnover since the restoration of normal, five-hour trading sessions. Stock generally were beaten down 2 to 24 points, a few breaking through the bottom levels reached on Nov. 13, and dozens of leading shares dropping below the resistance points of Dec. 12. Heavy short covering in the final dealings, however, carried leading shares up 1 to 5 points from the day's minimum levels.

The bear movement, which took on an ominous aspect late yesterday, gathered strength during today's session, coming to a climax in the last hour. Trading reached violent proportions in the late trading, more than one-third of the day's turnover changing hands after 2 o'clock. The ticker ran for an hour after the close.

Rumors of unsatisfactory holiday trade accompanied a break in the merchandise shares around midday, which depressed Montgomery Ward to a new low, and caused considerable nervousness throughout speculative circles.

Furthermore, a tightening of credit was unsettling. Call money again renewed at 4 1-2 per cent, but touched 5 late in the day, for the first time since Nov. 21. Scarcer credit was attributed to the holiday demand for funds, and continued outflow of gold, approximately $12,500,000 leaving on the S. S. Olympic tonight. The federal reserve was reported to be alleviating the situation by open market purchases of government securities.

The weekly trade reviews did not seem to justify apprehensions over holiday trade. Bradstreet's stated, "the general trend, so far as can be measured, is for a total trade little different from that of a year ago in dollar volume." R. G. Dun and Co., said, "the volume of Christmas shopping has been larger, in the main, than had been anticipated in many quarters immediately after the culmination of the severe financial stress." It was generally acknowledged, however, that reports on the Christmas trade are at this date rather inconclusive.

Further evidence of the sharp curtailment of industrial activity in November came to hand. The Annalist preliminary index of business activity for last month dropped to 95.4 from the 102.5 of October, the sharpest decline in the post-war period.

According to the Standard Statistics Co., index, the November decline was the sharpest since May, 1924. Uncertainty as to the speed with which business may recover has been responsible for the recent lack of constructive activity on the stock market, after completion of the technical rally from the November lows.

The stock exchange published its loan ratio figures after the close. Total borrowings by members on stock collateral on Dec. 1 was but 6.32 per cent of the market value of all listed shares; a decrease of 0.50 per cent from Oct. 1. For November the value of all listed shares showed a net decline of approximately $8,000,000,000. The drop from the peak of September 1 is approximately $56,000,000,000, reducing the total to $63,500,000,000.

Montgomery Ward dropped about 13 points to a new low for the year at 42 5-8, and closed at 45 1-2. Other shares touching new lows included May Department Stores, Speigel May Stern, Abraham and Straus, National Bellas Hess preferred, Fox Film A, and International Combustion.

U. S. Steel dropped nearly 10 points to 158, only 8 points above the November low, and closed at 162. General Electric dropped 10 points and rallied 5. Shares closing about 5 to 11 points lower included American Tobacco B, American Water Works, J. I. Case, Chesapeake and Ohio, Delaware and Hudson, Johns Manville, Macy, Sears Roebuck, Simmons, Western Union, and Woolworth. Columbian Carbon dropped 24 points and rallied 8.

Commodities were also heavy. Wheat futures dropped about 3 cents in anticipation of a bearish winter crop report, and corn lost about a cent. The cotton lost 65 to 80 cents a bale.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Dec. 20—(AP)—Wheat went hand in hand with the stock market today in descending to price levels not reached heretofore since November. Dearth of overseas demand for North American wheat except on pronounced setbacks in values was largely responsible together with correct forecasts that official figures this afternoon regarding domestic winter wheat acreage would show a material increase. Much interest was shown in the fact that on today's breaks the price of December delivery of wheat here and elsewhere tumbled down to below the federal farm board's basis for loans on wheat.

Chicago closing quotations on wheat were unsettled at nearly the bottom point reached, 2 5-8 to 3 1-8c a bushel below yesterday's finish. Corn closed 1-8 to 1-4c and 1c down; oats varying from 1-8c decline to a shade advance, and provisions unchanged to a setback of 10c.

Notwithstanding that the wheat market today acted in short or less disregard of the federal farm board's standard of wheat values, bids were posted here after the close of business offering to pay the farm board's full price of $1.14 a bushel for No. 1 hard winter wheat, 30-day shipment. The bids were made by the Rural Grain company, a subsidiary of the Farmers' National Grain corporation, and were generally taken to indicate that the farm board is upholding wheat prices was ready to go further than merely making loans, and that notwithstanding adverse market fluctuations would back up actual purchases of wheat at the scale of values which the board has heretofore steadfastly maintained as a loan basis. This emphasis on the board's stand came too late to affect future delivery prices, today, but served to focus attention on possible market results tomorrow and later on.

General selling of future deliveries forced the market downward today to about 11c a bushel under recent top figures and was largely associated with the circumstances that no wheat export of consequence either from the Gulf of Mexico or Atlantic seaboard had been announced during the last three days. Export purchases of 1,000,000 bushels of North American wheat today came after the market had undergone decided setbacks in price, but had only a transient effect as a rallying influence. Washington messages quoting President Legge of the federal farm board as saying that representatives of the organization now are abroad preparing market outlets were likewise of only temporary effect, and so too were continued unfavorable harvest advices from Argentina as well as messages received from various points telling of better demand from domestic mills. The government report after the close showed 370,000 acres increase of domestic winter wheat area for the 17930 crop and that the condition of this wheat is 4 per cent above a 10 year average.

Corn and oats sagged owing to sympathy with wheat weakness.

IN LOVING MEMORIAM
Of Our Mother
Mrs. Ida Reid Paquin
Who Passed Away Dec. 22, 1928

Through all pains at times she'd smile,
And when the angels called her home,
She smiled farewell to earth.
Heaven returneth now our trasure
Earth the lonely casket keeps.
And the sunbeams love to linger
Where our mother sleeps.

HER CHILDREN.

Our Memory Days

When we look back along the years
What days do we recall—
When Winter skies shed chilling tears
Or dismal days of Fall?
Does Memory hold fast the days
Of loneliness and pain;
Or those when we sought clearing ways
Through Trouble's grim domain?

No, Memory reflects the beams,
The rosy colored lights
Of Summer moons, rare sunset gleams,
Of stars on Winter nights;
Of rivers sparkling to the sea,
Of never clouding skies,
The glory that shines full and free
From friends' and lovers' eyes.

Then why should we, in vain alarm,
Distrust the years to be?
Why should we fear they hold more harm
Than good for you and me?
Upon our days the sun will rise,
The stars at night will shine,
And heart light from beloved eyes
Will glad your soul and mine.

You Have To Believe

You have to believe in happine
Or happiness never comes.
I know that a bird chirps none tae less
When all that he finds is crumbs.
You have to believe the buds will blow
Believe in the grass in the days of snow;
Ah, that's the reason a bird can sing—
On his darkest days he believes is Spring.

You have to believe in happiness—
It isn't an outward thing.
The Spring never makes the song, I guess,
As much as the song the Spring.
Aye many a heart could find content
If it saw the joy on the road it went.
The joy ahead when it had to grieve,
For the joy is there—but you have to believe.

HUMOR OF THE DAY

Gertrude—You seem so happy today.
Amy—I am. I'm secretly engaged to Herbert and everybody's talking about it.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Little Ethel—Mother, are you the nearest relative I've got?
Her Mother—Yes, dear, and your father is the closest.—Montreal Star.

He—I still maintain that no two persons in the world think alike.
She—You'll alter your opinion when you see our wedding presents.—Il Travaso, Rome.

"John was I very drunk last night?"
"Yes, sir."
"Did I pay my account?"
"No, sir. You were not as drunk as that."—Moustique, Charleroi.

"Honey, if you really do like this ukulele, I'm going to give it to you."
"An out-and-out gift?"
"Absolutely; there's no strings to it."—New York Central Lines Magazine.

Farmer (dictating his will)—I leave my wife $10,000.
Lawyer—But she is young enough to think of remarrying. Are you making any provision for that?
Farmer—Yes, if she remarries she gets $20,000.
Lawyer—But that is double. It is usual to reduce it in that case.
Farmer—But I would like the unfortunate man to have some compensation.—Detroit News.

KALEIDOSCOPE

Only two flowering plants occur on the antarctic plateau and these are rare.

Bartolome Garcia, the Maya Indian newly elected as governor of Yucatan, plans to extend the automobile roads to the famous ruined cities of Chichen Itza and Uxmal, all the way to the capital at Merida. This would enable tourists to visit each place in a day. The present roads lead only from distant railway stations to the ruins.

Twenty-nine city workers of Allentown, Pa., were short approximately 17 per cent of their salaries when freezing winds swept a $1,400 payroll from the pocket of Charles Hackett, who has been carrying the pay roll from the bank to the paymaster for fifteen years. The money was blown about the streets of the business district, but $1,146 of it was returned, leaving a shortage of $254. News of flying currency brought large crowds to the vicinity, seeking parts of the $254 in sewers, gutters and on roofs.

Young eagles, no less than young puppies, have to learn by experience that some things are not to be chewed at with impunity. Margaret L. Arnold, naturalist ranger, of Yellowstone park, has reported the case of one that apparently tried to bite a porcupine, and had no luck thereat. "A young golden eagle was caught accidentally in a coyote trap," she writes. "As he was uninjured except for one toe, he was liberated, but before he went it was noticed that his throat and all about his beak was filled with porcupine quills. Most of these had not gone in very far and were easily extracted. Even eagles learn their lessons regarding the quill pig."

A heavy snowstorm swept over the Rocky mountains recently, and a seven-foot boaconstrictor in his steam-heated cage froze. Spencer Penrose, the owner of the zoo at the foot of Cheyenne mountain, near Colorado Springs, visited the boa in the afternoon and found him stretched out on the huge limb of a tree, which was his favorite haunt in captivity. The next morning, a blizzard having intervened, the keeper found the boa frozen solid, and Mr. Penrose sent him to the taxidermist to be stuffed. The taxidermist and his assistants rolled him out on the floor, seemingly a solid ice mass, while they sharpened their knives. As the taxidermist placed the point of his blade in the boa's head the snake opened his eyes. The man jumped. A quiver ran down the boa's coils, his tail swished furiously from side to side. The attendants vanished, and the boa has another life to lose.

Little Joe.

While strolling one night through New York's gay throng,
I met a poor boy who was singing a song.
Although he was singing he wanted for bread,
Although he was smiling he wished himself dead.
Cold blew the blast and down came the snow,
He had no place to shelter or no where to go;
No mother to guide him in the grave she lies low.
Cast out on the cold streets was poor little Joe.
Oh a carriage drove by with a lady inside,
She looked out and saw that poor Joe did cry,
Joe followed the carriage but he didn't even smile
And the lady caressed her own darling child.
Oh the lights had gone out and the clock had struck one,
When up came a policeman, whose duty was done.
The policeman did say: What is this lying here?
Oh it's poor little Joe lying dead on the square,
With his face turned toward heaven, all covered with snow.
The poor deadly creature was poor little Joe.

The Old Trundle Bed.

O, the old trundle bed where I slept when a boy,
What canopied king might not covet the joy,
The glory and peace of that slumber of mine,
Like a long gracious rest on the bosom divine,
The quaint homely couch, hidden close from the light,
But daintily drawn from its hiding at at night,
O, a rest of delight from the foot to the head
Was the dear little, queer little old trundle bed.

O, the old trundle bed, where I wondering saw
The stars through the window and listened without awe
To the sigh of the winds as they trembingly crept
Through the trees, where the robins so restlessly slept,
Where I heard the low murmurous chirp of the wren,
And the katydid listlessly chirp again
Through the maze of the dreams of the old trundle bed.

O, the trundle bed! O, the old trundle bed,
With its plump little pillow and old fashioned spread;
The snow-white sheets, and the blankets above
Smoothed down and tucked round with the touches of love,
The voice of my mother to lull me to keep,
With the old fairy stories, my memories keep
As fresh as the lilies that bloom o'er the head
Of the sweet o'er my own, in the old trundle bed.

Attic Treasures.

Oh, mother, where's the bustle
That you sported when a girl,
And the massive chestnut chignon
With the single dangling curl?
And where's the armored corset
That you used to tightly lace,
And the hip pads stuffed with cotton
That you deftly tied in place?

And the petticoat with ruffles,
Every ruffle stiff with starch
Till it rattled like the sabers
Of an army on the march?
And I want the high, tight collars
With the stripe of whalebone sewed;
Bring them from the dusty attic,
For long skirts are now the mode.

The Star

Upon the East appears a shining star,
Pinned like a jewel to the purple night,
One glowing star that lights a waiting world.
One gleaming star, a beacon and a lamp.

Five points it has, five points like lesser stars,
One looks to Heaven, and its name is Faith.
Two follow the horizon; one is Love
The other word-encircling Brotherhood.
Another, Kindness, burning on unchanged,
And Charity, the fifth, are set toward Earth
To bring it nearer Heaven.

Out from them all, from every shining point,
Pour forth such rays!—a glory radiant
That seeks and finds the heaven's highest dome,
That seeks and finds the deepest vale of Earth,
The hearts of princes melts, the beggars' warms.

"Behold the Star," they cry, "of Bethlehem;"
The Star of Faith and Love, of Brotherhood,
Of Charity and Kindness! And behold
Around, about, its fair, effulgent rays—
The Christmas Spirit—lighting all the World!
Now "Peace on Earth," they cry,
"Good Will to Men!"

The Spirit of the Game

It's the Spirit of the Game that counts,
And not the game alone;
Not just the Thing, but the way it's done—
The sort of Spirit shown—
When it seems a hard and bitter strap
And the going's mighty rough
Do you stand your ground and take the rap,
Call your adversary's bluff?

If you do, you've got the Spirit, Pal;
The Spirit of the Game,
And when it's hard fought play is won
You'll proudly see your name
Emblazoned on the records of Life's ever mending race
As one who dared to stand and fight to win, and hold, his place!

Yes, the Spirit of the Game does count
More than the Game alone;
Not what you do, but the way it's done—
The sort of Spirit shown!

Old Friends

There are no friends like the old friends,
And none so good and true;
We greet them when we meet them,
As roses greet the dew.

No other friends are dearer
Though born of kindred mold,
And while we prize the new ones,
We treasure more the old.

There are no friends like old friends,
Where'er we dwell or roam
In lands beyond the ocean
Or near the bounds of home.

And when they smile to gladden,
Or sometimes frown to guide;
We fondly wish those old friends
Were always by our side.

And when unconquered sorrows,
The weary hours invest,
The kindly words of old friends
Are always found the best.

There are no friends like old friends,
To calm our frequent fears,
When shadows fall and deepen
Through life's declining years.

And when our faltering footsteps
Approach the Great Divide,
We'll long to meet the old friends
Who wait the other side.

There are no friends like old friends
To help us with the load,
That all must bear who journey
O'er life's uneven road.

IN TRUNDLE BED DAYS.

Dear Editor and Friends of Social Corner: I was much interested in Jennie's article last week, about the old trundle bed.

There was a fine trundle bed at our old home. It was not home made. It was painted red, the shade that was used on chairs at that time and instead of slats it was corded like the larger beds. We children thought it was great fun to see it pulled out from under the higher bed and we certainly slept good in it.

We used to go after huckleberries in the summer. Father would harness the horse to the wagon and put in plenty of baskets and pails, our lunch and food for the horse. We would go a long distance from home and stay all day.

One day my little brother and I did not go with the others, but stayed at home with mother and played out of doors. She told us not to go away, but we looked up the road and saw Mary, one of our girl friends (I hope she sees this) coming and went to meet her. She gave my brother some musk lozengers and sent him home and she and I started to find those who had gone berrying. We walked over three miles and then were so tired we thought we had better return.

Mother met us in the lane and interviewed Mary, and I ran home and jumped into the trundle bed. I thought I was safe there but I wasn't. When mother came in and saw me in the trundle bed, she said: "Get out of that trundle bed and go out to the lilac bush and get a good stick."

I hope you all have a Merry Christmas.

CHRISTMAS CANDLES

Dear Social Corner Sisters and Editor: Out of the dim centuries of the past comes a legend that on Christmas eve the Christ-Child walked about over the world, knocking at the humblest cottage and the most gorgeous castles. He went bearing evergreen on his shoulders, and those who welcomed Him placed lighted candles in the windows.

On Christmas eve, the lighted candles in millions of windows all over the earth will beam their message of joy and gladness into the night. They are a symbol of Him, Who is and has been, the light of the world since the day when the star led the wisemen to His cradle. Not only on Christmas does He gladden the hearts of the rich and poor, the joyous and despairing, but upon every day that they let Him in. May the lighted candle of Christ's love shed forth its radiance upon our hearts, and may we becoming light bearers, carry the warmth and glow into the darkened places of the world about us. Wishing every reader a merry Christmas.

Sumac: Evidently you did not look in the kitchen.

TRUE BLUE.

AFTER THE BALL WAS OVER

Social Corner Members: "After the ball was over," in other days in Hampton, the ladies went to the dressing room to adjust their wraps of which they needed to protect their health while riding up and down the Hampton hills and valleys. The gentlemen meanwhile descended the little hill to the north of the hotel to get their teams ready for the journey to their homes in many directions and towns. No cars or busses were known of then and it would be quite interesting now if we could just view the different vehicles and specimens of horseflesh that carried the dancers home.

The small building across the drive way was occupied by Theodore Fuller and his mother and young son, Nelson, who now lives in New Bedford, Mass.

Next house north was owned and occupied by Charles Button, a harness maker, his good wife, Ruth, and son, Edward, who was away from home most of the time. Mrs. Clara aBrows, sister to Mrs. Button, and little daughter, Clarabell, boarded there. Mrs. Barrows, as I've mentioned previously, operated one of the sewing machines in George Brown's store. Clarabell attended school.

As we journeyed on to the north we came to a two-story building of unknown age, a mere shell, only know. Augustus Snow used to work a limited amount on wood-pine. I think. This building stood where the Prospect house, built by Lucius Whitaker, was built in later years. One of Hampton's fine views to the east is certainly here.

One Sunday morning in the month of February a neighbor came in and said, "The coop has blown down." All seemed to welcome the news, but before the day was over came the news "Ned Wadworth is drowned." Mr. Ombaby, an uncle of Ned's, engraved bills in Washington, D. C. and came to Hampton with his nephew and niece, Helen, and his mother. They lived on the hill awhile, then bought a lot in North Bigelow and erected a two-story house, put a large stove in center to heat all rooms on first floor. It was a success but much talked about at the time. We saw the same heating equipment this summer as we spent one afternoon with Mrs. Priscilla Snow, who teaches mutes in New York.

In one of the rooms is a picture made by Mr. Omsby, who came to visit his relatives occasionally, hiring a team to complete his journey of Mr. Turner (Archie's father). No cars then, just a stage from our city to Danielsonville (as called then). The stage was driven by Joseph Avery. The night Mr. Omsby reached Willimantic a hard rain was active with wind. It was Saturday and by morning much damage was done. Mr. Omsby had a team on his place. With this team, a boy by name of Griggs was to follow Ned, who was to drive Wilson and Turner's team back to Willimantic. Then they were to return to Bigelow in Mr. Omsby's turn out. The young man and boy on reaching the hill were told the two bridges in Willimantic had gone and must go via Mansfield hollow. When they came to the bridge they were to cross Ned drove on to the bridge then off into a current so swift that it instantly took horse, carriage and occupant into this angry torrent. Ned, out of the carriage, managed to grasp a bunch of alders and called to the Griggs boy to drive onto bridge, take lines from the harness and throw to him. A man living at the top of the hill would not let the boy drive onto bridge as he said "the bridge might go off as the Natchaug and Horseshoe had." Finally Ned said "I can hang on no longer. I'm getting crazy." The team was found near the mill in Mansfield hollow. It was a week or more before one of Hampton's popular young men's body was found, I think this happened in 1867. There were many young people in Hampton then.

I must mention that high shoes were worn and laced up with bright red strings and often the young men gave their favored Miss the desired articles. Ida Dorrance had two young men supplying her. This finally became known to one of the gents and he decided not to buy Andrew Fuller's girl any more red shoestrings. I've been told Miss Dorrance later lived in California.

Now, Ola, you must remember Ida and others.

May all members of our Corner have just as merry a Christmas as their conditions will allow. These changes!

SOME GOOD REMEDIES

Dear Editor and Friends: Hope you are all well. This is some winter and Christmas is almost here again. It comes so often in these years. When I was a little girl it seemed so long in coming.

Now is the time for sore throats and all of that. It is handy to have some things for quick relief in such cases. I take an onion and partially roast it in the oven, then mash it on a piece of cloth and put it over where you seem to have a cold. It will soon give relief. It is good in case a doctor is not handy. You may laugh, but if you take a piece of cloth, spread it with pure lard, cover it with yellow snuff and it is good to break up pneumonia at the start. Or you can take raw onions, peel, slice thin,place them on a cloth, cover them with black pepper and salt and place them on the bronchial tubes or chest. I use a piece of mosquito netting to cover them and keep them on cloth.

To stop bleeding there is nothing much better than warm water and powdered alum. Use a teaspoon of the alum to a pint of warm water. With a cloth laid over the laceration it will quickly stop bleeding. It is good for man or beast. I have tried this and know it to be good.

Keziah Doolittle and 1492: Just get your sleds out and ready. I will be up there for a slide. Say, how about skating? That is fun, too. Now just say you are game and don't back out. There is one of the dandiest places here to ride down hill on the old front wheels. Well, I would like to see the old place and friends.

Ruth: How are you this winter?

Amy Jane: How are you and sonny?

Kochia: How are you? Not frozen I hope. It has been 2 below down here.

Bobnet, Betty Jane, Dece: Where are you? Come, let's keep the Corner page full.

Libby: Did you blow away in the gale? It blew some down here but the old whippoorwill is still on the rocks.

Aries: Have your flies gone? I can box up some and send to you if you like.

Butterfly: How are you and hubby? Well, I hope. Has he still got that tran?

Well, I wish the editor and all a merry Christmas and am praying God be with all.

USED TO SLEEP IN TRUNDLE BED

Dear Editor and Sisters of the Corner: When my eye caught "the old trundle bed" today, I said I must tell the dear Sister there is one in the Corner who used to sleep in a trundle bed. It stirred so many memories and I guess it was used quite extensively though today it would be considered detrimental to the health of a child. Mother used to put my little sister and me to bed quite early and when it was trundled out the head was toward the stove and I remember how hot I used to be, as I lay there watching mother knit.

Father read to her with a tallow candle light, he would not have a lamp for fear we children would set the house afire. In the morning our little bed was made up and trundled under the big bed.

Daisy Dean: Your letter was much enjoyed by me for it brought back my early life. If we could have more good mothers it would be better for the country. I shall have to agree with Ford when he says, "It is a mistake when the women emerge from the home."

The holiday season is sad for me. For 34 years I got a Thanksgiving dinner for loved ones. One and another has gone and this year I was alone. Did I get a dinner for myself? I could not do it. I know Theoda, so she can know I used to sleep in a trundle bed.

I took an old sweater and made some socks to wear on the ice to keep me from fading.

Best Christmas greetings to all

CHRISTMAS OF OLD

Dear Editor and Friends: While walking along the crowded streets—pausing at Santa's headquarters—I saw a wonderful display of toys, which are always a delight to the children. As I viewed the Yuletide scene memories of other days carried me back to childhood and once again I saw the brilliant sunlight bathing the glistening snow with shining radiance and could almost hear the squeak of crunching snow under foot when we climbed the hillside to coast down its slippery length. One of the noticeable events in winter, at Christmas time, was the hanging of stockings by the chimney, with the childish belief that Santa Claus would be there with a most desired gift. Banished are the stockings and the Christmas tree reigns supreme, but the children of long ago were just as happy with toys from a stocking as the boys and girls of today with mechanical toys from a tree.

In after years the man or woman will not forget the tinsil tree in childhood. And besides at this time of the year special music added charm to Christmas scenes. When the glad tidings of peace on earth, good will to men are sung and with singing no room in the inn for the mother of the Christ-Child; our thoughts center around a manger where Christ, our Lord, was born on Christmas night, and the wise men followed the guiding star kneeling, presented gifts; a custom that has been observed since the coming of the Saviour of mankind and will continue on throughout the ages of time.

GUSTA (Club No. 5.)

BUTTONS AND KNOBS

Social Corner Editor and Friends: Here are two ideas which may be of help to others making Christmas gifts. I needed some black buttons to tuft a chair which I recovered. I found that black lacquer applied to some brown silk covered buttons produced a beautiful shining finish which suited my purpose exactly. I have since lacquered discarded covered buttons in all colors and have put them to all sorts of uses. The finish is absolutely lasting. Several washings and boilings have proved that.

So many times tiny knobs are needed to complete some homemade article such as a "chest of drawers," for handkerchiefs or socks, toy furniture, etc. The heads of sawed-off-clothes-pins offer the cheapest and most satisfactory "knobs" I know of. They can be painted to match the article in question. I have used them, too, for tiny "legs" on miniature cedar chests made at home to be filled with candy and sent to some friend. A rubber headed tack can be used both to put on the "leg" and protect the finish of the furniture on which the "be-legged" article may rest.

A merry Christmas to all the members.

CREAM DRESSING

Dear Social Corner Members: Last January I decided to write a letter each month but find that the number written has been far less than twelve.

Many thanks to each member who sent recipes for quick grape juice.

Sandwiches are very nice toasted, especially if they have become slightly dry.

I was pleased to read about a trundle bed as my mother slept in one when a child. Father used to gather bayberries when a child for his mother to make candles but it took a great many berries to make a few candles.

Cream dressing: Is made by heating a gill of good cream. Moisten a tablespoonful of cornstarch with a little cold milk; add it to the hot cream, cook a moment then stir in the well-beaten yolks of two eggs. Take from the fire; add a half teaspoonful of salt, a dash of pepper and a tablespoonful of vinegar or lemon juice. This is palatable and much more economical than a mayonnaise dressing.

It would be very nice if we could have Christmas always. It is our duty to make our neighbor happy if we can. If we can make others happy then we shall have pleasure ourselves.

PREPARING FOR CHRISTMAS

Dear Social Corner Members: I suppose the most of you are rushing with Christmas work. If we were only as smart as Milky Way we would be fortunate. Last year I worked right up to the last finishing up gifts but, this year have done better and hope to do much better next year. The only part I dislike about it is wrapping up the packages. It takes so much time, and is very tiresome I think. Sumac told you about Club 6 meeting the tenth only she didn't say she impersonated Santa Claus and she made a good one. It was voted to give $5 to the People's Mission for the children's Christmas treat.

Powaget: Glad you are able to be at home again now don't get too smart.

Jennie: I enjoyed your letter about trundle beds as I have heard of them but never saw one.

Primrose: The rhymes are fine. I have quite a few but it is too late to send them for this year.

Olga: Think your turkey must be fine. Next time I'll try it that way.

Beth C.: We missed you on the tenth. Hope you are better now.

B. Natural: Am so glad you seem to be on the gain, keep right on so as to meet with us in March.

Wens: Hope your chauffeur got you home safely. Glad you could be with us. Will now wish the editor and all members a very merry Christmas

THE CRUELTY OF TRAPPING

Dear Social Corner Members and Editor: I will try and do my bit to help fill up the page. Having had a broken shoulder I have been unable to use my pen. I have been reading what different ones have had to say about trapping with the torture and starvation the poor little animals have to endure that we ladies may have a nice fur coat, or fur collars and cuffs.

I used to go with my grandfather to his traps every morning and I saw and know a little about what these poor creatures went, through. One muskrat had gnawed his leg off to be free and how many pet cats are caught every winter, also the best way I have seen so far in gathering these animals is to put them to sleep, the same as I saw last winter on a fox farm.

Daisy Dean: Thanks to you for those verses. It's true. If I could only go home once more to see my mother standing in the old door way.

Sumac: You surely was a very fine Santa Claus and I surely did have a nice time at your club that day.

Merry Christmas and happy New Year to all.

HOLIDAY GREETINGS

Dear Social Corner Members: As I can't send cards to all I'm taking this way of sending holiday greetings to you. With those in sorrow, I sympathize and rejoice in others joys. Well, 1929 is nearly gone and hasn't been such a bad year after all. May the New Year treat us as well or better, is the wish of

VARNISHING AND OILING FLOORS

Dear Social Corner Friends: One of the members asks about varnishing and oiling floors. I will pass along information given to us by a reliable company.

There are two kinds of floors that need painting. One are those of softwoods such as white pine or hemlock, the other an old floor that has gotten badly worn, scratched, marred, etc. New floors of hardwood such as maple, yellow pine, oak, etc. may be painted of course but usually varnishing, staining or waxing will give them a more attractive finish.

"Open grained hardwoods, such as oak, birch, ash or walnut should be treated with a filler, in order to fill in the pores and to prevent darkening by the excessive absorption of varnish or other material used for the finish."

Oiling is the most durable finish for a wood but darkens considerably the natural color of the wood and requires frequent going over.

Shellac gives quite a lasting finish if the floor does not have too rough treatment. Three or four coats of shellac thinned down with good quality denatured alcohol are recommended for either soft or hardwood. Sandpaper between coats and if a dull finish is desired rub down with oil and pumice stone for the last coat.

If you varnish your floor get the best grade of varnish. Apply two or three coats and allow plenty of time between coats for drying. If correctly done varnish is the cleanest and most satisfactory finish looking well as long as it does not get marred.

When waxing floors a good way to put it on is to place a small quantity between two or three thicknesses of cloth as it passes over the floor. Let it dry about 15 minutes then polish. It is recommended as the handsomest of all finishes but must be frequently rubbed, polished and gone over thus being a constant care.

Many of our members will be listening to their young hopefuls as they take part in programs at this season. My first attempt at getting up a school entertainment program was as monotonous an affair as most first attempts usually are.

The day before our exercises the oldest boy and two younger children set out for the tree. Gone an unaccountably long time, at last they appeared dragging a huge, ungainly pine that could not even be gotten through the door. But by dint of hacking and sawing we at last reduced its dimensions to suitability and set it up. I did not realize that half the fun for children is helping in the decorating so I waited till school closed and everyone had gone and did it myself.

The weather for the great day was about as discouraging as it could have been, a combination of rain and snow with ice, mud and slush underfoot and began to fear that the tree and I would have to celebrate alone for most of the children were poorly provided against the weather and had a long walk to school. But as I afterwards learned only illness that prevents them from getting out of bed will keep children home with a Christmas tree in the offing and they finally arrived bedraggled but hopeful. Noon finally came and the schoolroom must be tidied a bit. Then followed the suspense of waiting for our visitors with frequent excursions by some of the children to the corner of the schoolyard to scan up and down the road. My blessings on the three or four good ladies who braved the weather and saved the day. The program was gotten through, the tree admired, presents distributed and the children satisfied and happy. I received gifts but the only ones I remember were two men's initialed white handkerchiefs given by two little Italian girls, whose eyes shone with joy because teacher liked their present.

Many thanks to the editor for a yellow slip, and best wishes to all for a Christmas of peace and joy.

ATTRACTIVE SCARFS

Dear Members: The Social Corner has been such a help to me in so many instances that I should not feel satisfied if I did not try to help others by revealing my economical discovery. Christmas time is drawing near and I am hoping that my suggestion will reach others and solve a part of their Christmas list.

I purchased one yard of natural shade silk pongee which cost 40 cents, and folded it in such a way as to be able to cut two triangular pieces. By making a narrow hem on the three raw edges of each piece, with tan silk thread, I fashioned two scarfs. (Of course the hems are much neater if done by hand instead of machine.) Then from some gay colored pieces of silk, I had about the house, I cut a few squares of other pleasing shapes such as circles or triangles which I used for appique in the lower corner of the scarf. This makes it possible for me to make two charming Christmas gifts for the small amount of 40 cents and a few hours of spare time.

CHRISTMAS CARDS

Dear Social Corner Editor and Readers: As I wandered through the stores a few days ago, I was bewildered by the great variety of Christmas cards, saying in price from six for five cents, up to two and three dollars per dozen; beautifully embellished and etched with scenes suited to the season.

The sentiments expressed on many of them were such as to cause heart to beat fonder and make friends seem nearer and dearer.

If my memory serves me, the first advent of the Christmas card, was not before 1878 or 1879. They were then very simple, with no coloring or sentiment more than, perhaps, "Christmas greeting, or Merry Christmas." In fact they were but little more than a newspaper wood cut as an embellishment.

Now we not only have the Christmas cards, but cards suited to nearly all the holidays; friendship cards, New Year's cards, congratulation cards, birthday cards, cards of sympathy and condolence, anniversary, marriage cards. In fact they are legion of all varieties and character.

They in many cases make up the total of Christmas remembrances between families and friends.

It is now Christmas time and I look back to my boyhood days when Christmas was made but little of, particularly in the rural districts. School held its usual session. It was the practice of some of the scholars to be late then softly opening the door and crying out to the top of their voices, "Merry Christmas" to those assembled. No Christmas trees in those days, but we did look for Santa Claus to come down the chimney, to fill our stockings that were hung in the open fireplace and chimney corner with care. My, didn't we quickly jump out of bed on that memorable morning, at the first break of day, or at the crowing of chanticleer, and tip toe down stairs bare footed and peek into the stockings! Yes, and the very stockings that dear mother had knit from yarn she spun on the old spinning wheel up in the attic, from wool rolls, carded in Uncle Eleazer Smith's carding mill, down on the "Appoquaug." Why, I now can hear the whirr of the old wheel as mother drew out the twisted thread to her arms length. And I hear the click, click of the needles as she went round and round, forming that same stocking that I found on Christmas morn, filled to the top with (not toys, not fancy hosiery or underwear, or Christmas cards as today) a pair of mother-knit mittens, a nice orange, a generous supply of plump raisins, figs, a striped stick of candy, a roll of peppermint lozengers (good for the stomach) and to fill the stocking to the top, nuts and popped corn. And that constituted the happy find in my stocking, Christmas morn, more than 75 years ago.

I will bet a big red apple that the young ones of that day were pleased.

I will bet a big red apple that the young ones of that day were more pleased and content than many of the young of today, who have toys of expensive character, books, fine hosiery, neckties, boxes of assorted candies, whistles and tops. Perhaps a pair of skates that are already made secure to the shoes, or perhaps a flexible runner sled, with which to demonstrate its speed on the first fall of snow. Yes, and you are wishing for the mercury to drop to, and below the zero mark, that the pond back of the house may be frozen to a safe thickness on which to try your ability to cut the figure eight or write your name.

QUID NUNC

PASS ALONG THE OLD RADIO

Dear Corner Sisters and Friends: For the second time I have taken up the Corner page while resting after getting the laundry out and doing the greater part of the morning work. When I feel all in I just stop and rest. Perhaps it's writing, reading and sometimes a 15-minute nap. Then I get up and feel like starting in again, fresh and rested.

Perhaps a number of the writers will have a new electric radio to replace the old one, which if sold will only bring $5 or $10. Why not do as my son did, give it to some one whom you know would enjoy one and didn't feel that they could stand the expense of one and are worthy of it, some shut-in, a widowed mother, some one on the farm whose income isn't enough to take from to buy one. Then, last of all, don't broadcast that I gave to Mr. or Mrs. So and So, just let them tell it and see how happy you are because you made them happy. It takes so little to send a bit of comfort and a ray of sunshine in homes, if the gift is ever so small and what glory would the money from a discarded radio give you in comparison to the happy hours the receiver gets sitting by it, with the family in the evening listening to the music, the farm home talks and the interesting things in general that comes over it in our homes, not forgetting the children's hour. So again I say, pass along the old radio when Santa brings the new one and let the receiver tell who the giver was and let your motto be like the old Norwich Hook and Ladder motto: "Deeds not words."

Wishing you all a merry Christmas and a happy and prosperous New Year.

THE RADIO

UNDERGROUND HELPS.

Dear Editor: I found this article in an old Youth's Companion printed in 1915. I am sure a great many of the sisters would like to know about it so I am sending it to the Corner.

"Cracked fruit jars and tin cans are worthy of a better fate than the rubbish heap—if you have a garden. They are of service against drought, the mortal foe of plants newly set.

"The glass must be cracked just enough to let liquid seep through: the cans should have half a dozen small holes punched in the bottom. Put them in the ground, mouth upward, with the rim just level with the surface, and as close as possible to the stem and roots of your tree, or shrub, or vine. Provide a handy cover—a light slate, a seasoned shingle, or a small flat stone—to lay over the mouth and prevent evaporation after the can is filled.

"There is always a good deal of waste in surface watering; a considerable part of the water runs off or evaporates without touching a root. Further, it puddles and cakes the surface, even under a mulch. Can watering gets the moisture where it will do the most good. So does can fertilizing. It is especially good for roses. If the rose is well established, make the holes in the can fairly large and numerous, bury the can, and fill it once a week with very strong liquid manure. As soon as the manure has seeped through, put in tepid water. About once a week use soapsuds in watering. Give something every day through the season of bloom. Use dissolved nitrate of soda about once a week. If the roses lack color, dose them with strong soot and water—it will redden them in a day. But whatever you use, be sure that you keep the container well covered, and avoid clogging it by pushing in dirt.

"If trees in fruit have several cans distributed over the space of their root spread, the result is exhibition fruit. Even though the ground may be rich and well cultivated, the supplemental nourishment tells in the strain of ripening fruit.

"Surface watering and fertilization are especially valuable to wall-trained trees, and to dwarf fruit trees set along garden paths."

Yours for the Corner.

AUNTY JANE.

CHRISTMASTIDE.

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: Once again the happy season of "Peace on earth, good will toward men" is here. Christmas is a time when we should all be glad, for that is the time when the Christ Child was born in the little town of Bethlehem nearly 2000 years ago.

How happy it makes us feel when we look at the image of the Divine Infant and think of all He did for us and how little we have done to merit all His kindness, especially in these evil days when faith and morals are exposed to such dangerous temptations.

Now I did not sit down to preach, but I love the Christmas story and the Christmas spirit.

I know that there are many that will be sad this Christmas for many of the Corner family and friends have passed away since last Christmas.

I want to say "merry Christmas" and a "happy and prosperous New Year" to all my friends for I could not sit down and send them all a personal message much as I would like to; it would take a week and then I don't think I would be finished.

I am sending a poem on Old Friends and I hope if the editor has space he will have it printed in Saturday's paper as I promised a friend of mine to send it in. Oh, no, it is not original but was given to me by a friend of my childhood days.

Hope all those that are sick or in sorrow will be made happy for Christmas.

USING UP CANNED APPLES

Dear Social Corner: Another gray day, encouraging to the owners of waterless wells so why grumble even of the wash doesn't dry.

These dark days are also hard on those who are trying to sew. Yesterday I had to change the thread on my sewing machine, but could not see to thread the needle After trying vainly for several minutes, it came to me that a flashlight might help, so put the light close to the needle, and threaded it with no trouble at all.

Have just been making mince meat. Used for it apples which I canned last year when they were plentiful. We had none this year. I peeled and sliced them just as I would for pies, filled cans full, put in just a little water, not more than an inch in the jar, boiled them for about 20 minutes, and sealed. In cold pack canning I never use more water in the canner than it needs for the length of time it takes to process whatever I am canning.

The apple slices were whole, and much like fresh apples so had to be chopped. Did the chopping with the potato masher. Easy and saved time.

Theoda: Where's that letter you were going to write?

ECHOES FROM THE LODGE ROOMS

ODD FELLOWS

Hope Rebekah lodge, No. 21, I. O. O. F., held its regular meeting with Noble Grand Mary L. Dow presiding. There was considerable business transacted at this meeting. The election of officers was one of the main features of the evening and the following were elected to serve during the year 1930: Noble grand, Alice Metcalf; vice grand, Ethel Whitmarsh; recording secretary, Ora Spencer; financial secretary, Bertha Collins; treasurer, Ella Smith; trustee for three years, Mary Dow. As there is to be no meeting January 1st, the officers will be installed at the next regular meeting on January 15th. Supper will be served that night at 6:30

The annual roll call was another feature of the evening and 80 members were present in person and others sent in letters as they were unable to attend

At the close of the meeting there was a very pretty Christmas tree upon which were gifts for all present including the children and these were distributed by Santa Claus. Ice cream and fancy wafers were served.

DAUGHTERS OF VETERANS

The regular meeting of Clara Barton tent, No. 7, Daughters of Union Veterans of the Civil war, was held at the Buckingham, Tuesday evening, with the president, Miss Florence Hoffman, presiding.

A very short business session was followed by community singing and a Christmas tree was enjoyed by the members and several guests. A very realistic Santa Claus made the occasion merry for children and grown-ups alike.

During the evening a bank book representing $120 was presented to the tent by the J. P. C. Pinochle club, which have been holding parties all the year and have presented their proceeds to the tent.

The tent was closed in usual form by the salute to the flag. After the meeting refreshments of sandwiches, fancy cookies and coffee were served by the supper committee. The next meeting, Jan. 8th, will be the installation of the new officers for the year 1930.

VETERANS FOREIGN WARS

R. E. Hourigan post, No. 594, V. F. W., has received notification that President Hoover's proposed coordination of government veteran relief agencies will have the hearty support of the national legislative committee of the Veterans of Foreign wars of the United States, Ilezekiah N. Duff, national commander, in a statement at national headquarters, says:

"Hoover's recommendations as included in his recent message to congress brings to a climax a movement launched by the Veterans of Foreign wars of the U. S., back in 1927," Duff pointed out.

"When the national commanders of America's five major veteran organizations met in conference in February, 1927, the V. F. W advocated this plan as another step toward solution of the veteran problem. The idea was endorsed at that time by the veteran leaders who participated in that conference.

"In September, 1927, the 28th national encampment of the V. F. W. instructed the national legislative committee to make this plan one of its chief objectives. The 29th national convention at Indianapolis and the 1929 convention at St. Paul reiterated this stand."

"Consolidation of the bureau of pensions, the national soldiers' homes and the Veterans' bureau, under one head will assure more economic and efficient administration of the government's veteran responsibilities," Duff emphasized.

"It will permit inmates of the national soldiers' homes to receive the same subsistence allowance for food, and other necessities, as is now being granted to Veterans' bureau patients. Moreover, it would remove divided authority.

"The pension bureau would be removed from the jurisdiction of the department of the interior and placed in a department whose sole interest and concern would be in veteran welfare. At the present time the interior department's interests are varied, including land offices, Indian affairs, irrigation projects, and other matters.

KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS.

Reviewing the development of the K. of C., the current Catholic Transcript says:

The growth of the order was phenomenal. After the institution of San Salvador council at New Haven as the first subordinate council, every city and town in Connecticut clamored for councils. Then came a day in 1885, when a new council was to be instituted at Stonington but the hall where the ceremonies were to be held caught fire and there being no other hall available in the town, the institution was transferred to Westerly, just across the state line in Rhode Island. The incident served to excite the Catholic men of Westerly and soon there was a demand for a council of the new order there. In quick succession New York followed Rhode Island, and Massachusetts followed New York with requests for councils. Up to 1892 all members of the order were insurance members but in that year the board of government, on recommendation of the supreme knight, established an associate division. Shortly thereafter, Maine, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Maryland became fields for the sowing of Columbianism. During this period of rapid and satisfactory growth, the order's membership increased something like 300 percent.

Father P. J. McGivney died in 1899, just 16 years after the founding of the order, but he lived long enough to see it grow from a small local society to an organization with national ramifications. By 1900, two years after his death, the order had reached every section of the United States except the far west and the extreme south, had crossed the national boundary into Canada. Despite frequent requests from European countries, the order declined all invitations to introduce itself overseas, confining its energies to careful expansion in North America.

By 1904, only five states of the union remained uninvaded and cities in these states quickly applied for and received charters. The first oceanic step was taken when a council was instituted in Manila, Philippine Islands. The triumphant progress of Columbianism then carried on in Mexico, Panama, Porto Rico and Alaska. Even today, in those eastern states where the order first started, it is still growing.

Today with a membership of 798,000 in 2,550 councils, the order has reached an eminence and power undreamed of by its founders.

The order carries on through the supreme council and its state and subordinate councils, many various activities, charitable, social, educational and religious. The story of its war relief work is now a chapter in the history of the Great war.

ST. MARY'S GIRLS' CLUB HOLDS CHRISTMAS ENTERTAINMENT

The business meeting was followed by a Christmas party arranged by the entertainment committee. There was a Christmas tree on which there was a gift for everyone present. Miss Margaret Fahey acted as Santa Claus and presented each girl with a gift and a package of candy.

The committee then served refreshments consisting of ice cream and assorted cookies. Games were played, following which there was dancing.

The committee in charge was: The Misses Eleanor Barry, Lucille Bowen, Mary Barry, Anna Brogna, Margaret Crowe, Teresa Connelly, Anna Connelly and Mrs. M. J. Farrell, the club advisor.

On Thursday evening the office force from the American Thermos Bottle Co. held their annual Christmas party at the home of Miss Loretta Gadle on Prospect street. Gifts were distributed to all by Santa Claus, impersonated by Miss Mary Wagner. Refreshments were served by the hostess, assisted by Misses Bella Finnegan and Marie Gadle, consisting of cake, coffee and ice cream. The party broke up at a late hour after an enjoyable evening.

YANTIC MAN HELD FOR KIDNAPPING FORMER NORWICH GIRL AT DANIELSON

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Dec. 20. — Sergeant George L. Gardner and State Officer Royal V. Scranton of the Danielson barracks left here just before 5 o'clock this evening to bring back to Danielson, James Cobb of Yantic and Miss Katherine Lasch of 172 Main street, Danielson, who was kidnapped by Cobb in rather sensational manner on Main street, at Davis park, just before one o'clock this afternoon. Information relative to the affair broadcast to police departments throughout the state, as well as to Rhode Island and Massachusetts departments, led to the spreading of a police net in which Cobb was caught by the police of Hartford just before five o'clock this afternoon.

With her cousins, the Misses Anita and Alma Buteau, at whose parents home she has been living since coming from Norwich to Danielson to work, they being relatives, Miss Lasch started to walk down Main street just as the lunch hour was drawing to a close to get a taxi to go back to their employment in one of the plants of Powdrell and Alexander.

The girls were near the property of Mr. and Mrs. V. H. Wetherell, on the sidewalk, when a blue Dodge sedan bearing Connecticut registration L-148 came to a halt across the street at the edge of the park. Cobb, leaving his motor running, jumped out of the car and went across the street to the girls and accosted them.

It appears that he had been very friendly with Miss Lasch, who is 27 years of age, up to three months ago when their friendliness cooled. Among other gifts, Cobb is said to have presented Miss Lasch a ring. Despite repeated appeals on the part of Cobb for a return to the friendly status that existed between them she has persistently declined to have any more to do with her former suitor, according to the information obtained by officers checking on the case.

Even threats by Cobb, including an alleged one that would involve the taking of her life, failed to move Miss Lasch from her decision to refrain from further association with Cobb.

This afternoon's climax to the situation came when Cobb invited Miss Lasch to get into the car with him and ride to Putnam and she definitely refused. "No, I will not go," Miss Lasch is quoted as saying. Cobb then grabbed her by the arm and said curtly, "You have got to go!" He started dragging her toward the car while the Buteau girls helped her to resist and in the melee, as she was being dragged first one way and then the other, she dropped her pocketbook. Cobb is ruggedly built and the strength of the girls was no match for his.

Once in the car, Miss Lasch pleaded with the other girls to get in with her. One of them attempted to do this and had a rear door of the sedan open when Miss Lasch asked her to pick up her pocketbook. While Miss Buteau was trying to do this, Cobb stepped on the gas and dashed off up North Main street.

The few eye-witnesses of the struggle, passersby and residents of nearby homes, regarded the entire scuffle as a bit of fun and paid little attention to it.

There was considerable delay in getting a report of the matter to the police, but prompt work that followed was responsible for Cobb's arrest.

Miss Anita Buteau was reported early this evening as in a state of partial collapse as the result of her experience in the kidnapping.

Sergeant Gardner and Officer Scranton returned here about 9 o'clock tonight from Hartford with Cobb and Miss Lasch. The young woman was near to collapse and so nervous that Dr. F. P. Todd was called to attend her and she was afterwards able to go to her home here.

Cobb had not injured her between the time of kidnaping and when he was apprehended by the police of Hartford. While he indulged, it is said in threats against her during the ride from Danielson to Hartford, he did not injure her in any way. She had one bruise on her wrist, the result of his grabbing her and dragging her into the car here, when he was taking her away. Cobb is held on a kidnaping charge. Almost immediately after his return here he was subjected to questioning at the state police barracks, where he is being held tonight by Lieut. Ross V. Urquardt. The questioning was continuing as midnight approached. Lieut. Urquhardt declined to reveal what the examination developed. While it had not been definitely decided tonight, there was the possibility that Cobb will be presented in the Killingly town court Saturday.

SCOUT SPIES READY TO DELIVER MAYOR'S MESSAGE

Boy Scout spies have been requested to 'phone Scout headquarters before 8:30 this (Saturday) morning to receive instructions. Reports from troops in different parts of the city indicate that several troops are out to win both prizes. A letter sent to all scouts Friday enclosing an application for camp contained a terse description of the all-city spy hunt.

Ten spies (scouts in uniform) will start eight blocks from Franklin square Saturday at 1:00 p. m. from the north, south, east, and west and will attempt to deliver a written message from Mayor Lee Roy Robbins to the spy chief who will be on the square. You are to stop him from delivering that message by capturing him. Any spy may be captured by addressing him exactly in these and no other words: "There is always a good time at camp. Let's go, scout!" Upon hearing exactly these words every spy is honor bound to immediately surrender his message to the scout thus addressing him. The first scout to deliver a captured message to headquarters will receive a prize of scout equipment. The first spy to get through will also receive a prize.

BOY SCOUTS REPAIR BUSHELS OF TOYS

According to the local Boy Scout headquarters over twelve bushels of toys have been collected and repaired by Boy Scouts during the past two weeks and telephone calls are being received every day telling of more toys. The value of the toys collected, if new, would run into three figures. The toys have varied from old rusty trains to practically new dolls, from toys worth from 10c to 25c to toys whose original cost was several dollars. Most of the toys collected have had to have something done to them, the replacing of a leg, the fixing of a spring, the painting of a table. The largest toys received were a wicker chair for a girl of ten, an automobile for a boy of six, self propelled, and an eight corner checker board stand. Some of the toys are new, having been bought for a grab bag party. One friend gave a dollar in an envelope asking that toys be bought, for "she had none to give, but felt that she should give."

The toys, Friday and today (Saturday), are being delivered to the United Workers where they will be distributed to the kiddies who need them most.

Bozrah Club Meets

The Thursday Evening Bridge club held their weekly meeting with Miss Laura Foley, of Oak street. Gifts were exchanged. Prizes were won by Miss Alice Derosier and Miss Sadie Kilroy.

TAFTVILLE

The members of the 50-50 club enjoyed a delicious supper Thursday evening at the Valley Pirates' clubhouse. Later in the evening games were played and gifts were distributed from a gaily decorated Christmas tree. Those present included Miss Simone Phaneuf, Miss Diana Gouin, Miss Erna Seifert, Miss Lena Martin, Miss Yvette Fontaine and Miss Mary Martin.

A most interesting address on Anglo-American relations was given Thursday evening before the Men's club of the Taftville Congregational church by Professor Minto of Hartford. The speaker was introduced by Albert Airey, president of the club, and after the talk had been concluded, refreshments were served by the committee in charge.

The Christmas rush is now underway at the local postoffice and Postmaster Edward Adams and his assistants have entered into the busy period which always precedes Christmas. On Thursday there was not only a big incoming mail of packages and cards, but the outgoing mail was also a record-breaker and a rushing business was done in money orders and registered letters.

Brilliantly lighted Christmas trees at the various residences on the Old Canterbury turnpike from Taftville to Norwich Town were a great help to motorists who were driving through the fog on that road Wednesday night.

WOMAN'S CITY CLUB ENTERTAIN SCHOOL CHILDREN AT PARTY

Children of the lower grades of the local schools were entertained at a Christmas social at Slater hall, Friday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock, under the auspices of the Woman's City club. Mrs. Willis P. Austin, chairman of the club dramatic committee, was in general charge.

The programme included sleight of hand tricks by Arthur C. Brown and a Christmas play, The Sleeping Beauty. The cast of the play was as follows: Queen, Mrs. Aida Lloyd of Cleveland, Ohio; King, Meredith Lee; Princess, Miss Marguerite Sullivan; Prince, Mrs. Benjamin Palmer, Jr.; Guests, Misses Virginia ChaNe, Rose Driscoll, Catherine Sullivan, and Edith Somers; Wicked Fairy, Miss Bernice Willey; Nurse, Mrs. Warren Chaffin; Fairies, Misses Ruth Genter, Eunice Ingalls and Barbara Taylor; Jester, Sally Lee Briggs.

Miss Alice Bushnell of Lisbon entertained with Christmas stories and candy was distributed to the children from a beautiful Christmas tree. Those who assisted in the distribution of the candy were Mrs. Goffe Briggs, Willis P. Austin and Malcolm Austin. Toys taken to the party were given to the United Workers for their Christmas boxes to be distributed by the welfare department.

The children of the Rock Nook Home and the New London County Home were among those invited. The teachers of the lower grades of the town schools accompanied their small charges to the party.

PARK CHURCH FEDERATION HOLDS ANNUAL MEETING

The annual meeting and luncheon of the Women's Federation of Park Congregational church was held in the Parish house, Friday at one o'clock. A chorus comprised of Mrs. James A. Bidwell, leader; Mrs. Aurin L. Payson, Mrs. Harrison Gray, Mrs. George Ingalls, Miss Alice Sayles, Miss Elizabeth Johnson, accompanied by Mrs. Charles A. Saxton, led the way to the dining room, singing carols. Mrs. A. N. H. Vaughn spoke a few words of welcome and Rev. Theodore M. Shipherd, D. D., offered prayer.

The tables were most attractive with their holiday decorations of poinsettias and the following delicious menu was served: Macaroni and cheese, meat loaf, cabbage salad, jellies, rolls, butter, raspberry and pistachio ice cream, assorted cake, coffee. Mrs. Raymond Sherman, Mrs. John F. Rogers, assisted by Mrs. O. C. Wolfe, Mrs. Arthur Collins, Mrs. Howarth Collins and Mrs. W. Manley Eastwood, Jr., were in charge of the luncheon.

Rev. Dr. Shipherd gave an inspiring talk, using for his subject, The Goal of Our Church. The church must have something definite to work for, a special aim, he said. This goal is variously understood and considerably confused. It is always a problem of the future. The church must have a definite understanding of the future, visualize clearly what is to be done, and then work conscientiously and hard to that end. It is the social task of the members and the pastor to work together to accomplish that purpose.

The goal suggested is the building of personal character in the light of God. Three ways for reaching this goal were emphasized: first, by careful thought and study of the Bible by older people; second, by nurture and encouragement of the younger people to faith, and third, by the use of music, as an important phase of worship, to instil the spirit of God.

Miss Hannah Crowell, president, called for yearly reports from the following: Secretary, Miss Mary A. C. Avery; treasurer, Mrs. Howard Stanton; publicity committee, Mrs. Henry D. Johnson; missions dept., Miss Edith Bliss; Parish house, Mrs. A. N. H. Vaughn; membership, Miss Matilda Butts; hospitality Mrs. Raymond B. Sherman, Mrs. John F. Rogers; calendar, Mrs. W. CHRISTMAS EXERCISES AT SAMUEL HUNTINGTON SCHOOL

The first Christmas entertainment given by the pupils of the Samuel Huntington school for the benefit of the school was presented to a large and appreciative audience Thursday evening in the auditorium there.

The first scene was a one-act play, taken from the German, "Why the Chimes Rang," and the following characters were dressed as the inhabitants of the cathedral city of Cologne and its outskirts were at that period, 1500. The characters were:

It was very well given by the characters, who clearly portrayed the vision so realistically. A violin solo followed, "Under the Mistletoe," by Charles Wheeler, accompanied by Barbara Fellows.

Then the pupils of the second grade gave the little play, "Christmas Secrets," in a very entertaining manner. The characters were: The Christmas Cousins, Dorothy, Janette Fargo; Ralph, Edward Witckewaski; Ruth, Dorothy Belleview; Frank, Loring George; Rose, Jane Waters; Harold, Robert Horton; Mollie, Rosemarie Allen; Joseph, Joseph Morse; Santa Claus, James Hubbard; Sally, a waif, Bernice Ethier; A Christmas Fairy, Natalie Browning; Brownies, Leslie Stott, Elinor Smith, Francis Mackie and James Belleview; Children of the Good Night chorus, Natalie Santo, Eugene Pirozok, Leroy Saunders, Glendon Carpenter, Francis Pisowlowski, John Gocka, Eleanor Santo, Mureille Lane. The accompanist was an eighth grade scholar, Virginia Ward.

It cleverly portrayed a chimney scene with people waiting for Santa Claus, who came empty-handed but who was followed by a charming fairy, who scattered gifts for everyone. A group of Christmas carols followed: Hark, the Herald Angels Sing; Away in the Manger and O Little Town of Bethlehem, played on the violin by Francis Wright, accompanied on the piano by Virginia Ward.

Then the charming dance, Christmas Bells, by twelve girls from the fifth and sixth grades, dressed as Christmas bells, showed many pretty steps and group formations. The girls were: Helen Schwenk, Loretta Meehan, Dorothy George, Harriet Ricker, Norma Wilkinson, Gladys Nylen, Nellie Perkowsky, Ruth Proctor, Jean Coyle, Ruth Prentice, Helen Moran and Marguerite Cormier. Marguerite Brown was accompanist.

The last was a one act safety play called "Lighting the Tree." The characters were taken from the fourth and fifth grades and were: Edna, June Fritz, Grace Elizabeth Duch; Mary, Arlene Fields; Will, Francis Brown; Bob, Ellis Bentley; The Christmas Angel, Justine Houghton; Jack in the Box, James Wheeler; Mammy Doll, Phyllis Bradley; Best Doll, Mary O'Connell; Overall Boy, William Armstrong; Teddy Bear, John Gibbs. It illustrated the safe way of lighting a tree, not by candles, but with electricity, in a very attractive manner. Each character's naturalness was most pleasing.

The sum of about $70 was made and is but the beginning of a nucleus for a school fund. Home-made candies in Christmas cups, was sold and was delicious. The program was repeated Friday morning for the benefit of the pupils who were unable to see it Thursday night and a few guests were present, including Supt. of Schools E. J. Graham, and a new member of the school board, Mrs. A. H. Chase.

PLAN HUGE BROADCASTING OF CHRISTMAS PROGRAMS

Radio Engineers Are Perfecting Arrangements to Spread Throughout America Programs Originating in England, Holland and Germany—It is Planned to Begin the Rebroadcasts at Noon, Eastern Time—In Return American Christmas Greetings Are to Be Sent to Europe Christmas Morning and the Following Day—New York City Will Broadcast a Monster Songfest Tuesday Evening.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22—(AP)—Radio engineers in widely separated sections of the world are bending every effort to insuring the success of the proposed Christmas day rebroadcast to America of programs originating in England, Holland and Germany.

The programs, to be distributed by the National Broadcasting company, as its Christmas gift to listeners, are to be brought across the Atlantic by short waves to the receiving station at Riverhead, N. Y., whence they will be fed by wire into the broadcasting network. Both here and abroad engineers are at work on the necessary technical details, including the study of atmospheric prospects.

It is planned to begin the rebroadcasts at noon, eastern time, the first to come from Eindhoven, Holland. At 12:45 p. m. Berlin is to be cut in, with the closing feature from England starting at 2 p. m.

In return American greetings are to be sent to Europe by the National Broadcasting company on Christmas and the day after via short wave stations at Schenectady and Pittsburgh. The first is planned for 11 o'clock, eastern time, Christmas morning, and is intended for England and Holland. The following day, at 11:45 p. m., another program is to be directed to Germany. On both days the programs for Europe also will be put on American networks.

NEW YORK TO BROADCAST A MINSTREL SONGFEST

NEW YORK, Dec. 22—(AP)—New York, the "city without a heart," will send its Christmas greetings throughout America and to all the world Tuesday night at a monster songfest in Madison Square park.

The International Christmas carol sing, arranged under the general direction of the Advertising club of New York, with a chorus of nearly 1,500 trained voices, will get under way at 7:30 p. m. Christmas eve. A radio broadcast of the program will go out over the National Broadcasting company network and will be relayed on the short wave transmitter of WGY, making the program available to all of America, Europe and Australia.

The carol choir, composed of members of choirs from churches of every sect and denomination in New York city, will be augmented by vocal groups from 400 civic societies, fire and police department bands, the Police Glee club, the Edna White Brass band, and other musical groups. The sing will be led by Albert Stoessel, conductor of the New York Oratorio society.

Maria Kurenko, Russian coloratura soprano, will be heard in person during the program of the sing.

Mayor Walker will open the sing. In addition to the mayor, individual sponsors of the international Christmas carol sing include Bruce Barton, Rev. S. Parkes Cadman, Barron G. Colier, Father Francis P. Duffy, Will H. Hays, G. P. McClelland, Bishop Francis J. McConnell, Rev. Christian F. Reisner, Governor Roosevelt, Dr. Minot Simons, Police Commissioner Whalen, Charles H. Tuttle, Alfred E. Smith, Robert F. Wagner, George G. Barber and P. C. Penny.

Augmenting the Christmas spirit expressed at the sing to which many thousands of persons are expected to be attracted, will be groups in the many churches of the city in observance, at the same time, of the Christmas ceremonies. At many of these gatherings, radio receivers will be secreted within the Christmas trees, to pick up and follow the exercises at Madison Square park.

In the events of inclement weather, forcing the sing from the park, the Metropolitan hall, in the Metropolitan Life insurance company building will be utilized.

TALKED FROM PLANE TO LEVIATHAN 500 MILES AT SEA

NEW YORK, Dec. 22—(AP)— High over Manhattan in a hundred-mile-an-hour flying telephone booth reporters today talked to the liner Leviathan 500 miles at sea.

As easily as though sitting in their own homes two reporters and three engineers of the Bell Telephone laboratories soared 2,000 feet over the city in a big tri-motored Ford, asked for and got the Leviathan as though they were calling for a number just around the corner. They passed the time of day and heard the gossip of the ship from Commodore Harry Cunningham and passengers aboard the vessel.

This new step in communication was effected by a radio-land wire-radio hookup.

The conversations, as is generally the case in the face of such breathtaking wonders of science, were of the most casual sort.

Commodore Cunningham informed the Associated Press reporter that it was a clear day and a calm sea, that he hoped to be at his dock in the Hudson river tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock.

The big, glistening plane, with the newly developed experimental radio apparatus installed and tested but 24 hours before, took off from Hadley Field, N. J., shortly after noon.

MAN KILLED IN CRASH OF AIR TRANSPORT PLANE

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Dec. 23—(AP)—A snow covered stump or a high snow drift brought death to one man and injury to two others when a tri-motored passenger airplane of the Trans-continental Air Transport lines crashed on Scott field, Mars hill, here tonight. The ship was flying from St. Louis to Columbus, Ohio, and was a half hour behind schedule.

The injured are C. N. Kline, also of Philadelphia, and Miss Mary Fearnow, secretary to Donald Bartlow, assistant manager of the T. A. T. office at Washington, who was returning to Washington from her home in St. Louis.

Kline suffered a broken right arm and leg and severe body bruises and cuts and was taken to a hospital. Miss Fearnow suffered minor bruises and cuts and was severely shaken and shocked.

D. W. Burford, 28, pilot of the ship, Columbus, Ohio, planned to land here for the night because of the heavy snowfall, and darkening skies which made further travel hazardous. H. S. Zimmerman, also of Columbus, was assistant pilot.

The other eight passengers were uninjured except for slight shock, and were cared for at the T. A. T. office at Mars hill.

FOUR YOUNG MEN WERE KILLED AT GRADE CROSSING

NEBRASKA CITY, Neb., Dec. 22—(AP)—Four young men, three of them brothers, were killed instantly near here today, when their automobile was struck at a grade crossing by an Omaha-Kansas City train.

The dead: William, Henry and Frank Pelen, and Charles Reimer. Wreckage of the car was carried more than a quarter of a mile.

BRIDGEPORT MAN KILLED BY FALL FROM WINDOW

BOSTON, Dec. 22—(AP)—Emil Wysocki, 40, of 200 Schofield avenue, Bridgeport, Conn., was killed by a fall from a third story window of a North End rooming house early today. Joseph Adamsky, son of Wysocki's sister, whom he had been visiting for the Christmas holiday, identified the body.

NORTHERN AND WESTERN NEW YORK THAWED OUT

ALBANY, N. Y., Dec. 22—(AP)—Northern and western New York thawed out today under the beams of sunshine, the first since storms of rain, wind and sleet and snow began four days ago.

Fort Ann and South Glens Falls, which used electric power to push power to their mains, had their piping system functioning.

The blizzard of Saturday, which swept out of the west, struck Buffalo and western New York and a sixty mile gale accompanying it piled heavy snowdrifts in streets. Deaths attributed to the storm were reported in Buffalo and Oneida.

Communication lines, already overburdened, snapped in the gale, power lines fell, plunging many homes into darkness and traffic on the highways was dangerous and in some places impossible. Today crews of snow shovelers opened up highways while linemen restored, in part, the communication and power system.

PATROLMAN AND GUNMAN KILLED EACH OTHER

PAINTSVILLE, Ky., Dec. 22—(AP)—A two-gun man from the mountains, veteran of half a dozen pistol battles and survivor of almost as many gun-shot wounds, today had made good his boast that if an officer arrested him again "I'll have to kill him," but cost him his life.

The two-gun man, Joe Castle, former constable, last night "shot it out" with Patrolman Jess Dills on the Main street of this mountain town while hundreds of Christmas shoppers scurried for cover.

Dills, with two "44 specials" still spitting bullets, dropped dead almost in his tracks, shot through the heart. Castle, a .45 in each hand, went down mortally wounded. He died in a hospital this morning. John Marshall Johnson county jail, also involved in the shooting, is locked in his own jail. Officers say he probably will be charged with murder.

FUEL INSTEAD OF ROCKETS FOR RECOIL AUTOMOBILES

BERLIN, Dec. 22—(AP)—Max Valier, rocket car enthusiast, tested his recoil automobile, with liquid fuel instead of rockets, on the Avus Speedway, here today. The test was made without a hitch, but Valier failed to equal his record of 235 miles an hour made with the rockets.

Valier said the new fuel insured the driver's absolute control. The start was made in a great cloud of smoke from the exhaust but the machine worked smoothly throughout. The car is without springs. The driver's seat is in the center with four fuel containers in front of him and two behind.

The fuel used was liquid carbonic acid combined with benzine. The speed in today's test was estimated at more than 62 miles an hour. The Junkers company has been reported as experimenting with the same fuel as a means of raising airplanes from the ground or water with a great saving in motive power.

SHOULDER FRACTURED WHEN AUTOS COLLIDED

BRISTOL, Conn., Dec. 22—(AP)—Mrs. Bradley A. Royce, of West Simsbury, suffered a fractured shoulder and severe back injuries here tonight when automobiles driven by her husband and Napoleon Christian, of this city, collided. She is at the Bristol hospital.

Royce received two or three broken ribs, while Christian's wife suffered minor injuries. Christian was unhurt.

Mrs. Royce was pinned underneath the machine when it overturned.

CABLED PARAGRAPHS

PARIS, Dec. 22—(AP)—United States Ambassador Walter E. Edge today called on former Premier Raymond Poincare. He found the statesman completely recovered from his recent operations and they had a long talk together.

PARIS, Dec. 22—(AP)—Reports were received here today saying Captain F. C. Chichester, New Zealand aviator, had ended his projected England-Australia flight in a forced landing in the swamps near Tripoli, North Africa, yesterday. His plane was wrecked but he was uninjured.

HAMBURG, Germany, Dec. 22.—(AP)—Formal opening of the new port for cabin ships of the United States lines took place here today with the arrival of the liner George Washington, flagship of the line. Hereafter all steamers of the company, excepting the Leviathan, will dock here instead of at Bremen.

ROME, Dec. 22.— (AP) — Cardinal Dougherty, of Philadelphia, this morning gave the tonsure and minor and major orders to Pennsylvania students at the famous Roman seminary, among those he ordained being his own nephew Carroll McCormick. The American cardinal received a warm ovation from the students on entering and leaving the building.

MORE OF MURDER MYSTERY OF WILLIAM DESMOND TAYLOR

Asa Keyes, former district attorney, now in the county jail pending decision on an appeal from a prison sentence for bribery in connection with the Julian petroleum debacle, was the only one who had anything to say. He reiterated what he said yesterday—that the statements of former Governor Friend W. Richardson and District Attorney Buron Fitts that the slayer was known, were for political purposes.

"Richardson is shaking the bones of the Taylor case for political purposes," Keyes repeated. "Why doesn't he produce his evidence now? Why didn't he produce it when he first obtained it? I used my office and greatest efforts to solve the Taylor mystery and punish the murderer."

Richardson said he was told by a former Folsom penitentiary convict known as Otis Hefner and Otto Nelson that Taylor was slain by a motion picture actress.

Hefner or Nelson, first told his story in 1923 in Seattle, Wash. He told police there five men killed Taylor and led the officers to a spot near Washington City where, he said, $200,000 in loot was buried, including Taylor's diamond ring. The officers failed to find the loot.

Later Nelson told Richardson, the latter said, that an actress had slain the director. On another occasion he told the then governor that Taylor had been slain by members of a narcotic ring who feared he knew too much about their activities in Hollywood.

POLICEMAN SHOT DURING HOLD-UP IN SPEAKEASY

NEW YORK, Dec. 22—(AP)—A policeman was shot and critically wounded today in attempting to prevent a holdup of an alleged speakeasy in West 44th street.

Patrons of the place told detectives that the policeman, Andrew Bornkessel, 43, entered the resort after his tour of duty, removed his hat and coat and was walking through a hallway when six men entered.

They flourished revolvers and took $60 from a cash register behind the bar. Bornkessel entered the room containing the bar, drawing his revolver. One holdup man fired, Bornkessel fell and another of the thugs, taking deliberate aim, shot the policeman in the head a second time as he lay on the floor. The six fled, taking Bornkessel's revolver with them.

Other policemen, arriving at the place, seized a quantity of liquor and arrested the bartender. Bornkessel was taken to Bellevue hospital. After an investigation he was ordered suspended.

POPE PRAYS FOR REPOSE OF SOUL OF JOHN OGILVIE

VATICAN CITY, Dec. 22—(AP)—Pope Pius XI this afternoon descended from the Vatican into St. Peter's to venerate the relics and to pray for the repose of the soul of John Ogilvie, Scotch Jesuit, who was hanged as a traitor in Glasgow three centuries ago.

At the last of the beatification ceremonies of the year the decree of beatification of the Scotch martyr was read by the secretary of the congregation of rites in St. Peter's this morning. The ceremonies were attended by a large number of Scotch pilgrims including many kilted Boy Scouts.

Father Ogilvie, born in 1580, was brought up a Calvanist but became a Catholic after studies at Louvain university. He became a priest in 1613 and requested that he be sent to Scotland as a missionary although he knew a price was on his head. After nine months of preaching in Edinburgh and Glasgow he was arrested and some months later was executed.

Many of the cases on which the board acted favorably were originally scheduled to come up for consideration after the first of the year but the paroles have been granted in order that the men might spend Christmas with friends or families.

Clamor For Report On Study Of Prohibition

Congressional Drys to Insist Upon Early Report From Law Enforcement Commission.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22—(AP)—Congressional drys are going to insist upon an early report from President Hoover's law enforcement commission upon its study of prohibition.

Senator Jones of Washington, a leader of the republican prohibition forces in congress, will go before the commission this week to request a report on its inquiry into conditions resulting from the eighteenth amendment.

Democratic dry leaders in the senate already have served notice that they will demand a report from the commission on its study of prohibition before permitting the appropriation of further funds to carry on the work of the law enforcement commission.

Just what has aroused the drys is not clear, although Senator Harris, democrat, Georgia, a pronouncer prohibitionist, recently declared in the senate that Chairman Wickersham and the "enemies of prohibition" were seeking to withhold any report on the dry law survey.

However, Senator Jones, an administration senator, professes no alarm over the attitude of the commission. He just thinks it ought to make a report of its work undertaken six months ago.

"The commission ought to have a report ready before long," he said, "on its study of prohibition. I don't think there is any deliberate intention to defer one but I don't see any reason why such a report should not be made soon."

Oddly enough, it was a wet leader, Senator Hawes, democrat, Missouri, who first demanded an early report from the commission on its study into prohibition, but recently the drys have become anxious.

Senator Glass, democrat, Virginia, an ardent dry and the author of the provision said the law enforcement commission has shunted aside the prohibition investigation for a general survey of law enforcement and thereby ignored the expressed will of congress.

Not a word has come from the law enforcement commission on its work since it was organized more than six months ago. There is a growing restlessness at the capitol about it. Senator Harris charged that the commission intended to make no report until after four years—after the next general election.

The treasury department appropriation bill carrying funds for next year's prohibition enforcement work soon will be before congress and then will come a showdown on the threats to withold further funds for the law enforcement commission.

There is some speculation whether the $250,000 appropriated under the amendment of Senator Glass to carry out the law enforcement investigation would be available after the close of this fiscal year, next June 30.

NEGRO, FEARFUL OF WIFE, ENTRENCHED IN CHURCH

EVANSTON, Illinois, Dec. 22.—(AP)—Staid Evanston was thrown into a state of mild excitement today when members of the congregation of the New Hope Negro church found the place barricaded against them and after a futile siege called on police for assistance.

A pair of husky sergeants, placing little stock in the reported diabolical connections of the entrenched parties, broke a window and climbed in. With pointed pistols they searched and found—under a pew—Max Belcher, a huge Negro.

Belcher, a member of the congregation, it developed, found a haven in the church while fleeing the wrath of his wife last night. He told police he thought it probable Mrs. Belcher was among the church-goers clamoring for admittance and decided to "take no chances."

BELIEVE MANIAC THE CAUSE OF ASPHYXIATION

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—(AP)— A bundle of Sunday newspapers stuffed into a chimney of a Bronx apartment house today caused coal gas to fill several apartments, killing one woman and overcoming several others. Police believe the papers were placed in the chimney by a maniac.

Mrs. Mildred Blinder, 54, was found dead in the bathroom of her second floor apartment. The other tenants in the house were saved because a woman on the fourth floor smelled gas and summoned aid. The seven women overcome were revived and were pronounced out of danger.

The newspapers had been stolen from a delivery boy's wagon, tied together with rope and stuffed into the chimney, which rises 12 feet above the roof of the five-story apartment house. The papers were found about three feet below the roof level.

KISSES AND CHRISTMAS GIFTS BARRED FROM PRISON

ATLANTA, Ga., Dec. 22.— (AP) — Kisses and Christmas gifts are both barred from the federal prison here, according to announcement in the current issue of "Good Words," the penitentiary official publication.

Officials declare that every kind of gift has been used to conceal drugs and that the task of thoroughly searching every package is virtually impossible. Hence Yuletide remembrances must be in the form of cash only, money sent to any prisoner being credited to his account in the warden's office for purchase of articles from the commissary.

GERMAN PLEBISCITE FAILS TO REJECT THE YOUNG PLAN

Only 5,782,000 Votes Favored the Nationalist Bill "Against the Enslavement of the German Nation"—21,000,000 Votes Were Necessary to Pass It—Of Total Electorate of 41,520,000 Only About 13.5 Per Cent Voted in Favor of the Measure.

BERLIN, Dec. 22—(AP)—The nationalist bill "against the enslavement of the German people," which would have rejected the Young plan of reparations payments, failed today to obtain more than one-fourth of the required vote to give it effect.

The provisional total return for the entire 35 electoral districts showed that with 6,231,000 ballots cast only 5,782,000 votes favored the bill submitted to the people by the German nationalist party.

Since the German electorate numbers 41,520,000 only about 13.5 per cent voted in support of the bill, instead of the 21,000,000 necessary to pass it. The number in support was slightly greater than that which had supported the demand for the referendum last October. The increases were largely in the Berlin, Magdeburg, Breslau, Leipzig and Dresden districts.

The Reichstag last month by an overwhelming majority had defeated a similar bill. Following that defeat the nationalist party split into factions, and several of its leading representatives in the government withdrew from the party.

In the northern section of Berlin two unidentified men forced their way into a polling station at the point of pistols, grabbed part of the election registers and escaped in a waiting automobile. The police said they were convinced that the gunmen were communists. Nowhere today were the usual election posters displayed and voters making their way to the various polls in Berlin were inconspicuous in the Christmas shopping crowds.

All others of the larger cities reported that the referendum passed off quietly with little interest shown, especially in the Rhineland where the event was virtually unnoticed.

The provisions of the bill are:

1. The German government shall notify all foreign powers immediately and solemnly that the enforced acknowledgment of war guilt in the Treaty of Versailles is contrary to historical truth, is based on false premises and is not binding in international law.

2. The German government shall use all endeavors to secure the annulment of the war guilt acknowledgment contained in Article 231 and Articles 429 and 430 of the Treaty of Versailles. It shall also undertake to secure the immediate and unconditional evacuation of the occupied German territories, without any remaining control commissions independently of the acceptance or rejection of The Hague convention.

3. No further financial burdens or obligations based on the war guilt acknowledgment shall be assumed, inclusive of those arising from the recommendations of the Paris reparations experts.

4. The chancellor and ministers of representatives of the which was lend their signatures to agreements contrary to the provisions of Section 2 shall render themselves liable to prosecution for high treason.

5. This law enters into force at the moment of its proclamation.

A falling off in Christmas contributions to the Salvation Army is noted by the officers of the local corps. That this condition should prevail in spite of constantly increasing demands made on the corps for assistance, presents a difficult problem to the officers. In its appeal for funds the Army points to its year-round work. Special efforts to bring happiness into homes and the lives of individuals are made at this time, however. The annual Christmas entertainment and tree will be held at the Salvation Army citadel next week Friday, when many children are expected to be made joyful with gifts of candy and fruit and clothing.

The stamping of outgoing first class mail to date has been larger than for the corresponding period last year, it was stated Saturday by Postmaster Frank M. Smith. Simonds, who is attending the man, said today that, pending the outcome of an x-ray photograph, the injuries were probably only external in nature. McLaughlin, whose condition was good today, was taken to the hospital in the ambulance, having collapsed some time after receiving the injury.

Perfect attendance records issued Saturday by Principal Frederick R. Noble list the names of 73 pupils at the Windham street school, 13 at the Oaks and nine at the South Windham grammar schools. The Capitol theatre, which has been closed for some weeks while undergoing extensive alterations, reopened to a capacity audience Friday night under the ownership of Warner Brothers. John R. Pickett, who also retains the managership of the Gem theatre, another Warner playhouse in the city, received the congratulations of the crowd on the splendid sound production of the new Western Electric Vitaphone system and the beauty of the new decorative scheme of the theatre. The machines, which reproduce sound through three gigantic horns, proved a delightful surprise for clearness and volume. The audibility of the all-talkie pictures that are to be the sole feature of the Capitol in the future, has been greatly improved by the work of accoustic experts who have caused the installation of sound-felt panelings and heavy carpeting throughout the theatre to surprising advantage.

While the general color scheme of the playhouse proper is old rose and burnt ivory with sensitive tintings, a sharp but pleasing contrast is noted in the draw curtains of the stage, which combine gold and black in flowing silk drops.

The reopening the theatre, which ranks well as one of the most attractive in this section of the state, answers a timely need throughout the territory, of a large playhouse where only the best of the newest all-talking pictures will be shown. Mayor Walter R. King and many other prominent officials and citizens of the city and surrounding towns assisted at the opening tonight. Mayor King was publicly introduced and he was heard in remarks which were at once congratulatory and well-wishing to Warner Bros. and Manager Pickett.

FIREMEN DO GOOD WORK AT HIBBARD FIRE

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Dec. 22.—Danielson's firemen did one of the best jobs of the many for which they have credit when they fought out a stubborn fire at Dr. Nathaniel Hibbard's barn on Reynolds street in the bitter cold of early Saturday morning, and saved nearby properties from damage and possible destruction. While the barn, a 50-year-old structure that has long since been used as a garage by Dr. Hibbard, was totally destroyed, only a shell remaining standing, the doctor's house, within arm's length of the burning building, was saved without other than minor damage.

The alarm, from Box 32, came in about 3:50 a. m., and at that time the fire was under good headway, flames shooting high into the air and lighting the neighborhood and adjoining streets. The firemen, all volunteers, made a particularly fast response. In the bitter cold they worked with the effectiveness and precision for which they are noted, deluging the barn that had become a roaring caldron of flame, and also wetting down nearby homes.

Notwithstanding the early hour and the punishment attendant upon getting out in the searching cold, the fire drew a large crowd.

Of two cars in the barn, one, a new one, was destroyed, while an older car was hauled out, scorched, but not badly damaged. A dog, pet of Russell Chapin, grandson of Dr. and Mrs. Hibbard, lost his life in the fire.

Dr. Hibbard said the loss was in the neighborhood of $2,000. There is insurance to cover at least partially the loss on the building and on the car.

Thomas Thibeault, 123 Glendale avenue, Woonsocket, and his companion, Ernest Scanlon of the same city, riding along in Thibeault's automobile, were first to discover the fire. They ran to Dr. Hibbard's home and aroused the household. Meanwhile neighbors, awakened by the glare of the burning building in one of the central and most thickly populated centers of the borough, had telephoned Chief A. P. Woodward, who punched in an alarm from his home on Academy street, less than 100 yards from the blazing building.

Mr. and Mrs. John Lindberg, neighbors of the Hibbard's, served coffee to the firemen, and they were very appreciative.

The bearers were Onesieme Houle, Peter Allard, Peter Bedard, Anthony Lebrecque, Henry Arsenault and Frederick Dignault. L. E. Kennedy was in charge of the funeral arrangements.

Mrs. Alphonsine Pellerin

Saturday morning the funeral of Mrs. Alphonsine Pellerin was held from the home of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Provost, Connecticut Mills avenue, with services at St. James' church at 9 o'clock. Rev. Fr. Ladoucer was celebrant of the high mass of requiem. Burial was in Holy Cross cemetery, the committal service conducted by Rev. J. A. Demers, M. S. The bearers were two sons, Gilbert and Alexander Pellerin; Louis Provost, John Morin, Omer Morin and Joseph Poudrette. L. E. Kennedy was the funeral director.

Several minor cases having to do with violations of the automobile laws were disposed of Saturday morning before Judge W. Fenner Woodward in the town court.

A mass of Christmas mail was handled by the local postoffice force over the week end and, having disposed of that, the force looks forward to the two hardest days of the holiday season—Monday and Tuesday.

Santa Claus has sent a letter to the friends he has in the Baptist church here, and it has to do with the Christmas party to be held there on Christmas night at 7 o'clock. Here it is:

Office of Santa Claus,
North Pole.

Who is there who doesn't remember the good times that we used to have down there when I came for my Christmas visit? But for the past two or three years you people haven't treated me so well—you haven't been there to meet me when I came—that is, not many of you. So I am writing this letter in advance to tell you that your little Christian Endeavor society is wide-awake this year and has planned a great party for you, with a splendid program that includes readings, selections by that new orchestra you were telling me about, piano duets, cornet solos and duets, a trio by some boys, a Christmas story and a White Gift service. Oh, yes! I am also sending along a big Christmas tree and am bringing lots of gifts for all the boys and girls and for some of the grown-ups, too—gifts that will make a lot of fun and frolic. And there will be refreshments, too.

Tonight at the Baptist church the pageant of the Nativity was presented. Miss Helen Pochoski was Mary; William Richardson was Joseph, Marion Richardson was the angel, Richard Tillinghast, Gordon Gallup and Robert Johnston the shepherds and Rev. Lester J. Armstrong, George Robertson and Elmer Keane the three wise men. Miss Florence Moran was the reader. The music was by Mrs. J. W. Gallup, organist; Miss Grace Stanton, pianist, and Miss Margaret Burton and J. Elmer Gallup, violinists. There were special lighting effects.

Mr. Dear Friends of the Danielson Baptist church:

This Sunday was no holiday for the Danielson postal force, from Postmaster E. H. Keach down through the list of workers. They went on duty this morning as on any week day and wrestled with the mass of holiday mail matter. Two men were out with the office truck, making deliveries of parcel post matter. Mr. Keach said this afternoon that all accumulated work at the office would be cleared by nightfall, leaving the force ready to start with no handicap Monday morning. He also said that the people this year evidently have heeded the admonition to mail early and feels that there will be no such last-minute jam this year as has been usual on Christmas eve for several years past.

Christmas will be a full holiday for the postoffice force. There will be neither city nor rural deliveries. The lobby will be open all day, but no clerks on duty.

Let us solve your last-minute gift worries for you. A hundred things to pick from and something for every member of the family at Blumenthal's, Town Hall building.—adv.

A budget was made out and adopted. About twenty persons were present in spite of the downpour of rain, and the fog. At eight o'clock, after a great deal of effort in getting rid of Miss Florence Douglas, the group adjourned to surprise her and her father, E. A. Douglas, at their home across the road. All were then invited to return to the vestry where a pleasant evening was enjoyed, with songs, games and refreshments. E. E. Freeman, Miss Clara Frink, Mrs. Walter Frink, Mrs. Adelbert Gallup and Mrs. Charles Tanner helped make the evening very enjoyable. The pastor spoke words of appreciation of the Douglass family for interest and co-operation in community and church affairs during their summering on Sterling Hill, and wished them Godspeed as they journey southward. Mr. Douglas expressed surprise and gratitude in a very cordial manner.

Sheffler, 67 Myrtle avenue, Webster, Mass.: Francis, three-year-old boy, is suffering from a compound fracture of the skull, a broken arm and abrasions of the body. According to a late report from the Day-Kimball hospital, where the children were taken, the child is not expected to live.

Two other brothers, Vincent, 13 months old, is suffering from a fractured skull and a scalp laceration. Bernard, seven, sustained a severe scalp wound. Both are expected to recover. Teresa Sheffler, 11, received minor abrasions of the face and hands, when thrown through a window of the damaged car. She was treated at the hospital and discharged in an improved condition. Neither Mr. or Mrs. Sheffler, who were riding in the front seat, were injured.

The accident occurred while Mrs. Sheffler was receiving driving instructions from her husband. They were proceeding in an easterly direction when a car, coming in the opposite direction, suddenly turned on its lights, blinding the driver, forcing her to the shoulder of the road to lose control of the car. It struck a tree and continued until stopped by a stone wall in front of the Nichols estate on Thompson hill. The body was torn from the chassis, the car being damaged beyond repair.

The four children were hurled through a left window and through the roof. A passing motorist took the injured children and their parents to the hospital in this city. State Officer Elton T. Nolan of Danielson barracks, made an investigation but made no arrests. Mrs. Sheffler, it was learned, was being tutored in the art of operating a motor vehicle by her husband, who was a licensed driver.

MANY ATTEND MILITARY FUNERAL OF DR. PERRY

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Dec. 22.—Military funeral services were held Saturday afternoon at the chapel of the Second Congregational church for Captain Edward F. Perry, prominent Windham county physician and World war surgeon who died Thursday at the Hartford retreat in Hartford.

The military tribute to the city's war surgeon was most impressive. The Headquarters company of the 43rd division of this city, under the command of Captain John J. McQuarry, led the funeral cortege. The Anselm Mayotte post, No. 13, American Legion, of which Captain Perry was first commander and a charter member, conducted the military funeral.

In the chapel of the church where the service took place were gathered citizens representative of all of Windham county and other parts of the state. The Windham County Medical society, of which Dr. Perry was former president, was represented by a delegation comprising its entire membership. Major Elbert L. Darble, commanding officer of special troops of the 43rd. Div., to which Captain Perry's former command is attached and staff of officers, members of the Headquarters medical detachment, formerly commanded by Captain Perry, and state, city, county and town officials and members of the Masonic and Odd Fellows organizations, and a large number of relatives and friends gathered at the church to pay their respects to a man who for more than a quarter of a century faithfully administered to the sick of the community.

Rev. James F. English, pastor of the church, conducted the service. Besides the large delegation of governmental and military officials were gathered too, representatives of every church creed and political party who joined in the last sad tribute to a friend. The casket was draped with the American flag. The bearers were Dr. Anthony Lapalme, of North Grosvenordale, and Dr. Karl T. Phillips, representing the Windham County Medical society; Major E. L. Darble of the Connecticut National guard, G. Stanley Shaw, past commander of the Anselm Mayotte post, American Legion, William P. Warren, member of the board of selectmen, and Attorney Ernest C. Morse. At the grave at Grove street cemetery, a committal service was read by Rev. Mr. English. This was followed by the firing of a volley of three shots, by a rifle squad of national guardsmen. As the casket was being lowered into the grave a bugler of the headquarters company sounded Taps.

James M. Keith, said to be the oldest resident of the town of Eastford, died Saturday evening at his home in the village. He was 94 years of age. Mr. Keith was a life-long resident of Eastford and was widely known in Windham county. He is survived by two sons and a number of grandchildren.

CAPT. JARVIS CRITICALLY ILL AT HIS HOME

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Dec. 22.— Captain of Police William J. Jarvis, who was injured Thursday when he slipped in the driveway leading to his home on School street, causing injury to his ankle, has contracted an illness which has developed rapidly in the past 24 hours, to leave the police executive in a critical condition with chances for his recovery extremely doubtful.

Captain Jarvis is confined to his bed and has been in a delirious state since early morning. He is being attended by two physicians who worked relentlessly today in an effort to stave off the progress of the rapidly developing malady which is accompanied by symptoms of pneumonia, but the identity of which has not as yet been ascertained.

Sergeant George H. Liard, acting in the absence of Captain Jarvis, said upon returning from the sick room this evening that no favorable changes had been observed in his superior officer's condition during the course of the afternoon.

Captain Jarvis is being cared for by a trained nurse, who is being assisted by members of the Hook and Ladder and Hose companies at the Central fire station, assigned to duty in the captain's sick room by Foreman Edmund Keane, to act as orderlies. It was hoped by physicians that a favorable turning point of Captain Jarvis' condition would be reached late tonight or early Monday.

The Christmas season, affording recesses of a fortnight at all the colleges, has brought home Putnam collegians who will spent their holidays with their parents here. Those who have arrived thus far are: Gordon Winslow, of Holy Cross; Miss Madelyn Houghton, of Wellesley; Donald Child, of University of Vermont; William Shaun, of Rutgers Preparatory; Frank Donovan, of St. John's; Miss Dorothy Keefe, of Connecticut College for Women; Charles Murphy, of Connecticut Agricultural college; Hayden Franklin, of Northeastern university; Alice Perry, of Willimantic Normal; Ann McDonnell, of Pomfret, student; at St. Francis hospital, Hartford; Miss Jane Haines, of Connecticut College for Women; Augustus Wilson and Kenneth Rawley, of Suffield academy; Vincent Wilbur, Vermont academy; Clayton Hurlburt, of Proctor academy; Raymond Robinson and George H. Gilpatric, of Dartmouth; Miss Judith Sabin, of Brown university, and Raymond Brousseau, of Bryant-Stratton business college.

Miss Jessie Mitchell, kindergarten teacher at the Israel Putnam school, has resigned to accept a similar position in the schools of Milton, Mass. Miss Mitchell has been a very efficient teacher and her resignation has been accepted with deep regret by the local school authorities. To fill the vacancy created by Miss Mitchell's departure, the town school committee has elected Miss Charlotte Zakolska, of New Britain. Miss Zakolska is a graduate of the kindergarten-primar course at the New Britain Normal school. She is now teaching in the schools of Coventry, but has resigned to assume her duties in the educational department of this town on December 30.

The official debut of winter was made Saturday in true winter fashion. While the season of frigidness has been present for nearly a month, winter made its bow with cracking winds and sub-zero temperatures that were keenly felt in this city and surrounding communities. Although this section was spared from the ordeal of a howling blizzard such as swept over the northern part of the country, the effects of the season's first day as king, were telling on the immense crowds that poured into the business section Saturday for the Christmas shopping finally. The cold snap provided new sheetings of ice on the city's ponds to the delight of hundreds who spent Sunday indulging in the various ice sports.

Christmas was observed in all of the Protestant churches of the city today. Sermons in keeping with the spirit of the season, were delivered by the ministers and special services of music were rendered by the choirs. At the Congregational church Sunday evening, a large congregation attended the Christmas cantata which was sung by a chorus of sixty voices, and presented under the direction of Mrs. E. L. Robinson of Church street.

Funeral services were held Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at the chapel of the Congregational church for Mrs. John Maynard of Pomfret street, who died Thursday morning. Rev. James F. English officiated at the church service and conducted interment at Grove street cemetery where burial took place.

This afternoon at two o'clock at the First Baptist church, the funeral of Henry O. Preston, life-long resident of this city, was held with Rev. Henry H. Hodge, pastor of the church, officiating. A large attendance of friends and relatives were present. Burial was in Putnam Heights cemetery. A committal service in charge of Rev. Mr. Hodge was held at the grave.

Contractors, engaged in the repair of the Putnam high school athletic field, have discontinued activities because of the extreme coldness that has prevailed during the past week. City Engineer George W. Perry, under whose supervision the work of rebuilding the "sandlot" is taking place, said Saturday that in all probability work will not begin again until spring. Mr. Perry intimated that the athletic field, when completed, will be one of the best sporting grounds in the state.

The hook and ladder and the hose companies at the Central fire station in Union square, responded to a still alarm at noon Saturday for a chimney fire in the north end of the city. The blaze proved of little consequence and was easily extinguished with water and chemicals and the firemen returned to quarters within the noon hour.

Lieut. Allon A. Thayer, of Fort Ethan Allen, Burlington, Vermont, is enjoying a Christmas furlough which he is spending at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Thayer of King street. Lieut. Thayer is a graduate of the United States Military academy at West Point, class of 1928.

Miss Emma Hall, of Longmeadow, Mass., spent the week end at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Hall of Farrows street. Miss Hall will leave for Detroit, Mich., on Wednesday for a three week's stay.

Robert Bruce, of New Britain, visited with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Bruce of Mechanics street, over the week end.

Franklin Perry returned to his duties in Hartford today, after a three-day visit at his home here during which he attended the funeral service of his father, Captain Edward F. Perry, M. D., held Saturday.

WAUREGAN

The Wauregan Parent-Teacher association held its December meeting with twenty-five members present. The resignation of Paul Roper, who recently moved to Moosup, was accepted, and Mrs. Daniel Leary was elected treasurer. A reading was given by Mrs. Loretta Moffitt, "Santa in a Flat," music was provided by Mrs. Leach, followed by a reading by Mrs. Michael Fitzmaurice, "John Henry Paul Brown." Mrs. Williams, the president, presented Past President Mrs. John Campbell, who now lives in Providence and in a pleasing speech presented her a past president's emblem in gold. Dainty refreshments were served by Mrs. Henry Leach, Mrs. Leary, and Mrs. Herbert House.

A special Christmas service was held at the Congregational church Sunday morning at eleven o'clock. There was special music with violin selections by Miss Florence Leach, Boston, and a pageant by the Sunday school, entitled, "The Christmas Torch." Mrs. Gertrude Tracy was in charge of the music, with Robert Bethel organist, and the pageant was in charge of Mr. Williams, assisted by Miss Dorothy Atwood, Mrs. Addison Tracy, Mrs. Williams and Miss Ethel Davis.

The Christmas tree party of the Congregational church is to be held Monday evening, Dec. 30.

Mr. Leon left Friday morning to spend the holidays at his home in Columbia Falls, Maine. Miss Picard goes to her home in Framingham, Mass., and Miss Hattie Geer spends her vacation at Danielson.

Mrs. F. T. Johnson has been spending a week at Hartford, the guest of her son Philip. Mr. Johnson and Mr. and Mrs. Bethel were visitors Sunday at Miss Olive Johnson's home in Hartford.

JEWETT CITY

ELMER G. STARKEATHER DIES AFTER BRIEF ILLNESS

Elmer G. Starkweather died at his home in Hopeville Saturday. He had been in his usual health, but was stricken with apoplexy a few days before his death. Mr. Starkweather was born in Plainfield October 25, 1847, the son of Daniel and Louisa Frink Starkweather. He married Elizabeth Wilson, forty-one years ago, November 28th, 1888, and has lived in Hopeville since that time. He was a member of Pachaug church, where he has held the office of deacon for years. He was a director of the Jewett City Creamery and served as its president at one time. He was a man highly respected by everyone with whom he came in contact, especially his neighbors, to whom he was always a kindly friend. He is survived by his wife and a niece, Mrs. Edna Mathewson of New London.

Congregational Services

The Christmas spirit pervaded the evangelical churches Sunday, the specially prepared music and sermons giving much inspiration and pleasure. The Congregational church was elaborately decorated with hemlock branches, poinsettias, and red wreaths. Christmas trees silver decorated, and bearing silver stars stood at each side of the choir loft. A chorus choir of fifteen voices and a junior choir sang the special music, with organ and piano combined accompaniment. At half past four there was a vesper service, which opened with the singing of several Christmas carols by choir and congregation accompaniment by organ and piano. The story of Benjamin the shepherd's son, was most delightfully read by Mrs. C. L. Howe, the choir singing the choruses, with solo by Byron Kinnie, duet by Ruth Ballou and Loretta Alley, a male quartet and women's trio. The sopranos were, Mrs. Carl Benjamin, Mrs. Byron Kinnie, Ethel Fiske, Isabel Marshall, and Ruth Ballou; altos, Loretta Alley, Bessie Thompson, Virginia Goodenough, Christine Marshall and Mrs. E. H. Hiscox; tenors, Charles Perkins and William Marshall; basses, Byron Kinnie, Earl Robinson and Earl Hiscox, Organist, Mrs. Walter Benjamin, chorister, Mrs. Hiscox. The decorations were by Miss M. A. Burdick, the Misses Marshall and Bessie Thompson.

At the Baptist Church

The morning service music at the Baptist church included a duet by Verna Tarbox and Ellen Prior, with violin obligato by Sarah Gill. In the evening a finely rendered cantata, Glad Tidings of Great Joy was presented by sopranos: Mrs. G. H. Prior, Mrs. Floyd Ray, Verna Tarbox, Beatrice Cathcart, Priscilla Scates, Sarah Gill, Ruth Cathcart and Ellen Prior; altos, Margaret Jordan and Emma Dearnley; tenors, C. F. Gardner and Joseph Hoddy; basses, John MacLean, G. H. Prior; violin by Tyler Gilbert. There were solos by Emma Dearnley, Joseph Hoddy, Margaret Jordan, John MacLean, and Verna Tarbox, duets by Messrs. Hoddy and MacLean and Mrs. Ray and Miss Dearnley. The music showed much careful practice under the direction of Mrs. G. H. Prior with Mrs. John Davis organist.

Methodist Church

Besides the morning special music at the Methodist church, in the evening Rev. J. W. Carter read the story, Lilac the Wise Men, with the music by the choir, Irving Thornton was chorister and Everett Thornton organist.

WHERE ARE THE GOOD FELLOWS?

There may be doubts as to the existence of Santa Claus, but there is no dodging the fact that there are various organizations which are engaged in the praiseworthy task of seeing that what might otherwise be a dreary and drab Christmas day, a day like any other day in a struggling, humdrum life, is made more cheerful.

These organizations are evidencing the willingness to act as Santa Claus for any and all of those who desire it. They stand ready to use their knowledge and good offices for the benefit of those who need it. They know where these homes are that have no promise of Christmas cheer except through some such agency. They know where sickness and misfortune have created unexpected and unfortunate conditions and they will do what lies in their power to overcome them.

It is always at this season of the year that there are so many who think of those in less favorable circumstances. Frequently, after the holiday is over and someone relates experiences involving desolate homes, individuals are heard to remark that they wish they had known of those cases since they would have been only too glad to have supplied what was needed for a real Christmas dinner. The same ones deplore the fact that some persons are too proud to let their circumstances become known and prefer to go without, bitter though it is, to having their predicament broadcast.

Those in such a frame of mind should realize that there are organizations ready and waiting to carry out any wish they may have in that direction. They are soliciting contributions to provide a Christmas dinner in worthy homes, to possibly provide toys for the children and to make the day different than the rest. Knowing where the need exists, what is more logical than that they should be made the messengers of your good will?

There were cities where there used to be organizations at this time of the year known as Good Fellows. There's a chance for everyone to be a Good Fellow. The contributions may be large or small. They may be placed in the Salvation Army kettles or handed to other organizations, but there's no better way of spreading the Christmas spirit than by making it a real Christmas for those who see slight prospect of it now.

WHAT HAPPENED?

Those who witness an accident can be expected to have different versions, depending perhaps upon their position or upon just how much they actually saw of it.

This is emphasized by the fatal airplane accident at Bolling field, Washington, where five lives were lost. The plane had just taken off, had gotten but a short distance in the air when it crashed to the ground and all were killed. The pilot was one of the army's best and the machine was high grade and expensive.

The investigation which was immediately started showed that, while there were several eyewitnesses, it was impossible to obtain much information as to what actually happened. They saw it take off and, while one thought it was 200 feet in the air and about to take a left turn, another figured it was only half as high and that the operator was attempting to come down but the machine became unmanageable. The machine itself was a mass of wreckage.

Possibly the experts will be able to piece together the information obtained in such a manner as to reach a tangible conclusion as to what happened, but the prospects are not good that there will be anything definitely known as to what happened.

It was one of those cases which showed that accidents are liable to happen in the best of cases, but for the sake of guarding against a repetition of such an accident it will be unfortunate if it is impossible to reach a satisfactory decision as to the cause. It is from the study of just such cases that greater protection can be thrown around flying. It is quite necessary to know what happened, however, if that very thing is going to be recognized and avoided by others.

EXTEND NAVAL PACT

Inasmuch as the year 1931 marks the end of the agreement reached at Washington regarding capital ship construction, it was inevitable that the efforts in behalf of further naval limitations should awaken an interest in the continuance of that pact. It was agreed at Washington that the nations should refrain from new construction until 1931 and then should decide whether to continue or to discontinue the agreement.

The naval agreement has been a big money saver to all the nations. They cannot fail to appreciate the value of the step that was taken at Washington and, that being so, the desirability of maintaining it. With the limit of the agreement reached and no provision made for extending it, it could be expected that the respective nations would proceed to make such replacements as they consider necessary. That would mean a return to those conditions recognized as undesirable years ago.

It was thus inevitable that someone should suggest the continuance of the holiday on battleships, or that such a suggestion by the Japanese should receive the approval of this government. It is one that can be expected to be supported by all the nations involved.

There is already discussion as to whether the battleship ought to be abandoned. Years ago we were told it was obsolete. Since then there have been restrictions placed on the number and now, with more effective air service, there is a further movement for the abolition of those great fighting machines which cost such a fortune to construct and maintain. There is no probability that an international agreement could be obtained at the present time in that direction, but the possibilities of it sooner or later cannot be overlooked. Thus, the maintenance of a battleship holiday will give time for the study of the proposition. If, when another five years roll around, it is decided to eliminate the floating fortresses there will be less wastage from new construction. On the other hand, if there is then no readiness to make such a move, no harm will have been done and action can be taken at that time based upon conditions as they then exist. It is not believed that there has been any thought of letting the Washington agreement end without extension.

WATER DIVERSION

When Charles E. Hughes was named as special master by the United States supreme court to consider the water diversion problem at Chicago, it was conceded that an excellent appointment had been made and one whose decision would be fully respected.

Chicago has been taking water from Lake Michigan for domestic purposes and for the purpose of flushing its sewers. It has been taking so much that there has been a feeling that it was lowering the level of the lakes to the detriment of the other states bordering thereon as well as Canada. It was impossible to get Chicago to call a halt so the matter was taken to the courts.

Now Mr. Hughes finds that Chicago is doing what it has no right to do, that the practice must be stopped and that there must be a gradual termination of this use of the lake water in turning it from other than its natural course. It is recognized that this cannot be checked immediately but it is required to start reducing next July and to continue until by the end of 1938 it must cease taking the water for sewer flushing and have its sewage system completed.

What Chicago will do if the report is accepted, as it probably will be, by the supreme court is open to question. It can, as it should, speed up its sewer work or it can turn to what it may think is the easier course of trying to get congress to so legislate that it can continue to do as it has been doing, or at least for a longer period than the Hughes report favors. That Chicago will endeavor to link up with this the move for the waterway connecting the lakes with the Mississippi river and claim that this project requires as much water as is now being taken is possible. Whether Chicago can get sufficient support for such a proposition is uncertain. It is quite evident that Canada must be taken into consideration and there happen to be other states bordering on the lakes than Illinois. That they are openly opposed to the water diversion is fully understood, and Chicago must recognize the difficulty that confronts it in overcoming their united stand.

GET IT STARTED

The move for an investigation into the conditions that prevail in Haiti is bound to awaken an interest in that island republic. For years it has been the center of trouble, the last outbreak being only characteristic of what has gone on there periodically. The house of representatives has quickly acted in response to the request of the president for authority to name a commission to study conditions there.

Such steps as were taken to suppress the disorder that broke out there have been effective. On the surface peace again prevails but no one knows for how long. Our influence has been shed in the island for a number of years in the interest of peace. It is not because we sought the task but because canditions in Haiti were such that if had not intervened some other country would have been forced to do so. Under the Monroe doctrine we take the responsibility of taking such a step in preference to a foreign country.

Probably any regime in Haiti would be subject to criticism. None could expect to get along without opponents, but in view of the long task that is faced there and the large problems, it is a fitting time that such an inquiry as the president sponsors should be conducted. There are reasons to believe that men of the proper calibre will be named if the president is given the authority. We certainly want to know if there is anything wrong with the manner in which our representatives have been directing matters in that republic, and that administration is likewise entitled to a chance to show that it has been meeting the situation satisfactorily, all things considered. The disposition of congress should be to get the investigation underway as quickly as possible.

LUNCHEON AT TWELVE.

For four years Evelyn had caught the same car for work at 7.50 each morning; for three years she'd seen John Gordon every day and had lunched with him each Thursday at 12 sharp; for two years she'd grown constantly more irked at her monotonous daily routine and for one year she'd secretly planned to change it.

With the advent of spring Evelyn decided she couldn't stand the city any longer. She yearned for country life. She dreamed of farms, of growing things, of chickens and cows, of rambling through woods and of being loved by a strong, romantic he-man of the wide open spaces. And as her visions waxed her interest in John Gordan waned—John, with his humdrum job, his humdrum talk about his humdrum future, his humdrum affairs in general, and in particular his impossible sheikish hair lotion.

So it turned out that this scene took place at 12 sharp on the third Thursday in April at a table in what Evelyn considered one of the city's most humdrum restaurants.

"John, please stop mooning at me and decide what you want for lunch."

"I'm sorry," murmured John, crestfallen, reaching for the menu.

"John," Evelyn continued, "I am going away."

"What do you mean?" he exclaimed.

"I'm going to Red Oaks, my cousin's farm in East Branch, Iowa, for a long vacation."

"They'll have to be postponed. I'm taking a leave of absence and I won't see you again until June first at the earliest." And while John looked on like a lost puppy Evelyn scorched her tongue on hot soup, pretending to eat and to feel no remorse at the thought of leaving him. Red Oaks farm was fifty miles from a decent sized town, a hundred miles from street cars and telephones, and a million miles, Evelyn fervently hoped, from men like John Gordon with their humdrum jobs, their humdrum talk about humdrum affairs, and worst of all, in her opinion, their ridiculous attempts to look sheikish by slicking their hair with "axle" grease!

It was her sixth morning at Red Oaks farm and it was the sixth morning it had rained. Evelyn's shoes were caked with mud. Her clothes were bedraggled. Her marcel wave was a washout and her face and hands were rough from the hard water she washed in.

The first rainy day Evelyn had read all the books in her cousin Martha's library. One was Grimm's fairy tales. The other was the W. C. T. U. bulletin for 1919.

The second rainy day, after dragging in logs and making a fire in the range to heat the iron, Evelyn had done her cousin's ironing.

The third rainy day she had kneaded and baked bread, shelled peas, and made boiled eggplant pudding, while her cousin tended a sick baby. The fourth rainy day she had waded through mud to the chicken coop for eggs and then had reread Grimm's fairy tales.

On the fifth rainy day she had stared vacantly out of the window down the sloppy expanse of road and fields.

And on this, the sixth rainy morning, she had written a letter to John.

"Cousin Martha," Evelyn said. "I am going to mail this letter today even if I have to walk the ten miles down to East Branch to do it." Cousin Martha beamed.

"You won't have to do that," she said. "Ed Perkins, Farmer Perkins' son, drives to town for us every week for groceries. He comes today, and I know he'll take you along. And Evelyn," she added with a sly twinkle, "Ed Perkins makes a big hit with the ladies!"

Some time later, Evelyn, bumping along the wet road in Ed Perkins' dilapidated flivver, had her first encounter with the "strong, husky, romantic he-man" of her dreams. After conveying much humdrum information about crops and horses and pigs and the high cost of living and his idea of the ideal type of girl for a farmer's wife, Mr. Perkins announced suddenly:

"D'ye know, if I'd a had any ideer I was goin' to ride to town today with a perky young thing like you, I'd a slicked up a bit and put some of that thar new-fangled stay-put grease stuff on my hair!"

Two days later, Evelyn, anxious-eyed, waiting for John to pass by her desk, looked up blushing as a familiar voice sang out:

"Why, Evelyn, you back! I thought you'd gone till the first of June."

"Well, you see, John," she said sweetly, "this is Thursday—our regular weekly date—and I didn't think we should miss another one. I'll be waiting for you as usual for luncheon at 12 sharp!"—Exchange.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—Up to the late afternoon of Dec. 12 the senate called Joseph R. Grundy of Pennsylvania about anything that occurred to any senator.

Look over senate proceedings for that day and you'll find him not only referred to but directly addressed on the senate floor as "Big Joe," "Uncle Joe," "Shylock Joe," "Marse Joe," "grandpapa of lobbyists" and in a dozen other ways, none complimentary.

It was the last minute of the 11th hour of the open season on Grundy, and senators opposing his tariff views or announced notions about what the relative voting power of "backward" and other states should be, took full advantage of it.

Then he was sworn in, without a dissenting voice. And from that time on he became "the junior senator from Pennsylvania, Mr. Grundy." If his fellow senators want to poke fun at him any more, they will have to do it cautiously and in conformity with senate rules.

Senatorial Dignity

"From this time on none of us ever again will be allowed to attribute to him any conduct or any motive unworthy or unbecoming a member of the senate," said Senator Cutting of New Mexico rather plaintively.

"I think it is due to our membership to remind ourselves at this last moment that this man has demonstrated an ignorance and a provincialism regarding the situation in the country as a whole which is almost unprecedented among figures of his national prominence."

Through it all, Senator-soon-to-be Grundy sat necessarily silent and usually grinning cheerfully. He heard a dozen or so senators discuss his qualifications in about the same way; and he heard nobody at all, not even his colleague, Reed of Pennsylvania, speak in his behalf.

Only once or twice did the Grundy countenance even grow red. Once it was when he discovered himself to be perched temporarily in the seat of Norris of Nebraska, the same Norris who a moment later was saying that Governor Fisher had "made an ass of himself" in the appointment, adding:

"But there is nothing in the constitution or the laws that prevents the governor of Pennsylvania from making a damned fool of himself if he wants to."

What a Clamor!

Never in the Bystander's recollection has any senator been installed with such a clamor of personalities dinning in his ears.

But he's Senator Grundy now, which probably he never dreamed of being up to his famous tilt with the senate lobby committee. And he may continue to be Senator Grundy for some time to come.

How will it affect his political philosophy? Will he still hold his views about the backward states after a period of service in the senate?

It will be interesting to hear from him on that later on.

Stories That Recall Others

One Thing Sure.

Ann was very much elated because her mother was having a birthday which meant ice cream for dessert. Spreading the glad tidings to a neighbor nearby, she said: "Mother has a secret birthday; we can't tell how old she is, but we can tell we are going to have ice cream for dinner."

Advertise!

A family group was discussing one of the absent members in the presence of a school lad.

"What is the matter with Jack, anyway, he is so glum lately?" asked a happy member of the group.

"I think he lost heavily on the market," someone said.

"Well, why don't he advertise for it?" asked the lad.

YOUR HEALTH

Checking Up On Ourselves

By Robert H. Riley, M. D Director Department of Health, Baltimore.
(From Gorgas Memorial Institute.)

Summer is the time when school children can be given special physical care that is more difficult in the other months because it interfers with school work and other activities of busy families. So special effort was made a Maryland, this past summer to check up on younger school children, in order to find, not the emergency ailments that require immediate treatment and are seldom neglected, but the ailments and symptoms that do not thrust themselves into our attention, but are often the causes of trouble that grows and grows if it is not remedied. The result showed most satisfactory general health condition but also enough preventable troubles to make parents realize that it is dangerous to quote "Let well enough alone," just because the child is not actually "sick."

We examined a total of 3,755 children and found that 54 per cent., needed dental care; that 34 per cent., had bad tonsils and other throat infections; that 23 per cent., were underweight, not because they lacked food, but because they were getting the wrong kind of food; that 15 per cent., had adenoids, causing many of them to be mouth breathers. These were the outstanding results. But we also found that 97 children had lung trouble that needed immediate and serious attention, and that 54 children had difficult vision or hearing which had not heretofore been discovered, but which without a doubt was seriously interfering with their school work and general progress.

There will be less illness this year as a result of caring for these ailments. The children will get along better in school. Parents will have less cause for worry, doctors' bills will be lower. All in all, this summer roundup was tremendously worthwhile to the state, to the schools and to the families.

CHILD TRAINING

Train Your Child to be Calm, Reasonable, Helpful

Juliette Frazier

Mothers should feel it a very important part of the training of their children to make them calm, reasonable and helpful in emergencies and in case of accident. Even very young children have been known to show great presence of mind as a result of careful training.

I remember when the two children of my neighbor, Mrs. Blank, were quite small, she asked my advice with regard to their behavior on several occasions. Then one day when I was calling on her, it happened that a caterpillar was discovered on Marian's dress. Mrs. Blank screamed and made ineffectual dashes at the "horrid thing," and Marian howled like a Comanche. I scraped the caterpillar on to a piece of paper and threw it out of the window.

"Marian is so sensitive," said Mrs. Blank, proceeding to pet her daughter.

"Wouldn't it be better to have her sensible?" I asked smiling. "Though," I continued, "sensitiveness is very desirable if developed in the right direction. Is Ted also afraid of insects?"

"Why, no; he is a boy," said Mrs. Blank.

"Well, does Ted like unpleasant-looking things any better than Marian? Excuse me, Mrs. Blank, I think the trouble is that Marian has found out that you expect her to shriek at the insect, and that you regard it as genteel and quite becoming to an embryo lady. Ted knows his playmates would laugh at him for such folly, and so he shows common sense."

At that moment I saw the caterpillar crawling back up the window ledge and called the child's attention to it. "See Marian, what a lovely silky coat he has. He is so helpless, you could easily hurt him, if you were so cruel, but he could not hurt you. Come, touch him. Some day he will spin a cocoon and go to sleep in it until Mother Nature awakens him, and then he will find himself turned into a beautiful butterfly."

Marian was at once interested in the caterpillar, and she has never feared one since, but her training had encouraged a disposition to frantic screaming at sight of all creatures of this kind, and this caused her mother considerable mortification soon after.

There was a wedding at our church by far the grandest wedding ever held in our town. We were all invited, and Mrs. Blank, beautifully gowned, occupied a front seat, with Marian, marvelously flounced and beribboned. In the very midst of the ceremony, Marian espied a beetle crawling up her sleeve. Instead of picking it off, or asking her mother to do so, she gave vent to unearthly yells, which startled everyone in the church, and momentarily halted the marriage ceremony.

Only a radical change in the method of training could change the habits of a child behaving in this way at seven, so that at thirteen she would display the presence of mind of a little girl I saw in the Yellowstone National park last summer. She had been left to take charge of her little brother, a child of three years. They were standing upon a wide table-rock which overhung one of the natural hot springs, boiling some hundred feet below. The girl had been holding the child's hand but had let it go to run back a little way for her handkerchief which she had dropped. The child, meanwhile, walked towards the edge of the rock. The girl saw that to call or to pursue would insure his destruction. She grasped a small jar of candy which she had in her coat pocket and shouting, "Candy," poured its contents out on the palm of her hand. The child paused and looked back. He was not six feet from destruction, but could not resist the lavished sweets, and came skipping back to share them!

Here was a fine instance of presence of mind; self-control which repressed the dangerous call or pursuit; disciplined intelligence which took advantage of the strongest impulse of the fugitive, in a flash argued out the dangers and probabilities of the case, and then acted on the instant when to delay but a moment would have been death.

IN DAY'S NEWS

Sad Chinkiang.

"News of Great Britain's surrender of the Chinkiang foreign concession to China marks the end of a fond hope," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C. headquarters of the National Geographic society.

"Sixty-eight years ago the British saw in Chinkiang the seed of a great Chinese port. Its site, at the junction of the Grand Canal and the Yangtze,—seemed the natural clearing station of the principal east-west and north-south waterways of China. Chinkiang, 168 miles up-river from Shanghai and 60 miles down-river from Nanking, just had to grow. But it didn't.

"The year the United States was fighting the first battle of Bull Run, Admiral Sir James Hope, then engaged in opening the Yangtze to foreign trade, sailed his fleet into the channel behind the Golden Island near Chinkiang and anchored. Fields of peanuts and corn now thrive where his anchors sank in soft mud. Soon after the British arrived to establish a foreign concession the river deserted the pagoda-crowned, temple-girt green island hill and left it stranded on shore.

"Having deserted Golden Island, the Yangtze began to ease out of reach of Chinkiang itself. Travelers visiting the city in the winter season walk along the Bund (quay) and view a dismal sight. A sea of mud instead of a river of water stretches before the eye. Scores of junks, their masts careening crazily, lie in the mud like a herd of giant beasts bogged down in a prehistoric swamp.

"The Yangtze and the Grand Canal have both failed Chinkiang. Half the population, and now the British, have abandoned the ancient city. Like the Mississippi, the Yangtze coils in new curves. For many years the river's curve at Chinkiang has swung toward the opposite, north shore; toward Yangchow, the city that Marco Polo governed for three years. On Yangchow flats where hunters shoot snipe one year the Yangtze runs 75 feet deep the next. In 60 years the Yangtze "dragon" will coil back to Chinkiang's Bund, so say the engineers.

"The Grand Canal has served Chinkiang for 1300 years. Its route runs from Shanghai to Chinkiang, then across the Yangtze to Yangchow and north to Tientsin, a 900-mile waterway. Twenty years ago the building of the Tientsin-Pukow railroad parallel to the north-south route of the Grand Canal introduced a competitor that dealt a final blow to the town's hopes of prosperity. Pukow and Nanking on opposite sides of the Yangtze, wax fat on trade the railroad brings them while Chinkiang, although it has a station on the line between Nanking and Shanghai, starves for business.

"Like so many Chinese communities, Chinkiang still is a walled city. The British concession and some of the suburbs lie outside the walls.

"China will find the concession much improved with modern conveniences. A water supply system was installed by the English, houses were built, and a small electric power and light system established.

"Traditions of imperial glories remain with Chinkiang amid her ebbing prosperity. In the days of the powerful emperors its citizens crowded the shores to see the three-decked, gorgeously ornamental junks, banners flying, sailing leisurely through the Grand Canal with the Chinese court on board. Between Loyang, on the Yellow river and Yangchow, on the Yangtze, stood 40 Grand Canal palaces where the emperor, his officials, ladies and attendants stayed for the 40 nights of their triumphal progress. On board the royal junks the court reveled and feasted with an extravagance that vied with scenes aboard Caligula's barges on Lake Nemi."

HOMESTEADERS TAKE UP VAST ACREAGE IN 1929

WASHINGTON (AP) — There is still the pioneering urge in America. Homesteaders came into ownership of 1,890,026 acres of public lands in 1929.

During the year, says the annual report of the secretary of the interior, entries were allowed for 4,612,722 acres of public and Indian lands, an increase of nearly a million acres over 1928.

Stock raising homesteaders to the number of 3,271 were given ownership of 1,350,384 acres of land.

CIGARET SCOFFLAWS ARE CANADA'S PEST

DETROIT, (AP) — Scofflawism, it seems, depends upon the point of view.

"Bootleggers," selling American popular brands of cigarets, in flat tins which are easily hidden in the pocket, are thick around the Detroit wharf, thicker than last-minute purveyors of liquor on the Canadian side.

The popular brands of American cigarets sell in Windsor, and throughout Canada, for 35 cents for a pack of 20, on account of the import tax, and the Canadian law frowns upon those who smuggle them almost as severely as the American law frowns upon hip-picket importers of liquor.

The Canadian taste for American cigarets, too, it seems, is about as acute as the American taste for Canadian spirits.

MOUNTAIN HAMLET TO GET FIRST CHRISTMAS CANDY

WINCHESTER, Va. (AP) — A sprawling hamlet in the mountains of southwest Virginia, which saw its first automobile only several weeks ago, is to have its first Christmas candy.

The Rev. Kenneth Killinger, Lutheran clergyman of Marion, Va., penetrated the wild Bear Creek mountain region and found a rude settlement of 100 living in a world of its own.

None of the inhabitants ever had been to a city or big town, the children never had tasted candy, and the clergyman's automobile, the first to visit the hamlet, startled the residents.

Grace Lutheran church of Winchester has sent a truckload of gifts to Mr. Killinger, who will take them to the settlement.

Santa Claus And The Mouse

One Christmas Eve, when Santa Claus came to a certain house,
To fill the children's stockings there, he found a little mouse.
"A Merry Christmas, little friend," said
Santa, good and kind.
"The same to you, sir," said the mouse,
"I thought you wouldn't mind
If I should stay awake tonight and watch you for a while."
"You're very welcome, little mouse," said
Santa, with a smile;
And then he filled the stockings up before the mouse could wink—
From toe to top, from top to toe, there
"Now they won't hold another thing,"
said Santa Claus with pride.
A twinkle came in mouse's eyes, but humbly he replied:
"It's not polite to contradict—your pardon I implore—
But in the fullest stocking there, I could get one thing more."
"Oh, ho!" laughed Santa. "Silly mouse!
don't I know how to pack?
By filling stockings all these years, I should have learned the knack."
And then he took the stocking down from where it hung on high.
And said: "Now put in one thing more;
I give you leave to try."
The mouse chuckled to himself, and then he softly stole
Right in the stockings crowded toe, and gnawed a little hole!
"Now, if you please, good Santa Claus,
"I've put in one thing more;
For you will own that little hole was not in there before."
How Santa Claus did laugh and laugh!
and then he finally spoke:
"Well, you shall have a Christmas chance for that nice little joke."

A Christmas Card

Ah! dearest lady of my heart,
I fain would give thee strings of pearls
And golden bracelets for thy wrists,
And silver ribbons for thy curls,
And rings to twinkle on thy hands
And jeweled brooches for thy breast
And regal furs to keep thee warm,
And perfumes of the costliest.

Sweet angel of my fondest dreams,
I wish I could present to thee
A Watteau fan o'er which thine eyes
Might beam in tenderness on me,
A Pekin pup, a peachlow vase,
De luxe edition of a bard,
But being poor, alack! alas!
I only send a Christmas card.

Navajo Indians employed in road work in Mesa Verde National park saved for the park its one and only elderberry bush, which had to be moved from its old location to permit the construction of a part of the scenic Knife Edge road. The Navajos channeled about the roots of the bush so taht it would be moved in a large block of earth. Then when the new hole was made cables were adjusted, hooked over the stove teeth, the bush was raised, taken by shovel to the new location, and reset. The bush, a very fine and large specimen, was then cut back approximately 40 per cent. to insure its future growth.

STORY OF BETHLEHEM HAS CHANGED THE WORLD

The Christmas festival is an inheritance. Its sources go back to a very early time and bring in their flood of practices and impulses of pre-Christian years, said Rev. Theodore M. Shipherd, D. D., in his Christmas sermon at Park Congregational church Sunday morning. The customs of the Roman Saturnalis are here, he continued. The traditions of the January Kalends as well. In both we see the effort to relieve poverty and hunger, to provoke merriment and to throw off monotony and sorrow and calamity. These are commonly called the Pagan practices, but it is more accurate to mark them as human needs finding vent and expression. They are a protest against the injustice of society and the fears of the human heart. They are the assertion of the heart's hunger for good will and they are the breaking forth of the banked fires of generosity brought to open flame by the sombre lights and woods of nature at the dying of the year.

The insertion of the Birth of Christ as a central theme of the Christmas season has been accomplished, in a measure, by the most insistent effort of the Christian church over some 19 centuries of time. If anyone doubts the change for the better of the spirit of man, he need only saturate himself in the evolution that has come over the western world in the Christmas and holiday festival practices through these centuries. The gradual development of the Bethlehem picture, the Shepherds, the Magi and the angel chorus with its "Peace on Earth," have profoundly changed the crass, gross and beastly practices of two milleniums ago. Even the literal Bible student is mitigating somewhat his prose understanding, and given wings to his hope, love and goodwill.

In spite of the riding of the reindeer to market and the commercializing of the season for private gain, it is still true that the beautiful drama of the coming of the spirit of God to the life of man does not fail of its vital import. No more lyric structure has been formed in our civilization. Music and poetry and art have all joined hands to make real to us this pageantory of life's fairest understandings. Slowly, but with resistless tread the kingdoms of man's mind become the kingdoms of the Master of Men.

CHRIST BRIDGED GAP BETWEEN GOD AND MANKIND

The revelation of God in His Son, Jesus Christ, was the theme of the Christmas message by the Rev. David A. Pitt, D. D., at the Central Baptist church Sunday morning. Special Christmas music was tendered by the church choir under the direction of Frederick J. Maples.

Dr. Pitt took as his text the words from St. John, "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father." He then went on to show how Christ was the supreme revelation of the Eternal God.

The speaker prefaced his address by saying that the most important thing about any man was his philosophy of life. Dr. Pitt pointed out that from the very beginning of time, as far as there are any records, man has searched for and recognized God in some form—either the animism of the Orient or the God of the Old Testament prophets, holy in character and righteous in conduct.

It was this idea of God that Jesus came to fulfill, said Rev. Pitt. "God who had been revealed in the moral law and in the prophets was now to be revealed in a human character. The trouble with the God of the moral law was that while He was high and lifted up He seemed far away and impossible."

Dr. Pitt pointed out that Christ bridged this gap between an Almighty God and human beings. God made Himself understandable through His Son Jesus Christ, who said, "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father."

The fact of Christ's being is far more eloquent testimony of God's nature than any discussion of the subject could possibly be. "The church has always believed," said Dr. Pitt, "that in Jesus we have a revelation of man at his best, as God intended him to be. She has not as consistently, however, taught that in Christ we see God as He is, the God and Father of Our Lord Jesus Christ.

"Donald Hankey said that religion is meant betting your life that there is a God. The Christian religion is more than that. It springs from the faith that there is a Christlike God and it results in the commital of oneself to Him for time and eternity."

THE GREAT SIGNIFICANCE OF THE CHRIST'S BIRTH

In his Christmas sermon at the Norwich Town Congregational church, Rev. Elbridge C. Whiting of Belmont, Mass., spoke from Isaiah 9:6, "For unto us a Child is born, unto us a Son is given." It is a striking fact of history that no matter how dark the times are, there has always been some one who has arisen to declare that there was a good time coming he said. They might not know it for a certainty, but somehow they felt it in their souls, that in some way there would be a deliverance. Isaiah was such a person. He was living in a dark age, one of the darkest in the history of Israel. The people had broken faith with God. They had renounced the faith of their leaders. The princes and rulers had been rebellious against the commands of Jehovah.

Isaiah was a poet with power over words, as an archer has power over arrows, sending them down the centuries to pierce the hearts of men. He sent his words forth when all Israel was afraid. All through the ages people have been afraid. But all through the ages voices have been heard, now like a whisper, again like a voice of many waters, be not afraid, there is going to be a deliverence. The eighth century before Christ was similar to the twentieth century after Christ. Greater changes had taken place in that century than in all the preceeding ones.

And greater changes have taken place in these last one hundred years than in all the years since Christmas appeared among men. But the voice that comes to us and to all mankind is the same as in the days of the prophet: "Unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given." You notice that the message is in the present tense. Isaiah was telling the people who were afraid what was actually happening in their midst. He was not foretelling something that was going to happen eight hundred years from that date. He with his inspired vision was speaking of God's action in their own day. The week comes around as the earth moves on its axis when we celebrate the coming of One who calls himself a Son of man, and a Son of God and we think again of those words of the prophet, "Unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given." And naturally we ask what has that to do with the present situation?

Jesus was born 1933 years ago. That event is way in the past. Our need is now. A present help is what the world calls for. The great significance of Christ's birth is founded on the universality and eternal continuity of it. What really happened in Bethlehem of Judea? Most everybody believes that a Baby was born there and in whose Little Body there was divine life. What followed as a result of that birth? As the body developed the divine life developed until in the course of time a man, human in all points as we are, yet wholly divine in spirit and in truth, appeared.

Such results occurred in that combination of the human and the divine as to change the entire course of human events. History since Christ's day has been completely changed. The life of Jesus in the world has come to be regarded as the highest form of life ever seen. He is called the Saviour of the world. His life, death and resurrection complete the life of God in human form. Christ's birth is another way of putting the great truth that the divine life is in every man, woman and child.

The birth of the divine life is not confined to one little land and to one event. It is a universal and a continuous act of God and the Christ of history emphasizes this marvellous fact. In every one a child is born, in every one a son is given like unto the babe of Bethlehem, and because of that creative act of God we some day may become like Him and he will have dominion over souls redeemed through his precious coming to the world that God has made.

METHODIST PASTOR SPEAKS ON TOPIC GOODWILL

At Trinity M. E. church, Sunday morning, the pastor, Rev. Joseph Cooper, spoke from the text, Luke, 2.14—Goodwill to Men. Good will, what a fine wholesome word, said Rev. Mr Cooper. How beautiful its associations The goodwill of a business is something beyond the capital stock, funds employed in the business. It is the general public patronage based upon the feeling of confidence in the firms usage or reputation.

The goodwill industries are those philanthropic organizations that are run in the interests of the poor and distressed men and women.

Lindberg was our goodwill ambassador because he carried this neighborly spirit upon his epoch-making flights.

This old English word simply means God's will revealing itself in the human spirit.

God's goodwill shows itself in the gift of Christ for man's highest good.

This goodwill must be received amongst us or its virtue will not be felt. The divine intention must be met by man's cordial response. God cannot force His goodwill upon us. It needs to be the free expression of His Fatherhood or it would lose all its power and man's reception must be free or it will awaken no gratitude. Goodness is goodness only when it is freely given and freely received.

This goodness shows itself in the world of nature. At times we feel the awful truth of Tennyson's words, "Nature is red in tooth and claw."

The goodwill of God shows itself in the history of the race. The crimes of history always loom up larger than its good. Crime is abnormal like sickness and we make more of it than we do good behavior. In spite of moral lapses on the part of men yet history is a progressive record of goodness lying at the heart of things. There is a push towards righteousness running through all events of the past. The moral shock from criminal acts shows the growth of this finer spirit. No one can deny that good has come from the great evils that have shadowed the earth. The American Civil war was a fearful catastrophe yet it freed the slaves and settled the problem of national unity. It was an awful price to pay but it will never have to be paid again. The great World war was so horrible that we have not got the right perspective of it even yet but already we are moving toward a warless world so fast that it takes our breath away. History is on the side of God. Nations that forget God are doomed whether ancient Rome or modern Russia. Force may give us temporal advantage but in the long run it must be replaced by something more abiding. Wealth may accumulate but what better are we if men decay. Education may be the portion of a few but if it doesn't include the fear of God it can only work disaster. History is on the side of the just man and the just act. In many forms, in many tongues, in the most variant ways the spirit of goodness is seen operating in human life.

The spirit of goodwill is seen in the bettering conditions of human life. Men are always climbing after some ideal good. The higher good comes from the application of juster and more humane ideals. It is from better men and women that we are able to get a better social and economic order. Violent revolutions are more likely to retard our social advancement than help it forward. The Puritan commonwealth won its greatest victory when it sheathed its sword and turned to education and religion as the two forces most likely to push the world to finer living. The reign of terror created by the fanatical suffragettes ended in their own hurt but women have achieved their own emancipation by quiet insistence upon their own equality and capacity for responsibility.

The spirit of Jesus Christ expressing itself in the attitude amongst men is the force that is undermining the citadels of mere selfish privilege and making possible the new day for the world. The angel's chorus will find echo when we are prepared to follow the golden rule. Shall we go out and speak and work for this era of goodwill for our homes, our nation, our world.

"HIS NAME SHALL BE CALLED WONDERFUL"

At the Norwich Town Methodist Episcopal church the pastor Rev. George Warren Potter for his Christmas sermon text used a part of Isaiah 9:6 "His name shall be called wonderful." Rev. Mr. Potter said in part: "In the second chapter of Matthew we read of an event in which the ages have been deeply interested. God had become man. The Bible has recorded the fact, church history preserved it. Philosophers have discoursed upon its mystery.

"Some men in their little minds have tried to deny it possible, because they are misplaced in their vocation. They are in the ministry and like that preacher who recently made a bid for notoriety by denying the virgin birth of Christ. I always pity such men—they had better be working in some coal mine beneath the surface of the earth than to be occupying a pulpit in a house of God.

"The shepherds who came to that lowly manger did not ask for a scientific explanation of what the angels had sang to them on that glorious night. The angels who made no that immense heavenly chorus who sang 'Glory to God in the highest, on earth good will to men.'

"The birth of Christ was the most wonderful manifestation of the super-natural power of the work of God. It was a blending of the heavenly and the earthly, of divinity and simplicity.

"Jesus was born in Bethlehem of Judea, in the days of Herod the king. The time is precisely mentioned. Paul says, 'When the fullness of time had come!' It was a true and a fit time. God had made the fullest preparation. A preparation not necessary for Himself but for humanity. The race had now sufficiently gone through the training school. Time enough had been the school. Time enough had been given the world to try every other system of human devising. Reason, philosophy, science—all had failed. There was therefore a general expectation of Christ's coming at that time. God had awakened the expectations of the race not to disappoint them.

"'His name shall be called Wonderful.' Wonderful in all events which accompanied His birth. King of Heaven born in a manger. The angels chorus, the Wise Men's visit, the divine protection from Herod. The coming of Heaven and Earth on that first Christmas day.

"Wonderful is His life. For thirty years the divine nature hidden. Working as a humble carpenter thus elevated labor. Lived and worked without sin. Conquered temptation. Acknowledged the Son of God at His baptism. Wonderful in His teaching methods. Wonderful in His miracles. He stilled the tempest. He fed the multitudes. He cleansed the lepers. He opened the eyes of the blind. He healed the sick. He cast out demons. He raised the dead. Wonderful, wonderful indeed was He in His love and compassion. Going about continually doing good. Praying for His enemies even on the cross. —f$iment:h-fiSeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeee

"Wonderful in His death. The Centurion said, 'Truly this man is the Son of God.' Wonderful in His resurrection. Wonderful in His ascension and promise of the Holy Spirit.

"Wonderful His influence that thrills the old world today.

"Wonderful the transformation He brings to the human life. The scientists of the Middle Ages sought for elements that would transform baser metals into gold. Ponce de Leon sought waters of perpetual youth.

"Today we see in humanity the power of Christ so transforming, so elevating that no one can explain it. It is wonderful."

MARY'S SINLESS HEART HOPE OF WORLD, SAYS PRIEST

Anticipating the Feast of the Nativity, penitents crowded the sanctuary railing at St. Patrick's church at the 9 o'clock mass Sunday, and knelt back into the three aisles, that they might receive holy communion from Rev. Myles P. Galvin and Rev. John J. Reilly, who assisted him, so numerous had been the confessions of the previous afternoon and evening. It was the fourth Sunday in Advent and Father Reilly, who read the gospel for the Sunday Luke 2, 1-6, preached on the Immaculate Conception, which he denominated one of the most recent articles of faith in the Roman Catholic church, proclaimed by Pope Pius IX in 1854. This is the belief that the Mother of God, destined to bear the Christ, to become the spouse of the Holy Ghost, must have been conceived and born free from the taint of original sin.

True, there is little trace of authority for this in the scripture, beyond the rebuke of the Almighty to the Serpent whose head, it was promised, the woman should crush. But St. John has assured us that so many were the acts of and happenings in the earthly life of the Redeemer that no book has recorded them and no books could narrate them all. It is enough for Catholics that the early Christians believed this tenet and celebrated feasts in honor of the Immaculate Conception. Then reason comes to our aid—it is not logical that the sinless Christ could have had a mother ever sinful, or that the Holy Ghost, searching the world for one through whom the stupendous mystery of the Incarnation could be consummated would have chosen the heart of a sinful woman. It is the affectionate belief of all Catholics that the Infant Saviour rested against the breast of one who was innocense and guilelessness itself.

At the Catholic university in Washington there is being completed a shrine to the Immaculate Conception—similar in motive and design to the world-famed shrine of Paris, Rome and London. The shrine of the Immaculte Conception is no empty name, there in the center of the capital of the richest country of the world. The preacher dwelt upon its importance as a reminder and a warning, at this crisis of the nation's history, when softness and luxury may have the same effects upon the country that they had upon ancient nations, who, with prosperity forgot God. In these days when sin is flagrant, with ancient barriers swept away, when immorality flaunts itself in every phase and in every place, the attractions of the innocense and purity of Mary demand emphasis more than ever before. Now is the time for Catholics —especially for Catholic women—to put the teachings of the Immaculate Conception into their lives. The [illegible] of the world [illegible] better [illegible] of Bethlehem and Egypt, [illegible] and [illegible] the way, declaring that a slaughter house of horror must confront the angels, gazing down on the sin-scarred world in its present state. "Sin has snuffed out more souls than the war has taken lives," he avowed. Love, youth, are the world's excuse. He recommended a new fervor in the repetition of the familiar ejaculation of Catholics. "Mary, conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to Thee." There will be no progress in world-improvement, he declared, till all men aim to have a heart as pure as hers.

Accentuating what the preacher had said, Organist Henry J. LaFontaine had the Junior choir sing "Mother of Christ, What Shall I Ask of Thee?" and this was followed by a beautiful "Act of Love" (Gregorian). For his interlude during the administering of holy communion Mr. LaFontaine played his own superb arrangement of familiar hymns of Noel, featuring "Adeste, Fideles," the ancient hymn of the Roman Catholic church for centuries, familiar in modern times through its translation, "O, Come, All Ye Faithful."

LET GIVING BE SYMBOL OF GRATITUDE OF MAN

Let our giving this season be a symbol of gratitude for God's gift of gifts, said Rev. William Penner, pastor of the Taftville Congregational church in his Christmas sermon, Sunday morning. In part Rev. Mr. Penner said:

As we look into the annals of the history and philosophy of the years just preceding the birth of Christ we discover the probable motive of the Wisemen's search for the King. Greek philosophy had become conscious of human helpfulness and of the world's need of a redeemer. Oriental religions proclaimed the need of divine revelation, sought for a salvation and expected a saviour. The attitude of mind which grew out of these trends of thought in all likelihood influenced the thinking of the Wisemen and inspired them to take up the quest which led to the ultimate fulfilment of the spiritual hunger in their hearts.

The Biblical record tells but briefly of their journey. Guided by a star they came to Jerusalem, and after inquiring there for the King were directed on to Bethlehem. Always the star led them on. We, too, have need of a star on our way. For some its guiding light comes from Christian homes; for others from the church and some form of its service. No matter what the source, we need the light to guide us to the object of our search.

Though the Magi, acquainted presumably with the wealth and culture of their day, might well have been disappointed in the lowly birthplace of the Lord, they were filled with reverent gratitude that they had come to Bethlehem and to the King they sought. They were content to find him a babe and his palace a little room in a humble inn. The lowliness of the King's birth place has opened to him the hearts of many and wrought a feeling of fellowship with mortal man which early pomp and glory could never have achieved. There is no heart too lowly and humble for him to enter. We each may have our Bethlehem; and when our hearts have become his birth place we will know how to keep Christmas.

The Wisemen, beholding the King, fell down and worshipped him. They had sought him, found him, and now they brought him the adoration of their hearts and the gift of their possessions. If Christmas for us is to have any abiding and spiritual worth, we must follow their worthy example. Let our giving this season be a symbol of gratitude for God's Gift of gifts, and our lighted candles a symbol of that Light of Life in whose remembrance we celebrate.

WHAT CHRIST'S COMING BROUGHT TO WORLD

What Christ's Coming at Bethlehem Brought to the World, was the topic of the Christmas sermon given Sunday morning at the First Baptist church, by Rev. Percy A. Kilmister, the pastor. Speaking from the text, If I Had Not Come, he said in part:

In spite of the fact that the world was at peace, after almost a century of devastating wars when Jesus was born in the manger-cradle of Bethlehem in the reign of Augustus—in spite of that fact, I ask was there ever a more miserable age in the world's story?

There was no middle class, "common people" to engage in a career of unselfish service—only the fabulously rich at the top and the slave class or quasi-slaves, at the bottom. The last faintest glimmer of liberty had vanished and Augustus could say, "I am the state." Culture there was, of a sort. Art, literature and philosophy there was of a kind. There was little of soul in any of these things. The real heart had gone out of religion and religious practice in Palestine had dwindled to a series of childish disputations about Sabbath observance and the like. Into such a world as this was born on that night when the shepherds were watching their flocks the child Jesus, who was to make all the difference to the world and give to a run-down humanity new hope and faith.

In our text, "If I had not Come," we are led by a curious way to think of what the loss of Him would mean.

Too often we take Christ for granted—He's "all in the day's work," so to say. But let us ask as we approach the Christmas-tide what might have been if he had not come. The imagination just boggles at such a thought.

If Jesus had never come, if we "had no hope and were without God in the world," what sort of an industrial order should we have. If we have our improved working conditions, our factory laws and inspection to safe-guard the health of the worker, our laws against child-labor, we owe it largely to Christ's teaching of "Our Father" which logically implies "our brothers."

Think, if you will, what Christ's coming did for woman-hood and child-hood.

It is Christ who has humanized governments and society, given us "sweeter manners, purer laws." He has given new life and a fresh sense of spiritual value. Aye, and power to attain these lasting values.

These are but a few of the aspects of the significance of Christ's coming. The great question for all of us, especially at this Christmas season is, "Shall we, in any true measure and along all the lines of our experience, come to Him.

CANDLE-LIGHT SERVICE AT UNIVERSALIST CHURCH

The Christmas Candle-Light Vespers held at the church of the Good Shepherd (Universalist) under the auspices of the Y. P. C. U. at 5.30 o'clock Sunday afternoon was attended by a very large and appreciative audience.

Hundreds of candles were used for the lighting and carols were sung by the vested choir.

The pageant was drawn from "The Lost Word," a Christmas legend of one ago, by Dr. Henry Van Dyke and was first ever given by the young people of the church.

The characters were as follows: Hemas, Herbert Lawrence; Demetrus, Ed Rich; Marelon, Charles Parsons; John of Antioch, Leonard Partridge; Aethenais, Alice Parsons; Messenger, Ruth Banning; Servant, Junior Armstrong.

Street Singers — Betty Pike, Ann Stockdale, Eleanor Pike.

The tableau of the Holy Family consisted of Mary, Hattie Fowler; Joseph, Lloyd Thompson; John, Alice Parsons; Angel, Betty Pike.

At the morning church service Rev. Mr. Foster spoke on "The Unlike That Come At the Christmas Time." His text was Luke 11-20; and the shepherds returned, glorifying and praising God for all the things they had seen and heard. In part, Rev. Mr. Foster said:

Cumulative effect is noted when the song of a single voice is merged in the song of a dozen voices or even a great chorus. The power and majesty of a great ocean are seen in the climax of high tide. So the feelings of good will culminate and reach their climax at the Christmas time. The lessons of Christmas have many interpretations. There is the commercial Christmas of the merchants with the exchange of gifts; there is the outward observance of the schools and the churches; there is also the version of the poets and musicians with the beautiful stoores of the guiding star and the crowded inn and the wise men from afar with their precious gifts. There is also the historic reason for gratitude that a great life was given to humanity—great in clearness of vision, purity of purpose and fidelity to conviction.

These several versions unify at this season and the message of peace and good will may be heard from every tip.

LARGE CONGREGATION WITNESS CENTRAL BAPTIST PAGEANT

The Christmas pageant, "The Birth of Christ," repeated by request, was impressively given under the direction of Mrs. C. C. Gildersleeve, at the Sunday evening service at the Central Baptist church before a congregation that filled the church. The characters were appropriately costumed and portrayed their parts exceedingly well. Sunday evening marked the fourth time that it had been presented at the church. The cast is as follows:

SAWMILL WORKER AFTER EASY MONEY IS HELD IN NEW LONDON LOCK-UP

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Dec. 22.—Aldo Bianchard, of Waterford, employed as a saw-mill worker, was arrested Saturday night by State Police Officer Peter Busch charged with attempted fraud. He was locked up at New London police headquarters and will be given a hearing in the Waterford town court Monday. In his attempt to put over his fraudulent scheme, Blanchard devised a novel plan. He had knowledge of a farmer keeping several cows in a barn which is located a considerable distance from the farm and setting in communication with a New London butcher, Blanchard represented that the cows were his property and offered them for sale. When the butcher went to the barn last night he immediately recognized the cows as the property of the farmer and not Blanchard's. The butcher, naturally, would not purchase the cows and informed Blanchard that he would defer decision in the matter for a day or two. Returning to New London the butcher communicated with the state police, informing them of Blanchard's attempt to commit fraud by selling property of which he was not the legal owner. An hour later Blanchard was arrested and locked up.

FORFEITS HIS BOND OF $200—GEO. O. WRIGHT LEAVES TOWN

George O. Wright, 54, until recently residing at 316 State street, a nurse, was not tried in the police court Saturday morning on a charge of violation of the state law prohibiting the practice of chiropody without first procuring a license, because Wright did not appear and defend the charge. His bond of $200 was forfeited. Wright was arrested three weeks ago following complaint being made to Prosecuting Attorney Max Boyer that the male nurse had taken up a side-line of chiropody, but had failed to apply for a license that would permit him to engage in that practice. The case was continued until Saturday, when it was disclosed that Wright had left the city a week or more ago.

Mrs. Michael Cummings, of Cottage street and Henry Terry, U. S. Coast Guard, were charged with breach of the peace and each was fined $15 and costs. Terry was at the home of Mrs. Cummings Friday midnight when the sound of an automobile was heard. Mrs. Cummings went to the street and an automobile was there, but it was driven away. A short time later the same incident occurred and Mrs. Cummings believed that her husband was one of the occupants of the machine. She then became possessed of the idea that her husband had gone to the residence of William Sizer, 880 Bank street and calling Sizer on the telephone, she used abusive language. Later Mrs. Cummings and Terry went to the Sizer residence and the pair gave Sizer and his wife such a tongue-lashing that complaint was made to the police. Automobile Officer Elwood Bailey and Patrolman George McCaskey went to the Sizer house, finding Terry and Mrs. Cummings there arrested them.

Reese McCorey, automobile mechanic, was charged with breach of the peace, but the charge was nolled. McCorey and Sam Fenster, the latter occupying a concession adjoining where McCorey is employed for the purpose of selling Christmas trees, engaged in a heated argument Friday afternoon and when Fenster made complaint to the police, McCorey was arrested. The argument was a senseless one and did not bring injury or harm to either the accused or the complainant, so the case was disposed of without hearing.

But four arrests were made Saturday night and none of the men will be in the police court Monday. They were sailors and were arrested on a charge of intoxication. They were turned over to the shore patrol and were taken to their respective bases for military discipline.

DISGRACEFUL CHARGE AGAINST BOND SALESMEN

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Dec. 22—Edward Say and Henry Farrar, who claim to be bond salesmen, were arrested tonight by Automobile Patrol Officer Clarence Martin and Patrolman Louis Fine charged with indecent assault. They will be given a hearing in the police court tomorrow. A sailor, who was found in the room of one of the accused men is also being held a prisoner at police headquarters as a witness against Say and Farrar. Patrolman George Perkins, who had reported off duty, was passing through State street, when he heard boisterous conversation on Union street and investigating, heard Say and Farrar accuse the sailor of smashing a window of their car, besides tampering with the wires connected with the engine. As Perkins was off duty, he communicated his information at police headquarters and Officers Martin and Pine made an investigation. Their suspicions of what had taken place proved, apparently to be well founded for they went to the Crocker House and found additional evidence, including the bluejacket occupying the room of one of the salesmen. From admissions made, the officers considered the arrest of the trio warranted.

The boy was taken to the office of a physician where the wounds were dressed, after which he was taken home.

POSTOFFICE FORCE WORKS ALL NIGHT ON HUGE MAIL

The mass of Christmas mail reached its height at the postoffice today, as was expected, for during the night the collections, both at the office and from the many mail boxes throughout the city, were such as taxed the working force to capacity. Besides the local mail, hundreds of pouches and sacks were received from trains, which caused the postoffice to resemble a storehouse rather than a distributing point of postal matter. An added force of clerks were maintained on duty throughout the night in an endeavor to handle the volume of letters, postcards and packages and throughout today, every available clerk, as well as the carriers was kept on duty in an effort to have the mail go forward as rapidly as possible. The influx of mail will continue another 48 hours and clerks and carriers will be kept constantly on duty so that it will be moved as rapidly as the facilities at hand will permit.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Palace Theatre

Betty Brown is in love with George Wayne, a man whom she respects, not knowing his true nature. She does not realize that he is nothing but a worthless philanderer, a profligate who is out to get what he can without giving any love or affection in return. Time and again he finds excuses for not marrying her, and eventually she yields to his suggestion that they go to his mountain cabin and live there together as man and wife for a summer. He urges her so eloquently that she gives in to him, believing that he is telling the truth when he says their life together will be a great experiment in sincerity, and that they will be married in the fall. Then when he leaves her, telling her that their "experiment" is over, she realizes that she has been most foully tricked. Just as he departs she seizes a gun and fires wildly. She misses.

Here in a nutshell is the opening situation of "The Love Racket," the all-talking Vitaphone drama now playing at the Palace theatre. In this opening prologue the stage is set for one of the most intense, most interesting and moving dramas ever yet adapted to the talking screen. The fact that "The Love Racket," before being made into a motion picture, took the stage world by storm under the title of "The Woman on the Jury," speaks eloquently of the worth and quality of this play.

In "The Love Racket" the secrets of the jury room are revealed to the public. Previously in court room dramas, all the audience saw was the prisoner, his counsel, the prosecutor, the judge and jury, sitting out in court. Now that we have a great play with the leading character a jurywoman, we are permitted to follow the jury behind those locked and barred doors, and there to listen while the 12 people entrusted with the fate of the accused thresh out the question of a girl's innocence. It is thrilling, superb, unusual, the kind of thing for which the talking pictures were made to order, the thing which the audible screen can express far better than the stage, and which would have been impossible in the days when the films were silent.

Following "The Love Racket" will come another great film, "Tiger Rose," starring Monte Blue, Lupe Velez, H. B. Warner, Grant Withers and others.

Don't miss tomorrow night at the Palace, it's Zenith Radio night and Christmas eve you must be there for Zenith and a great show.

Norwich Ahead of New York

Warner Bros. have selected Tiger Rose which plays at the Palace theatre of this city, as the opening feature at their new Warner theatre, New York city. This picture plays at the Norwich Palace starting Wednesday, (Christmas day), for three days.

This feature opens at New York's newest playhouse the same day as the people of Norwich, will see it. It is heralded as one of the outstanding northwest stories, based on the story by Willard Mack and produced by Belasco. Leona Ulrich, was the star, part played now by Lupe Velez, and supported by Grant Withers, Tully Marshall, H. B. Warner, Monte Blue, Rin-Tin-Tin.

HOLIDAY ILLUMINATIONS SPECIALLY ELABORATE

In proximity to the nightly illuminated Wilcox memorial fountain in Wilcox park, there has been erected by the board of engineers of the Westerly fire district an illuminated Christmas tree in the grass plot between the Central Fire Headquarters building and the county court house end of the town hall. Not only has the grass plot been decorated by the front doors of the apparatus room and the windows on the second floor of the company rooms have been illuminated with colored electric lights. The illumination will continue through Christmas week.

Windows of private homes in Westerly have been generally lighted this week and in many cases the illumination is elaborate. The co-operation of the Westerly and Pawcatuck Retail Merchants' association with the South County Public service company in placing an illuminated Christmas tree in Dixon square on the site of the burned Rhode Island hotel and the stringing of festoons of colored electric bulbs along the principal business streets has been an inducement for many property owners and occupants to do their bit towards a general Christmas illumination.

At the Broadway school, Thursday afternoon, at 2 o'clock, the kindergarten, Miss Dorris Bindloss, teacher, gave a very interesting program of songs, recitations, dramatization, interpretive rhythms, folk dances and games. HOW COFFEE-DRINKING RACE WAS DECIDED

Elliott Bennett is rated in the fishing village, the champion coffee drinker and his manager, Buster Powers, has kept him in trim at all times. Rollin Rathbun, who can hold plenty of coffee, told his rival, Bennett, they would have a race. The place was the Central lunch and Cook Harry Johnson is rated the best coffee maker from New York to Boston. Rathbun was under the watchful eye of Manager Billie Fitzgerald. The one who lost had to pay for the coffee and the winner would receive a $5 gold piece and the championship of the fishing village. The Johnson sisters, Mary and Elizabeth, had the lunch house trimmed, with blue-and-white paper and Santa Claus hanging from all the windows, and on Monday night, at 8 o'clock, with two judges, Paul Sullivan and Joe Walsh, had a special box trimmed with red, white and blue. Cook Harry Johnson, dressed in his cream of wheat suit, came from the kitchen as a crowd of 175 cheered him. He poured out 10 cups of nice smelling coffee. Slow Drinker Bennett was the first to start and Manager Powers said, "Take it easy!" The crowd gave him an ovation that shook the glasses on the shelf and broke two. The champion was going strong—had five cups put away never to return and, with a smile, claimed the first two were the hardest. The crowd was yelling to speed up; but Bennett was like a leap frog trying to out-run a deer and the five other cups of coffee were at last tucked away. Cook Johnson had ten more all lined up like duck pins in a bowling alley. Manager Powers was smiling and thought the champion would win out; but Manager Fitzgerald said, "Keep on your collar and don't go to the well too often; for my blonde-haired fellow has something up his sleeve!" The crowd was laughing over the two managers chewing about their men, they almost came to blows. But Leo MacGrath was the houseman and waited for orders. It was like pouring coffee down the sink, for Bennett was calling for more coffee and kept Cook Johnson some busy and soon had put out 7 more. Twenty cups were put away, for Scorer Red McInnis held the score card. Champion Bennett reached his 26th cup and had about all he could hold, but he put on a stretch for a few minutes and had to stop when he finished the 27th cup. The crowd sure gave the "sheik" of the fishing village a cheer for his good work, putting away 27 cups of coffee at one sitting in one hour and 6 minutes. Then Quick Thinker Rathbun was ready to beat his rival; 15 cups of coffee were facing the new-comer at the coffee game. The judges, Sullivan and Walsh, were watching the new-comer, cheering for him to win. Good Natured Rathbun took off his vest and had a broadcloth shirt of yellow on, ready to do his best. The crowd let out an Indian war cry and Rathbun sank those 15 cups like a sea gull after a fish in the harbor. Manager Fitzgerald told him to let up and take his time for a steeple-jack never hurried to the top of a flagpole. Cook Johnson put out 10 more cups of coffee for Sport-again Rathbun. He started slow, like a caterpillar trying to beat a mad turtle in a 100-yard run. The crowd was getting uneasy, wanted to get the race over. Rollin came back at them and said, "Let your feet be your guide! Never hurry an Irishman trying to beat a Scotchman champion coffee drinker!" The judges had to laugh for one was a Scotchman. Rathbun reached his 25th cup, threw up both hands like a refree. In the ring to a prizefighter who is licked. Then the judges Sullivan and Walsh, gave Champion Bennett a $5 gold piece and the honor of being the champion coffee drinker of the village of Noank. Rathbun, who failed to outdrink Bennett paid $2.70 for coffee, but he was game and the crowd could not help from giving him an ovation as he put on his vest and claw-hammer coat. Shires, the Great, known as Art, the White Sox baseball player, could not have got any better cheering.

Manager Fitzgerald wants another coffee drinking race in about two weeks and Manager Powers, for the champion, signed the papers, at the same place and both coffee drinkers shook hands and went away with a smile.

SHOWERS OF NECKTIES, EGGS PIES POUR IN ON MARKETS

ST. LOUIS—(AP)—It's a dull week when Ray Gutting doesn't get a new necktie, several dozen fresh eggs, or or some home-made pumpkin pie for his broadcasting efforts.

Such are the tokens of gratitude that flood his mail as a result of his popularizing "play by play" accounts of grain market conditions from KMOX.

Directly from the St. Louis Merchants' exchange, Gutting announces market changes to an audience of farmers, millers and housewives throughout the mid-west. He has more than 26,000 letters, fan mail of three years accumulation, as proof that radio has forged a link of vital information between the grain market and the farm.

For 65 minutes a day, nine periods of a few minutes each, Gutting translates world market conditions into language that every farmer can understand. From 19 years' experience in the grain exchange, he interprets price fluctuations.

Gutting is convinced that no audience could be more appreciative than his rural listeners. Everything from cough syrup to pork sausage, pocket knives and dressed chickens comes to his desk from farmers who like his programs.

"I don't think I'll have to buy a necktie for the next ten years," Gutting says.

Three years of broadcasting market reports have not lessened Gutting's enthusiasm for his work. One of the many visitors inquired how he managed to get a thrill after so long a time. Gutting handed him this telegram:

"Markets coming in fine. How about a chicken dinner with us next Sunday?"

"What's your business?"
"Moving pictures."
"Actor, eh?"
"No; interior decorator.'—Exchange.

REPORTS SHOW FAIRLY SATISFACTORY VOLUME OF HOLIDAY RETAIL TRADE

NEW YORK, Dec. 22—(AP)—Reports of a large and fairly satisfactory volume of holiday retail trade, despite unfavorable weather conditions over some areas, and signs of increasing activity in some of the automotive manufacturing centers were conspicuous features of the business developments of the past week.

The year end slackening of manufacturing activity and of wholesale trade penetrated further. Steel mill operations hovered close to 60 per cent of capacity. Considerable hesitancy in making new commitments has appeared, pending more definite indications of the trend after the turn of the year. Save in retail trade, this period is normally slack, owing to the retarding influences of the year end inventories.

The volume of retail trade was generally believed to be in the neighborhood of that of a year ago, which is considerably better than had been expected in many quarters, in view of the autumn crash of the securities markets. Reports were variable, and a definite measure is not yet available. Among the less favorable aspects were indications of fairly general curtailment of purchase of luxury items, and numerous cases of price cutting to move stocks.

Prospects for the New Year are enhanced by the extremely low level of manufacturers' stocks. Discussing this aspect of the steel situation, Iron Age stated, "mills believe that customers will be forced to enter the market in January, possibly in sufficient numbers to create a rebound in demand commensurate with the recent slump in buying."

Speculative markets generally were depressed during the week, including the grain and cotton markets. The department of agriculture, however, estimated the value of the country's crop at $65,000,000 above last year's. Cotton mills were reported to be taking on large supplies of staples for the early part of the year impelled by the present low price level.

The freight car loadings figures for the first week of the month were less confusing than those of the previous week, which were influenced by the Thanksgiving holiday. Total loadings were 47,948 cars under the like week of last year, but 99,149 above the same week of 1927.

A slight tightening of credit appeared during the week, reflecting the holiday currency requirements and continued outflow of gold. A further ease is expected after the turn of the year, however, and in the meantime, the federal reserve is effectively stabilizing the money market through purchases of bills and government securities.

French Women Ask For No Stairs And Houses Minus Dust Catchers

And she could walk to Manchuria with the useless steps she takes for 40 years in the average Paris home.

She speaks through Mlle. Paulette Bernege, president of the League for Household Organization, in demanding the thousands of houses to be built under a vast government aid programme be built "for" women, with efficiency in mind, instead of "by men and for the comfort of men."

Many conveniences known to the American woman are suggested by Mademoiselle Bernege as a good investment, because a happy, rested woman can prevent most family shipwrecks and an efficient home and wife would increase the efficiency of a husband.

She has calculated the average French kitchen center is 25 feet from the dining table, when it need be only seven or eight feet. The bathroom she would have placed between rooms and convenient to all.

She would build bungalows, to eliminate stairways, which she thinks a woman's worst trial. She would abolish projecting mop boards, cornices and the many physical decorations of French walls and ceilings, all dust-catchers.

Wherever possible she would have washable surfaces, with no copper—the pride of the old French home—and as few angles.

In kitchen and bathroom, and laundry if there is one, she would have all surfaces washable and the floors and lower part of walls of some composition so concave surfaces would replace corners and angles of floor and walls.

Further than this, a new idea in the ordinary home, she argues for inclined floors in the "washable" rooms, so they might be flushed with a steady stream of water from the upper edge, the water running into a floor-trap.

All metal would be rust-proof and windows would be designed for easy claning, eliminating small panes.

Quite revolutionary here is the proposal to have all pipes and conduits concealed, and in one channel easily accessible. Furthermore, she would anticipate future increase in the use of all public services and leave room for a refrigerating pipe as a thing sure to come.

BIZARRE BEACH TOGS OPEN FLORIDA SEASON

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Dec. 22—(AP)—Winter beach attire has to be as far from ethodox as possible to be orthodox this season, first strollers on the Florida sands indicate.

Styles range from the usual suntan backs to coolie coats in blazing colors and bizarre pleated trousers.

Wide trousers head the list of early season eye-openers. Some are are in the modernistic manner, but most depend on startling color contrasts for effect. They are worn mostly with coolie coats and are acceptable for window shopping wear.

Wrap-around skirts and trousers are being worn with deep-cut suntan backs. They permit regulation of tan as desired at the moment and fall naturally into flowing lines. Tucked in blouses are featured in some designs.

Wooden and sponge jewelry, in anklets, necklaces and beads, is in great favor, and as new designs appear will probably increase.

Decorations Of Fruit And Toys Attractive On Christmas Table

It can have any sort of seasonable decoration that the hostess desires. A bowl of fruit, with overhanging bunches of grapes and surrounded with red tapers, is a simple but effective arrangement.

A tiny toy village is appropriate where there are children in the family. It is not hard to make, because of the number of small toys available about the house. A mirror used to simulate a lake upon which are small ducks and geese, and the whole surrounded by miniature evergreen trees, cotton snow and showered with artificial, sparkling snow, makes a pretty arrangement.

Bouquets or flowers are always attractive and a potted pepper plant, poinsettia or a low bowl of holly fitting table centers.

[illegible] the dinner is not the only [illegible]. Deliciously flavored Christ[illegible] cakes and cookies contribute [illegible] the festivities.

Various candied fruits should be prepared to go into these cakes. Figs, dates, currants and raisins help keep the foods moist, and make them suitable for long distance shipping.

Following are some popular confections:

Fig Sticks.

(A chewy, waxy bar)

3 eggs, 1 cup sugar, 1 teaspoon vanilla, 1-8 teaspoon salt, 1 cup flour, 1 teaspoon baking powder, 1-2 cup nuts, 1 cup chopped figs.

Beat the eggs and add the sugar. Mix well and add the rest of the ingredients, mixing just enough to hold the ingredients together. Pour into a shallow pan which has been fitted with a waxed paper. Bake for 30 minutes in a moderate oven. Cut in bars and, if desired, roll in confectioner's sugar.

Date Hermits.

(Moist, tasty cookies)

1 cup fat (half butter), 2 cups dark brown sugar, 3 eggs, 4 tablespoons sour cream, 1 teaspoon vanilla, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, 1 teaspoon nutmeg, 1-2 teaspoon mace, 1-4 teaspoon salt, 1 cup chopped dates, 1-2 cup nuts, broken, 3 1-2 cups flour, 1 teaspoon soda.

Cream the fat and sugar. Add the rest of the ingredients and drop portions from the end of a spoon on greased baking sheets. Space 3 inches. Bake for 12 minutes.

The Christmas dinner itself is, of course, the most important. Here is a typical menu:

Fruit Cocktail
Roast Turkey Candied Sweet Potatoes
Giblet Gravy Oyster Dressing
Buttered Rolls
Creamed Cabbage Cranberry Dressing
Head Lettuce and Russian Dressing
Plum Pudding Lemon Sauce
Coffee

WOMAN IN LIFE AND IN THE KITCHEN

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

If it is desired to keep the yeast cake for any length of time bury it in meal.

Soft pickles are usually the result of using a brine which is too weak.

Bread will be soggy if placed in the bread box before it has thoroughly cooled.

If ash or garbage cans are given a coat of paint on the inside before using, they will last twice as long.

Tea should not steep over five minutes and water used to make tea should always be freshly boiled.

Cut lemons can be preserved by smearing the cut surface with the yolk or white of an egg, then setting it aside to dry.

Pumpkin pies will bake a rich golden brown if a tablespoon of molasses is added to the filling for each pie.

When a cake sticks to the pan, dip the bottom and sides of the pan in hot water and the cake will be loosened.

In making cake, sour milk may be used the same as sweet milk, if one-third teaspoon of soda is added to each cup of sour milk.

Colored glass beads mixed in the pebbles in which bulbs are planted add much to the attractiveness of the bulb bowl.

In order to drive a nail or screw without splitting the wood first push the nail or screw through hard soap, or dip it in melted paraffin.

Instead of beating the egg yolks and whites together when making a pumpkin pie, beat the whites stiff and fold them into the mixture just before baking.

Never hang pictures below the line of vision. It is always better to look up to a picture. Common sense, of course, will guard against hanging them too high.

FOODS THAT GO TOGETHER

Baked halibut fillets garnished with minced parsley and lemon, slices; rice, corn on cob, cucumber salad with cream dressing and peach shortcake.

Veal scallop, mashed potatoes, butter beans, lettuce salad with radishes and watermelon.

FROM ITALY

Fascinating little cruet-stands, holding jugs for oil and vinegar, are of the colorful majolica ware that is so decorative for small apartments or country homes.

GELATIN AND WATER

Use a pitcher in which to mix the gelatin and water. Then, if the molds are small, it is an easy matter to pour the gelatin liquid into them without waste.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY

If you alternate hot and cold compresses or use hot and cold vinegar on a bump the minute body falls down, the wound will not discolor.

The lines which have formed under your eyes are due to soft tissues. Dip pieces of absorbent cotton in cold salt water. Apply these frequently during the day, allowing them to remain on for ten minutes at a time.

If the finger tips are brittle soak them for ten minutes in olive oil or sweet almond oil before going to bed. Warm the oil and place it in a cup—enough to cover the finger tips and nails. Or you may insert cold cream under the nail and allow it to remain there during the night.

The glycerine and rosewater preparation for the hands is a good one, one-third glycerine to two-thirds rosewater. Plain water may be substituted for the rosewater and five drops of salicylic acid to two gills of the mixture will improve it. Wipe off after using. Use no more than the five drops of salicylic acid.

PAPER LAMP SHADES

Handsome lamp shades may be made from common brown wrapping paper, which is given a parchment appearance by rubbing it with amber colored wax soaked in alcohol.

HOT-WATER BAGS DE LUXE

The conventional hot-water bag now comes in as many different colors that it is hard to make a choice. Blue, green, violet, rose are among the many offered.

MANICURE SET

A most convenient manicure set consists of four metal knives, files, etc., each one with a different colored enamel handle. These four are kept in a small nickel container mounted upon a square glass stand.

FLOWER SPRINKLERS

If you have flowers in your house, invest in one of the cute little sprinklers with ridiculously long spout. They are really sensible for they prevent the water from dripping when you go from one plant to another.

PRETTY RADIATORS

You can achieve another magazine table by utilizing your radiator top. Have a board made to cover the top of the radiator and put cleats under it to hold secure. Paint the same color as your woodwork. Sometimes cottage houses can have little cretonne flounces down from the board to make a really attractive table effect.

SEAT STICK UMBRELLA

England has invented a neat umbrella which is also a seat-stick. It has a leather hammock seat and a metal stem covered with pigskin, crocodile or lizard, which unscrews at the top to reveal a silk umbrella. It is a novelty which will be much appreciated by folks who follow the horses in any and all kinds of weather.

DICTATES OF FASHION

Party frocks for those under 25 use the puff sleeve occasionally with great success.

If you have a smart winter suit with longish coat match the color in a crepe de chine frock, wear with both, with both.

Dahlia—which is a soft plum shade—is favored for formal afternoon wear, with a stronger appeal to the matron than her daughter.

Gloves for evening wear are revived this season. Long kid and lambskin are popular in white and colors.

Hats trimmed with bits of flat fur can be matched with clever scarfs of the same sleek fur. Or the furred hat may be chosen to match a fur bow or border on frock or coat.

New purses are elegant, both in fabric and sleek shapes. A black antelope one has octagonal cut, in ebony fastening and diamond monogramed clasp.

NECK-PIECE PROTECTION

One's handsome neckpiece deserves care and protection when not in use, and so long slim case of Argentine cloth, which fits exactly and is meant to hang up, is indeed a find.

UNUSUAL BRACELET

A larger dog, also pearl-studded, line gold links, separated with three tiny gold dogs studded with peals. A larger dog, also pear-studded, tiny gold dogs studded with pearls, forms a scarf-holder.

NEW HANDKERCHIEF CASE

A dainty new handkerchief-case is of pale pink linen bound with French blue silk cord, very small and dainty. The top and the flap of this square envelope case is embroidered in small gayly colored flowers.

PUTTY COLOR

Putty colored satin, flat crepe, georgette and washable silks fashion some of the newest separate blouses. This color is considered excellent for wear with wine reds, the deep, penetrating greens and the unusual purply shades of the season.

MONOGRAMED BAGS

Monograms are smart as can be on new bags. The chic thing is to have tiny initials simple as can be but squarish or oval in design, on the handle or strap or fastening, either in silver, or gold. One black crepe de chine Chinese bag has yellow and green initials.

HIGHER NECKLINES

Many of the chic afternoon gowns, with the approved silhouette, introduce higher necklines. A black flat crepe frock uses a cowl collar of black, with two-inch flesh colored grosgrain ribbon standing up inside this collar in a pert, youthful manner.

LAUNDRY HINTS

Your clothes will be snowy white if they are soaked over night in water containing a small amount of cream of tartar.

Plain ivory or toilet articles may be cleaned by rubbing with a damp soft cloth, which has been dipped in salt.

To clean combs place them in a solution made of a teaspoon of soda dissolved in a pint of boiling water, then brush between the teeth of the comb.

Crocheted and knitted shawls should be washed in warm soapsuds. Rinse them twice in warm water and spread on grass or a flat surface to dry.

When sprinkling tablecloths, an even dampness can be given the linen by dipping half the cloth into boiling water, wringing as dry as possible and folding the wet side onto the dry side. Roll and wrap in a towel for two or three hours.

WASHING RUGS

You can wash Oriental rugs if you use fine white soap and scrub them while they lie flat. Hang on the line and rinse with a hose.

LINOLEUM CARE

Since soap is hard on linoleum, if you use two tablespoonfuls of paraffin in a pan of water it will clean the floor thoroughly without soap. Varnishing linoleum is another saver.

PLAITS

Plaits should be ironed down from the hand holding them and folded in line with the grain of the goods. Then they will always hang in straight lines.

WASHED WOODWORK

Use warm suds and a soft brush to wash woodwork. Wipe it dry. When it is thoroughly dry go over it with a damp cloth wiped out of oil.

BUTTON BOX

Keep a jelly jar near the washing machine and put into it any buttons that may come off in the washer or wringer. Sometimes it is hard to match buttons, and we are grateful that we have saved the ones that have come off.

STORAGE SPACE

The housekeeper today does not store great quantities of food; the telephone and delivery trucks have done away with the necessity. In consequence, the butler's pantry, food closets and pantries are poor investments in the small home, just occupying valuable space and requiring needless steps and work for the housekeeper. Think well before you plan so much storage space in the home.

CONCERNING WOMEN

A woman is allowed to serve on a jury in Louisiana, if she so requests.

Woman doctors, most of them recent products of the schools, are fairly common in Brazil.

One-third of the industrial employees in Soviet Russia are women, and many industrial gangs are bossed by feminine leaders.

The W. C. T. U., in Indiana, has been urged to campaign against bare legs and jazz dancing just as strenuous as it fights liquor.

Empress Nagako is recognized as one of Japan's most beautiful women. She is especially noted for her clear soprano voice and the verses she has written.

For 15 years Mrs. Thomas A. Edison, wife of the celebrated inventor, has been director of the Playground and Recreation Association of America.

PAPER YOUR DOORS

Sometimes a room is so cut up with doors that you despair of decorating it to advantage. This is particularly true of a little hall, or one of the inner rooms of a city apartment. Have you ever thought of papering the center panel of the doors with the same paper that you have on the walls? This not only lends continuity to the walls, but in the proper wall paper is used it makes the dark room lighter.

GILT FRAMES

This is the time of year to recondition your gilt framed mirror, picture frames or furniture. Get the pure banana oil and gold powder and mix it yourself if you want permanent results. If possible, gild your things either in front of an open window or even on the porch so the odor will not sicken you.

RECIPES

Delicious Dessert Cook half a pound of dried apricots with one and one-half cups of granulated sugar until rich and sirupy, then cool. Roll several graham crackers fine. Fill sherbet glasses with a layer of the crackers, then apricots, alternating and topping with whipped cream. This recipe makes six generous servings.

Novel Salad: An unusual pineapple salad is made from slices of canned pineapple put together sandwich style, with an inner layer of cream cheese seasoned with paprika and celery seed and moistened with cream. When serving these are cut in triangular wedges and two placed point to point on a long narrow leaf of romaine. A small mound of chopped nuts or several segments of orange fill the opposite spaces and the leaf is dotted with mayonnaise dusted with paprika.

Guiding Your Child

By Mrs. Agnes Lyne

Too Much

By Mrs. Agnes Lyne

Since Jean and Faith were sisters and so close together in age it was inevitable that comparison should be made between them.

Jean at 12 was a plain little girl who did average work in the seventh grade. Faith, in the sixth grade, not quite 11, was pretty and vivacious, while her school work was so good that she was frequently singled out for praise and special marks of honor.

The two little girls got along rather well together, everything considered.

Then Jean was ill for three months with rheumatic fever and when she got back to school she found Faith sitting in the same class room with her. Faith did her usual easy best. Jean, not yet quite recovered from the effects of her illness and feeling miserably the humiliation of having a younger sister catch up with her at school did work below even her own standard of mediocrity.

Next term Faith received a double promotion. This proved the final blow to Jean. Plodding her way a half grade behind her younger sister she now seemed to her teachers to be stupid.

At home she was listless, silent, unresponsive. Her parents, distressed, at last began to open their eyes.

They hit upon the expensive but imperative expedient of sending both girls to different boarding schools where in a new environment in which there could be no comparisons with a bright and charming sister, Jean began to take an active interest in work and play.

Situations such as this, less acute perhaps, but serious enough to the children who suffer under them are found in many homes. Every child needs a chance to shine in something and when that is denied him, it is no wonder if his conduct reflects his feeling of hopelessness and defeat.

PLANES RUSH MODES TO RIVIERA RESORTS

All the evening dresses going south are ankle long or onger.

Legs must not show after 8 o'clock, says Paris of the minute.

Skirts which hang four to six inches below the knee are correct up to 5 o'clock. From 5 to 8 thers is a transition period when women may decide for themselves.

But after 8 o'clock there is no alternative. Skirts tumble, in straight drops, from the waistline to the toes.

The last evening dresses to leave the Rue de la Paix workshops nearly all have even hemlines.

Many tulle dresse have tires of ruffles beginning below the curve of the hips and continuing to be hemline which just clears the floor at around.

FREIGHTING BY HEAD LENDS WOMEN GRACE

OVAR, Portugal, Dec. 22—(AP)—The athletic and graceful carriage ofa the women of this fishing town is attribted to their being trained from childhood to carry heavy weights upon their heads.

These healthy women who laugh at modern sports develop wonderful physiques. Carrying heavy wicker baskets laden with fish on their heads, they walk straight, their faces hardly betraying a sign of physical exertion.

Portuguese women seldom carry parcels under their arms. Water jugs, baskets, and all other forms of baggage are carried upon their heads. It has been an object of amazement to tourists to see these women keep poise in the thick of the day's traffic.

PARIS ADDS A BEAD TO CHOKER NECKLACES

PARIS, Dec. 22—(AP)—Necklaces which dangle in the soup are no longer a la mode. Tight choker collars also are out of date.

The chick jeweled collar of the moment is a single strand, preferably of crystal with several bright colored stones not smaller than the thumb nail set in the front. The beads should be just long enough to lie loosely at the base of the throat.

MODERN NOTES IN THE BUILT-IN BOOKCASE

For the den or a living room corner.

By Elsie Drew Kennedy

For the average home, as well as establishments of the most elaborate type, luxurious decorative styles have been developed to the nth degree of individualism.

With mass production of modernistic furniture, the timid devotee of the cult modern is encouraged in a flair for the modern. At moderate prices one may obtain beautifully designed furniture as well as fabrics and decorative ornaments, brand new in line and feeling.

It is interesting to note that modernism in furniture can trace its origin to some of the outstanding designers of the chief former periods. Thus we find Chippendale and Sheraton vital contributors to the present conception of decorative art.

The flat lines of the Chinese Chippendale are readily associated with the urge for flat surfaces in highly polished effects, while Sheraton by his feeling for fineness of line and form provided a rich suggestive basis for modernistic design.

The accompanying sketch could well represent a small den, or perhaps a section of a large room wherein perfect symmetry of line and proportion is achieved in the modern manner.

A rigid suppression of unnecessary design is at once evident in the various units, particularly in the ingeniously designed bookcases that flank the couch. The built-in sections, reaching to the ceiling, are simple affairs that are open on two sides, thus affording a striking effect.

The graceful arch-sections supply a harmonizing detail to the round mirror on the back wall. The cupboard at the extreme top is ideal for storing magazines and other things.

At the left in the sketch appears a desk or table—it answers equally well as either—with deep cupboards in the bottom sections and a double drawer at the top. Through a clever arrangement of the top, an extension leaf transforms it into a broad table. Note the interesting mirror directly above, with unusual frame sections of a fluted metal at either side. This is particularly important in a small room where a well placed mirror lends an illusion of greater proportions.

WOMAN SEEKS GERM AT ROOT OF TRACHOMA

ROLLO, Mo., Dec. 22—(AP)—In a makeshift laboratory here, Dr. Ida A. Bengston is seeking the germ causing trachoma, that contagious granular inflammation of the eyelids which has blinded or disabled thousands.

The United States trachoma hospital and research laboratory in Rollo, the base of trachoma study in America, is the site of Dr. Bengston's research. Her work is part of a campaign to stamp out a disease.

Already her research has resulted in a major advance toward the goal of ophthalmologists—discovery of the cause of trachoma. By inoculating guinea pigs and experimental cultivation of Lindner "initial badies," she had shortened the path toward finding the elusive organism.

Now Dr. Bengston is trying to isolate the trachoma germ by making inoculations from patients to young rhesus monkeys.

DR. IDA A. BENGSTON

Under the direction of Dr. A. S. Rumreich the federal hospital here is conducting the first epidemiological survey that embraces not only details of specific cases but the environment, ancestry and medical history of patients. The investigation covers several counties in the Ozarks country of southern Missouri.

Field and clinical work already has proved that trachoma can be arrested. In Missouri alone, where trachoma has caused 637 cases of blindness and 20,- cases of disability due to partial loss of vision, treatment has effected an appreciable decrease in the number of sufferers.

TEMPER XMAS TOYS TO TINY TOTS

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22—(AP)—Many a little girl will receive a strongly made doll with painted hair and fixed eyes for Christmas this year as the result of the efforts of a group of college women.

Mothers in 30 cities have been educated in the selection of proper toys for children through a program conducted by the American Association of University women.

They have found that a lovely, breakable life-size baby doll with open and shut eyes is wasted on little Mary if she is only 2 or 3 years old. The same doll will be much more appreciated when she is 5 or 9.

"Giving the best toys first encourages extravagant ideas and sets wrong standards," says Dr. Kathryn McHale, acting director of the association. "We should return so far as possible to the simplicity of our pioneer grandparents, who got great joy out of little things when children.

"Moreover children of the present day get just as much joy out of simple things if they are left to their own choice."

Dr. McHale says that childish instinct is usually unerring and if left to itself a child will choose the toy which holds the most educational value for its particular age.

Too often it is the parent who chooses a useless toy because it is expensive, makes a loud noise or is a bright color.

HIGH PRICED HAIR TRICKS COPIED BY FRENCH MAIDS

PARIS, Dec. 22—(AP)—Since complicated curls came into style with fashino's feminine slaves, smart French women are taking their maids to the hair dresser's with them so that the work of the high-priced wizards of the curling iron can be duplicated at home.

Smuggling the maid into the hair dresser's has became almost as difficult as getting the little dressmaker couturier whom she copies.

Realizing that their work is watched, some of the moset serious hair-dressing houses have opened classes where ladies' maids are taught for a price how to care for their mistress' curls between visits to the professional.

Your Health And Brain

By Dr. Leland B. Alford

Shingles

Everyone knows about and is interested in shingles.

The layman gets an inkling of its unusual features as shown by the legend that if the eruption extends all the way around the body death will result.

Furthermore, shingles differs from most skin diseases in that it seems to carry no implication of uncleanliness.

Shingles doubtless stimulates the popular imagination because the eruption extends just half way around the body, stopping exactly at the midline both in front and behind. It is also interesting to the physician, but for the different reason that it demonstrates how intimately the nervous system is concerned in the activity of every part of the body.

Shingles, scientifically named herpes zoster, is in reality a disorder of the sensory nerves. The sensory nerves, which respond to feeling in the skin, run from the midline in front backward to enter the canal in the spinal column. There they join a little knob or "ganglion" from which other nerve fibers leave to enter the spinal cord and pass upward to the brain.

In shingles the site of the inflammation is the little knob or ganglion within the spinal canal. The eruption, which consists of blisters on a red base, is not caused directly by the inflammation; it occurs because the sensory nerves supplying that particular part of the skin are put out of commission at the ganglion.

The sensory nerves, besides carrying feeling of touch, pain and the like, exert some influence on the skin that keeps it healthy. If a sensory nerve is cut the skin it supplies becomes red, shiny and thin. If the skin is injured an ulcer results and will not heal until the nerve grows back again. Shingles is ordinarily an infectious (not contagious) disease with a germ of its own.

Should shingles extend all around the body there is no reason to believe it would result fatally.

STIFF DRESS AFFICTS YOUNG LONDON SOCIETY

LONDON, Dec. 22—(AP)—The elaborate fancy dress balls here this winter are providing a terror for their participants.

The great aim in young London society today is to produce a statuary effect in fancy dress. To this end "American cloth" costumes are worn that hang in stiff, shiny folds. More alarming still, faces and bare arms are covered in a thick coating of white powder which is then treated with a special varnish.

The unfortunate masquerader, with features stiff in a plaster like mask and limbs hampered by the heavy cloth, then dances a modern fox trot as best he or she can.

NOTED WOMEN EXPLORERS PLAN TO VISIT CAPITAL

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22—(AP)—Adventurous women who have scaled high mountain peaks and hacked their way through jungles will be in Washington this winter.

They are members of the Society of Women Geographers. Among those to be here for lectures or for visits are Mildred Stapley Byne, explorer, artist, writer and authority on Spanish architecture; Elizabeth Dickey, who has made extended explorations in Brazil; Douglass, special on drawings and paintings of eastern Asia, and Alice Tisdale Hobart, specialist on central China.

Only women who have done distinctive work in geography are eligible to membership in the society.

FASHION STRESSES SLEEVELESS FROCKS

PARIS, Dec. 22—(AP)—There are no sleeves in many of the smartest afternoon dresses shown in the advance spring collections designed for women who are going to the Riviera or Palm Beach.

Shoulder capes which reach half way to the elbow characterize the silk afternoon dresses. Wool and wash silk dresses for sport are sleeveless, with short jackets of wool or duvetyn of matching color.

RADIO STATION TO SEND TWO PROGRAMS AT ONCE

LONDON—(AP)—A high powered radio station, which will transmit two separate programs simultaneously on different wavelengths, is to be erected at Slaithwaite, Yorkshire, by the British Broadcasting company.

The station will have two transmitters each with power of 40,000 watts. There will be two aerials.

It isn't fair to judge a women's aims by what she hits.

CHRISTMAS EXERCISES AT GREENEVILLE SCHOOL

Owing to the overcrowded conditions existing in the Greeneville school which has necessitated the division of the assembly hall into three class rooms, the usual joint exercises formerly held in the hall have been out of the question for the past three years. However, Friday afternoon each classroom was transformed into a miniature assembly hall for the presentation of the Christmas program which each room prepared.

As if indicative of the sense of loss of the assembly hall, the pupils entered into the spirit of the day more than ever this year. Christmas trees graced several rooms, with decorations made by the pupils and in addition, Christmas vases of an unique design were a feature in most of the rooms.

The kindergarteners, as usual, held their exercises in their room, the morning and afternoon classes combined for the occasion. ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theatre

If you went to college—if you didn't go to college—if your boy or your girl is going to college—there's no reason in the world why you shouldn't get a peep behind the dormitory and fraternity house doors and see just what goes behind it all. That's easy, even if you're not a Sigma Chi—just go up to the Broadway and join in the fun in "So This Is College." Metro's great all-talking picture of real college life, filmed at the University of Southern California. The cast comprises the entire student body of the university, headed by such fun makers as Cliff Edwards (Ukelele Ike), Bob Montgomery, Elliott Nugent, Polly Moran, Lee Shumway, and—hold your breath, boys!—the sweetest little college vamp ever screen, a brand new "baby star" fresh from high school, in her first picture—and a wow!—she's Clara Bow and Nancy Carroll rolled into one, and plenty to spare! The story is one of the fastest collegiate yarns yet screened, and kept the Saturday and Sunday crowds on the edge of their seats every minute. Thrills, comedy galore, whoopee parties—and how—and a football game for your life—between those giants, Leland Stanford and U. S. C., filmed in the gigantic Los Angeles stadium before a milling crowd of 100,000 madly excited fans. On the surrounding bill are also the Paramount Sound News, "Noah's Lark," a howling funny talkartoon, and "Mexicana," a Gus Edwards Revue in natural colors with some wonderful dancing and music, and the gorgeous M-G-M ensemble of beautiful girls, talented singers, dancers and musicians. This little revue also packs plenty of comedy, completing a pleasing pre-holiday program.

"Y" SENIORS TAKE CLOSE GAME FROM WESTPORT IN STATE LEAGUE GAME

The Y Seniors met the stiffest opposition of the present state Y league campaign in Westport Y Saturday night at the Y gym but managed to scrape out a 34-27 victory by means of a last minute spectacular basket by Capt. Roland Harris. The absence of Aubrey Brown, high scoring forward, told on the local team and turned what would have been a fairly easy victory for the Demarest men into a rip and tuck battle that had the spectators off their seats in the last quarter.

The Seniors started off as if they would win in a walk and had a real edge all through the first half. However, soon after the third period got under way the visitors started to creep up, and, with some sensational shooting went ahead just before the quarter ended, 24 to 23.

The last quarter was full of hard and speedy basketball. Westport scored with a basket to send the count up to 24-23. Tommy Lynch slipped in one from the side, and brought the score up to 26-25. A foul by the Westport boys put them two points ahead again but Les Pingree matched this with a free-shot, about four minutes from the close and set the count at 27 to 26.

The teams slashed up and down the floor for the next two minutes that opened like half-hours until Harris let a long one go from mid-floor and to the side that swished through cleanly and the game was really over right then. The Seniors took complete charge of the situation from then on, giving the Westport team no chance to get set for a shot.

The Seniors played a nice game, considering that Brown was not on the floor but in Toledo, where he is visiting his parents for the holidays. In the first half the Seniors played a close guarding game, keeping the Westport shooters in a frenzy trying to get in position to shoot. The Seniors also were a bit more fortunate with their shots. In the second half Westport was a new team and tossed in several long shots, whereas they had missed some easier ones in the first two quarters.

This was the third win in as many league starts for the locals but Saturday their winning streak will be put to a severe test, when Bridgeport Y comes here. Harris and Pingree of the Seniors and Bell of Westport were the stars.

In the preliminary the Army team, sometimes known as the Y seconds, lost a tough game to Battery E of Westerly, 13 to 12. Red Fagan of the locals and Sedgrico of Westerly were high scorers.

PIRATES LOSE TO THE DETROIT COUGARS

DETROIT, Dec. 23—(AP)—The Pittsburgh Pirates tumbled farther into the cellar of the National Hockey league here tonight when they took a 6 to 1 beating at the hands of the Detroit Cougars.

A total of five penalties gave evidence of the game's slow action. All of the penalties were charged to the Pittsburgh team, four of them specifically to Roger Smith, Pirate defense man.

Ebbie Goodfellow and Herbie Lewis, Detroit wingmen, boosted their scoring averages with two goals apiece. Lewis also was given credit for an assist. Bobby Connors and Captain Hec Noble got the other Detroit goals while Hibb Milks, Pirate center, scored the lone Pirate tally.

Pittsburgh's passing attack was ragged throughout the play and the Pirate defense crumbled after the first period. Two of the Detroit goals were scored while Smith was absent on one of his frequent penalties.

Tigers Go Into Lead

NEW HAVEN, Dec. 22.—(AP)— The Boston Tigers jumped from third place into the lead in the Canadian-American Hockey league tonight, when they defeated the New Haven Eagles, 4 to 3, after one overtime period.

Two goals scored in the third period by New Haven, one with eight seconds to go, forced the teams into an overtime period. Mills scored the winning tally for the Tigers.

WAGNER TO BE NEW MANAGER OF RED SOX

It was no surprise to baseball in general and Boston in particular, when "Heinie" was chosen, Since they were rookies Carrigan and Wagner were firm friends and it was a ten to one shot that if Carrigan had anything to do with the naming of his successor that Wagner would be his choice. Then, too, President Bob Quinn and Wagner were together all during the recent big league meetings in New York.

Carrigan's policies regarding the team will undoubtedly continue, as both "Lewiston Bill" and Wagner have been closely associated throughout their sports careers. In 1906, Wagner came to Boston as shortstop from Newark and at the same time Carrigan hopped here from Worcester, where he had been catching for Holy Cross college.

Wagner's appearance here in 1906 was not his first appearance in the big show. Twice before the Giants had picked him off the sandlots around Gotham and tried him out.

When Carrigan retired after managing the two time Red Sox championship team in 1916, he recommended Wagner to succeed him but Harry Frazee chose Jack Barry. Carrigan returned to baseball in 1927 and immediately talked Wagner into joining him. Wagner was a smart coach and during his earlier days with the Sox was credited with having developed Everett Scott, one of baseball's greatest shortstops.

After being signed up, Wagner lost no time in getting a "right eye" by telephoning Jack McCallister at Columbus, Ohio, who managed the Cleveland Indians in 1927. McCallister accepted a chance to join "Heinie" in his work here and the two will start immediately to form their plans for bringing the Sox back up baseball's ladder.

FIELDS-THOMPSON BOUT SLATED FOR THE GARDEN

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—(AP)—Tom McArdle, matchmaker for Madison Square Garden, announced tonight that articles have been signed for a 15-round championship bout between Jackie Fields, welterweight titleholder, and Young Jack Thompson, San Francisco Negro, here, Jan. 3.

Fields, who won the title from Joe Dundee at Detroit in July of this year, holds two decisions over Thompson. The San Francisco Negro leaped into fame in September, 1928, when he knocked out Dundee in a non-titular fight. Dundee saved his title on that occasion by forcing Thompson to come in a pound or so overweight.

Chicago promoters have been trying to stage a Fields-Thompson bout but have been handicapped by a state law prohibiting "mixed" bouts. This rule was passed after the last Fields-Thompson match which resulted in a riot in which one man was killed and several injured.

DEMPSEY TURNS DOWN THE FIELDS-THOMPSON GO

CHICAGO, Dec. 22.—(AP)—The welterweight boxing championship contest between Jackie Fields, titleholder, and Young Jack Thompson, San Francisco Negro, booked today for January in Madison Square Garden, New York, was abandoned by Promoter Jack Dempsey, who had signed the fighters for Jan. 17 in the Chicago Coliseum, because of feeling against "mixed" bouts in Chicago.

Dempsey announced he had closed for the bout early this month, but gave it up when it was indicated the Illinois state athletic commission would not rescind a rule against championship matches involving whites and Negroes. The rule was adopted following a riot during the last meeting of Fields and Thompson in the Coliseum last March. A Negro and a white spectator started battling over the merits of the fighters in the ring, and a near-panic, in which one man was trampled to death and several others were seriously injured, ensued.

MEMPHIS TIGERS CLAIM PRO FOOTBALL TITLE

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Dec. 22.—(AP) — The Clarence Saunders Tigers, of Memphis, tonight laid claims to professional football supremacy of the nation by virtue of a 16 to 6 victory over Red Grange and his Chicago Bears on the heels of a 20 to 6 trouncing given the Green Bay Wisconsin Packers, champions of the National Football league.

Today's victory for the Tigers was in retaliation for a 39 to 19 defeat administered the Memphis team a month ago. The loss to the Bears was the only defeat of the season for the Tigers.

Likewise the Tigers' win over the Packers a week ago was the only defeat suffered by the Green Bay eleven this year.

Chaca Wins Marathon

VALLEJO, Cal., Dec. 22.—(AP)—Harry Chaca, of the Los Angeles Athletic club, won the pre-Olympic national marathon today over a 26.2 mile course from Fairfield to Vallejo. Chaca's time was 2 hours, 41 minutes and 25 seconds.

Falcaro Leads Scribner

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—(AP)—Joe Falcaro, of New York, led Joe Scribner, of Detroit, by 157 pins at the end of the fifth block of their six-block world's championship bowling match here today. The score for the first five blocks—50 games—was: Falcaro, 10,821; Scribner, 10,664.

SHIRES TO BOX SPOHRER AT BOSTON

BOSTON, Dec. 22.—Arthur "The Great" Shires, Sox first baseman who has temporarily forsaken bats and balls for blows and battles, will box Al Spohrer, Boston Braves catcher, in the ring here Jan. 17, if Spohrer can make arrangements, Eddie Mack, matchmaker for the Boston Garden, announced tonight.

Spohrer has been spoiling for a chance at Sir Arthur ever since the great one knocked out the mysterious "Mysterious" Dan Daly, of Cleveland. Al is one of the big leaguers who knows a bit about the boxing business for he was one of the sparring partners of Tommy Loughran, former light-heavyweight champion, during the off months of the baseball season.

Mack said Shires had agreed to meet Spohrer in a six-round bout at the Garden. Spohrer's agreement had not yet been received although it was safe to say that Al would be in Boston Jan. 17, if only his own O. K. is needed.

It was a heart-breaker to Spohrer when he heard that Trafton had taken Arthur's measure in their recent Chicago bout. Spohrer was quoted as saying that he hoped no one else would defeat the great one until he got a shot at him.

Since entering the ring, Shires has been challenged by representatives of all branches of professional athletics.

Who's this boy they call "The Great Shires of Fancy Corner"?

No. I don't know who he is but all the folks up around Fancy Corner are talking about him.

And when those Fancy Corner boys start talking they usually know what it's about and you can generally bank on it.

It seems that one of the boys has recently been bitten by the boxing bug and is going to appear on the next card at the Shyma club show.

The boy is boxing daily with Young Al Beauregard and getting right down to business for his opponent is to be no less than Mush Moriarty who throws a few mean punches himself.

The Fancy Corner boys have dubbed him The Great Shires all because he is bubbling over with that confidence of youth. When told that his opponent was to be the redoubtable Moriarty he just says "It's Okay with me, baby, he'll be my first knockout."

But it was noticed he boxed just a little harder in fact so hard that Young Al had to slip his lip to stop him. All of which didn't bother him a bit.

The boys up there are certain that the announcement of this bout will positively fill the hall. All you can get out of them is that this new "Shires" is good, in fact so god that he outshires Shires.

They say he just can't stop talking about what he's going to do when he gets in the ring. He's so confident that he says he feels ashamed of taking the money it will come so easy.

They tell one on him about the other night he started to walk home from Fancy Corner and got halfway when he lighted his pipe. The wind was blowing and he turned around and put his back to it but forgot to turn back again and the first thing he knew he was back at Fancy Corner.

We hope he don't do that in the ring.

Is the Christmas shopping done?

ARMY SPECIAL ARRIVES IN SUNNY CALIFORNIA

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Calif., Dec. 22—(AP)—Bearing some 150 football players, coaches and Cadets, the West Point special train tonight was speeding northward from Los Angeles to Palo Alto, where it was expected to arrive shortly before midnight, about nine hours behind schedule.

The late arrival of the Cadets made it necessary for Palo Alto city officials to cancel plans for a reception at the station, and instead, the Army men will be taken from the train to Branner Hall on the campus. They will occupy Branner Hall until next Saturday when the West Pointers, headed by Captain "Red" Cagle, face the Stanford varsity here.

Advance reports have it that Coach Lawrence "Biff" Jones' men will be under strick military discipline during their stay on the campus. They are accompanied by their own cooks, and have brought their own drinking water. Their first workout is scheduled for tomorrow. Their practice during the remainder of the week presumably will be secret.

Meanwhile, Coach Glenn Warner's Cardinals, picking up loose ends dropped since the California contest a month ago, went through an intensive workout today.

ST. LOUIS TO BE IN NAT. HOCKEY LEAGUE IN 1930

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Dec. 22.—(AP)—St. Louis is to step up to major league hockey next season, according to an announcement by Ben G. Brinkman, president of the National Exhibition company which owns the arena, new sports and exposition building here. Brinkman said St. Louis is to be represented in the National Hockey league next year.

Brinkman just returned from a conference in New York and said he is forming a company for the purpose of operating a big league hockey team at the arena. He added that he was assured by Colonel John S. Hammond of Madison Square Garden and by other hockey officials that a National league franchise would be granted to St. Louis if the necessary sum, $50,000, were forthcoming. It is not the plan, he said, to drop any city to make room for St. Louis in the National Hockey league but to expand the circuit to include this city.

St. Louis now is in its second year of organized hockey, being a member of the American Hockey association.

Brinkman also said he is negotiating with Madison Square Garden, the Boston Square Garden, the Detroit auditorium and the Chicago stadium to bring other exhibitions here in a five-city sports chain.

Frederickson In Hospital

TORONTO, Ont., Dec. 22.— (AP) — Frank Frederickson, manager and star center of the Pittsburgh Pirates of the National Hockey league, entered St. Michael's hospital here tonight to undergo an operation on his knee tomorrow. Frederickson was injured in a league game several weeks ago and has been on the sidelines ever since.

Falcaro Wins Title

HORTON SMITH WINS PASADENA OPEN GOLF TOURNAMENT WITH SCORE OF 280

PASADENA, Calif., Dec. 22.—(AP)—Horton Smith, the sensational young professional from the Missouri Ozarks, today won his third open gold tournament of the Winter Pacific Coast campaign by leading the field six strokes to annex the Pasadena $4,000 event with a card of 280 for the 72 holes.

The 21-year old pro swept into a three stroke lead for the first time during the three day event on the morning round, bagging five birdies for a 68. He continued his attack on par through the first nine of the afternoon 35, but the tricky 12th and a bad approach on the 17th cut him to par 71 for the final round.

Consistent golf which saw him hitting par or under through the tourney, marked Smith's play. Friday he finished with a 70, which placed him second. This, coupled with a 71 yesterday permitted him to continue within a stroke of first place.

Finishing in second place today were Ed Dudley of Wilmington, Del., Johnny Golden, Paterson, N. J.; Eddie Loos, Pasadena, and George Von Elm, amateur from Detroit. These four had scores of 286. Trailing them by a stroke Denny Shute, Columbus, Ohio, with a 287, while Leo Diegel, P. G. A. champion, Johnny Farrell, runner up, and three others, tied with 288s.

Craig Wood of Port Chester, N. J., the defending champion, had a bad 82, 11 over par, for his morning card, after having played consistent par golf. He staged a rousing comeback for even perfect scores on the afternoon 18, but this was not sufficient to place him among the money winners.

Smith received $1,000 as the winner's share of the tourney. His previous victories were scored in the Oregon open and the Berkeley, Calif., open.

Dudley, Golden, and Loos got $450 each, Shute $300, and the next five finishers $170 each.

Walter Hagen, British open champion, after a strong start which placed him in front with his fellow townsman, Von Elm, after the opening day's play, barely finished in the money. The great Hagen had a 292 for the tournament, which won him $50 of the prize money.

Von Elm, by virtue of leading the amateur field, was awarded the trophy for the honor. His 286 was ten strokes better than Fay Coleman, Los Angeles, who was the second low amateur.

McCAFFERY TRADED TO CANADIENS FOR FRASER

PITTSBURGH, Dec. 22.—(AP)—Bert McCaffery, veteran defense man of the Pittsburgh club of the National Hockey league, has been traded to the Montreal Les Canadiens for Gordon Fraser, it was made known here today. The management hopes, through the acquisition of Fraser, to strengthen the Bue defense, which has been more or less weak since the opening of the season.

Fraser will report to Pittsburgh in New York next Saturday and McCaffery will join the Montreal team on the same date.

GRIFFITH-RISKO BOUT TOPS GARDEN SHOW THIS WEEK

Battling in the ten-round final of the Garden's Friday night show will be Gerald Ambrose (Tuffy) Griffith, of Sioux City, Ia., and Johnny Risko, of Cleveland, O.

Risko has been counted out of the heavyweight picture many times but he has a happy faculty for bouncing back into the limelight just when all hopes seem lost. He has battled all the leading heavyweights of the last four or five years and he has won more often than he has lost.

In Griffith he will be meeting one of the most promising of the younger fighters. The Sioux City lad can punch and box and they may be enough to upset the Clevelander. Griffith certainly is a much improved fighter over the Griffith that was knocked out in two rounds by James J. Braddock here some months ago.

Supporting the feature bout will be a ten-round semi-final between Harold Mays, of Bayonne, N. J., and Paul Cavalier, of Paterson, N. J., heavyweights. Joe Sekyra, Dayton, O., heavyweight, will battle Larry Johnson, Chicago Negro, in the first ten.

At the Chicago Stadium, Friday night, Bud Taylor, Terre Haute featherweight, will meet Earl Mastro, of Chicago, in the ten-round feature. Hein Mueller, latest German heavyweight importation, takes on Elzear Rioux of Canada, in another ten rounder on the same card.

SCHMELING TO FIGHT AT ATLANTIC CITY MAR. 29

ATLANTIC CITY, Dec. 22.—(AP)—Max Schmeling, the German heavyweight contender, will fight an opponent yet unnamed at the Atlantic City Auditorium on March 29 instead of Feb. 22, and Jack Sharkey, outstanding American contender, may meet Schmeling here, Herman Taylor, one of the promoters, said tonight.

The postponement was made at the cabled request of Schmeling, who wanted more time to rest up an injured ankle and get himself in condition. He will sail from Berlin on Feb. 8 and arrive here a week later. His opponent will be announced at a dinner party as a formal reception on Feb. 19.

Asked who may be Schmeling's rival, Taylor remarked:

"With the change of dates, Sharkey is in the running as his contract expires with the Madison Square Garden Corp. after the Miami bout scheduled for Feb. 27. No matter who the promoters pick for Sharkey, he will win, as he outclasses the group with the exception of Schmeling.

"My partners in the enterprise have already talked to Johnny Buckley who handles Sharkey's business and he is willing to bring Jack here after the Miami bout.

"There is no truth to the reports that George Godfrey has been selected as Schmeling's opponent. He, like any other heavyweight who figures to extend Max, is in line for the bout.

"Tuffy Griffith may come in for serious consideration if he performs impressively against Johnny Risko. But 40 days before the March 29 date, the man who will meet Schmeling will be announced," added Taylor.

Joe Jacobs, manager of Schmeling, received the cablegram from Schmeling late on Saturday night requesting the postponement. Jacobs came to Atlantic City and met Taylor.

EAST-WEST TEAMS SETTLE DOWN TO HARD PRACTICE

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 22.—(AP)—Members of the East-West football teams settled down to hard work today and except for the Christmas holiday will enjoy no respite until the day before their game here January 1.

Catch Andy Kerr took the eastern players to Palo Alto and put them through light scrimmage and signal practice to accustom them to the turf. Tomorrow the first of a series of two hour workouts will begin.

The western team had a two hour scrimmage, kicking and passing the ball. Coach Percy Locey declined to pick a first eleven, saying he would not name the starting players until a day or two before the game. Locey, however, continued to use Ed Pomeroy, Utah fullback and "Dutch" Clark of Colorado, quarterback, in those positions. The western team will practice in San Francisco until Christmas day after which they will go to St. Mary's college at Morago in back of the Oakland hills to finish their workout.

The schedule: Jan. 13, Stonington; 22, Robert Fitch at Groton; 25, Woodstock academy at Woodstock; Feb. 1, Robert Fitch; 8, American School for Deaf; 15, Stonington at Stonington; March 1, Fishers Island; 8, Woodstock; 15, American School for Deaf at West Hartford.

Workouts for both the indoor track and the swimming teams at the Academy will be practically at a standstill this week because of the holidays. Immediately after New Year's, the Wildcats will get down to work for the final stretch before the opening of the schedules. Each will open about the second week of the month.

Stonington high will play but an eight-game basketball schedule, which, added to the fact that N. E. A., Bulkeley and Westerly have no court representatives, makes basketball a rather dead sport for the conference fives, at least, the Class A schools.

HELLER FIVE RESENT BEING TREATED LIKE SCHOOL KIDS

Sports Editor: The Heller Brothers basketball team has repeatedly sought to arrange a basketball game with the famed professional champions of eastern Connecticut, the Plainfield Community club, and in each instance the brothers have been turned down cold. The Leonard Booking agency of Boston, which books games for the Willimantic Five, was informed by the Plainfield manager that the brothers would be a financial "flop" to them, that is, that they would not be a drawing card in Plainfield. We beg to differ.

Be that as it may, recently Sam Heller wrote personally to the Plainfield manager relative to a game during the Xmas vacation in Plainfield and the reply which he received was not one befitting a manager of a championship team, namely, "Eastern Connecticut Professional champs" (considering the fact that they are about the only professional team in Connecticut, they ought to be pretty good Eeastern Connecticut champs). The thoughtless, inconsiderate and unexplainable reply was to the effect that most of the Heller boys have played in their preliminary games at one time or another and been defeated by their "Buddies." In fact, only two of the Heller brothers have ever played in Plainfield, and the two youngest at that, the youngest member played there three years ago while the next member played there two years ago. But, what of it! Either one of those two boys is today as good a basketball player as any of the vaunted stars on the championship Plainfield team.

Again, the Plainfield scribe writes—"The team you play in Norwich regularly has been beaten often by the preliminary team here, the Buddies." —But, no mention is made of the fact that Norwich had in their line-up a man who was a former star with the Plainfield champs and who is still as good as any of their stalwarts. The manager withheld the fact that the Heller Brothers defeated the Danielson Town team about two weeks ago, a team which had in their lineup extremely capable men, one of them a present member of the "Champs" and another one who performed for them not so long ago.

This was not all, for the writer continues: "Where do you get the idea to play the big team, (presumably talking about the Champs), a team composed of players of years' experience," and he raves madly on, "Just take a 'tip' and get a 'rep' and a few years' experience and then demand a game of us, but at present stick to your own class and use a little common sense," with nerve enough to top it off with "Wishing you a successful season."

These words are indeed penetrating, but yet whimsical as well as nonsensical, and I can't refrain from asking, "How do they get that way." What great "rep" has this team attained and what incomparable feats of the indoor court game have they demonstrated, that they can philosophize as well as dictate to us?

It seems that they know not of what they speak and should practice what they preach.

If the Heller Five had a world beating rep, I wouldn't go bragging about it, but I'd let other people do it. A word to the wise is sufficient.

We have met some of the same teams that the Plainfield team has met and have done a more creditable job than the Plainfield team can boast of. We can truthfully say that no team in eastern Connecticut has ever beaten us in basketball, and therefore we share jointly the honor of eastern Connecticut champs, but we withdraw in favor of Plainfield.

This letter is not written for the express purpose of creating publicity as a preliminary to an All-Heller-Plainfield basketball contest. That is farthest from our mind. Our main purpose in writing this letter is to take them off their "high horse" and show them that they are not the only "pebbles on the beach," but that there is another team in eastern Connecticut just as capable as they.

SAM HELLER.

VELVETMEN HAVE LITTLE TROUBLE WITH RHEA TEAM

On Sunday afternoon before a good-sized crowd the Velvetmen played the National Rhea Co. soccer team of Putnam, a league game, on the J. B. Martin ground and beat them 5 goals to 0 in a fast and interesting game. The first goal for the locals was a gift, one of the visitors unfortunately putting the ball through his own goal. The second came a few minutes later from the boot of J. Houston a fast drive from fully 20 yards out. L. Archibald added a third which finished the scoring for the first half. Two more were made in the second half, the last one being a splendid shot from a difficult angle by E. Erickson. The teams lined up as follows:

J. B. Martins		National Rhea Co.
F. Orcutt	Goal	J. Touchette
E. Eccleston	RFB	W. Wheaton
A. Headon	LFB	F. Gifford

MANDELL TO BOX QUINTERO AT MIAMI JAN. 10

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Dec. 22.—(AP)—Sammy Mandell, lightweight champion, and Manuel Quintero, Cuban fighter, may fight here on the night of Jan. 10, but if Eddie Kane has anything to say about it Jack Dempsey will not be the third man in the ring.

Kane, as Mandell's manager, today issued a statement that he would not permit his charge to enter the ring if Dempsey were the referee.

Dempsey had tentatively accepted an invitation of G. R. K. Carter, promoter of the Jan. 10 fight, to act as referee.

"Dempsey can never referee any fight in which any boxer under my management participates," Kane said. "That's flat. If Mandell is to fight the promoters had better forget about Dempsey as a referee."

Kane was manager of Tommy Gibbons when he fought Dempsey for the heavyweight championship in Shelby, Mont., in 1923.

CONNIE MACK IS 67 YEARS OLD TODAY

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 22.— (AP) — Connie Mack, veteran leader of the Philadelphia Athletics, will be 67 years old tomorrow and will spend the day as most of his days are spent—in his tower office at Shibe park.

"I'm not much of a hand for parties," said the dean of major league managers, "and anyhow, what's another birthday? I've had a lot of them. It will be an ordinary day in my life, but I think Mrs. Mack is planning a little dinner somewhere and perhaps we will go to a theatre. That will be the extent of the celebration."

Mack put an end to speculation definitely today when he said he had no thought of retiring and turning over the managerial reins to a younger man. He has directed the A's for 30 years and has been in baseball more than a half a century.

"I'm going to retire only when I'm forced to retire," he said. "This is my life—baseball. I'm going to stay in it until I'm physically unable to continue."

The world's champion Athletics will take the field in 1930 with few changes in the line-up, Mack said. His outfield will be unchanged and his infield, with the exception of third base, will be the same. Dykes will draw the hot corner assignment as a regular in that position, succeeding Sammy Hale, who has been sold to St. Louis.

RANGERS TAKE SECOND PLACE IN HOCKEY LOOP

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—(AP)—The experienced New York Rangers took second place in the American group of the National Hockey league from the young Chicago Blackhawks tonight by winning their encounter, 3 to 1. The victory gave the Rangers a one-point margin over their rivals.

The Rangers took advantage of every opportunity and converted three of them into goals in the first two periods. Chicago, tired after last night's clash with Boston, could not make use of several of their best chances after they finally did break through the New York defense.

The newly-adopted offside rule, getting its first trial in New York, caused much trouble for both teams and each had a goal disallowed because a player had crossed into the attacking zone ahead of the puck.

Frank Boucher, veteran center, showed the way in the Ranger scoring, making two goals on assists by the Cook brothers. Marvin Wentworth made the Chicago goal late in the third period.

MANY GREENEVILLE HOUSES PRETTILY DECORATED

Christmas decorations are in evidence throughout Greeneville. Many of the residents have strings of gayly colored electric lights in their windows while others have candles, electrified. On many front porches two small Christmas trees are placed. As in past years Prospect street, the residential section of the third ward, leads the other streets in decorations during the Yuletide season.

Christmas Mass At 6 a. m. Announced.

At the three masses Sunday at St. Mary's Memorial church, Rev. William A. Keefe, pastor, announced that the masses Christmas day would be the same as on Sunday with the exception of an early mass at 6 o'clock.

The K. S. Sewing circle of L. A. A. O. H., No. 18, met Thursday evening at the home of Mrs. Nora Fahey of North Main street with a large class. Sewing of fancy articles occupied the time for an hour, after which a social hour was enjoyed with carol singing a feature. Refreshments were served by the hostess and included assorted sandwiches, cake, cookies and coffee. Mrs. Fahey was assisted by Mrs. Grace Mumford, Misses Esther Fahey, Teresa Portelance and Loretta Fahey. The class will hold its next meeting with Mrs. Mollie Carroll of 26 Boswell avenue.

Of interest to Taftville people and especially to radio owners is the announcement that Aldor Langlois, 13-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Langlois of 18 South B street, is to sing over the radio from station WTIC on Monday, Dec. 30. The young man, who has a very fine voice, has already made quite a name for himself in local musical circles.

The executive officers of the Taftville Rod and Gun club met Thursday with President Fred Dugas presiding. Owing to the scarcity of game, the annual game supper was ordered canceled. It was voted that the funds appropriated for defraying the expenses of the supper be spent in the purchase of cotton-tail rabbits, which would be distributed in the various parts of the surrounding district for the benefit of the sportsmen of that locality. The committee appointed to take charge of the purchase of the cotton-tails consists of Joseph E. Benac and Edward Duprey.

MAN'S SKULL FRACTURED, CHILD HURT WHEN HIT BY LOCAL TAXI

Ralph Alberica and a child, Gloria Alberica of No. 76 North Main street, were knocked down and injured about 7:30 o'clock Saturday evening, on North Main street, just north of the so-called car shops, by a local taxi driven by Clarence A. Gwiczdowski. Both were taken to the W. W. Backus hospital. Mr. Alberico is suffering from a fractured skull and a broken right arm and the girl was injured about the hip and spine.

The child, it is claimed, started across the street and Mr. Alberico attempted to stop her. They were on the trolley tracks when hit by the taxi. Mr. Alberica, who has been located in West Virginia, had just arrived in Norwich to pass the Christmas holiday season at his home here.

SAILOR WRECKED AUTO TAKEN WITHOUT PERMISSION

After the machine, an Overland whippet, he was driving, crashed into a parked automobile on Laurel Hill avenue, early Sunday evening, James C. Clark, U. S. N., stationed at the submarine base, Groton, was arrested on a charge of driving while under the influence of liquor. In addition Clark faces charges of taking an automobile without the permission of the owner, and driving without having a license with him. Walter Zeramba, 11, of Allyn place, who was riding with Clark, received lacerations over the right eye and on the left forehead. The boy was taken to the W. W. Backus hospital in the ambulance.

The Overland, practically demolished in the crash, is owned by Patrick L. McNally, of the U. S. S. 0-9, now at the submarine base. McNally was visiting at the Zaramba house and claims that Clark took the machine without his permission. Clark, evidently on the way to the submarine base, ran into a machine owned by Dr. John W. Suplicki of No. 167 Cliff street, which was parked on the right hand side of the street, near No. 176 Laurel Hill avenue. The Overland overturned, was practically demolished and landed on its side in the middle of the street, blocking the trolley tracks. Dr. Suplicki's machine was badly damaged.

Police Officers Henry Fenton, Patrick Shahan and Clarence Simpson investigated the accident and Clark was arrested on the drunken driving charge. It also developed that he had no driving license with him. Later McNally appeared at police headquarters and charged Clark with taking the machine without his permission. The police pushed the wrecked car to the side of the road and later both machines were towed to garages.

DANIELSON KIDNAPING CASE CONTINUED UNTIL JAN. 6TH

DANIELSON, Dec. 22.—It was announced today that James Cobb, held in default of bail at the county jail in Brooklyn on a kidnaping charge, has retained Attorney Irving H. Mixon of Putnam as counsel.

Saturday morning Cobb, whose home is in Yantic, was presented before Judge W. Fenner Woodward in the town court to answer to the charge that he kidnaped Miss Katherine Lasch, who has been living here for some time, but whose home is at 228 West Town street, Norwich, with her mother, Mrs. Mary N. Lasch. Friday afternoon near Davis park, here, while the young woman was on her way to work in the mill office where she is employed in town.

When Cobb, a clean-cut young man of fine build, was asked to plead to the charge he seemed a bit bewildered and remarked that he did not feel that he had actually kidnaped Miss Lasch, with whom he had been on particularly friendly terms for a considerable period of time up to three months ago, when their relations became estranged and have since remained so.

However, he was advised that he was expected to plead, one way or the other, and said "Not guilty." Thereupon Prosecuting Attorney Arthur G. Bill suggested that Cobb's offense being such a serious one in the eyes of the law, one under which, in case of conviction, a penalty as severe as 20 years in prison may be imposed, that the bail be $10,000. There was a wan smile from Cobb as he remarked that there was no possibility of his raising that amount.

That he might have opportunity to retain counsel his case was continued until Jan. 6. The hearing is so long deferred by reason of the fact that it is the holiday season, that Attorney Bill expects to be out of town over the Christmas season and because, it being in a holiday period, many other things intervene to put the case over until after the first of the year.

Cobb was taken to jail after his presentation in court and faces the prospect of spending Christmas and New Year's in custody, though, it is understood, an effort will be made to get him out on bail.

FRANK EDWARD JOHNSON REACHES CUBA FROM EUROPE

Holiday greetings received by Norwich friends from Frank Edward Johnson, in Cuba, bring also the information that Mr. Johnson arrived the last day of October after six very enjoyable months in Germany, Switzerland, Spain and France. Mr. Johnson had a special treat of music while in Germany during the season.

He expresses his pleasure in being home again after seeing so much of Europe and stresses the beauties of Cuba and the attractions of his home and patio as especially lovely.

Mr. Johnson has been informed of the recent death of Gen. William A. Aiken and Oliver L. Johnson and expresses deep sorrow at their passing, as he puts it, "Two splendid men whom Norwich will miss."

Mr. Johnson, a native of Norwich, made his last visit to this city for the burial of his mother, Mrs. Edward Whiting Johnson, who died suddenly in Florida Feb. 14th, 1928, while accompanying her son from Windham, Conn., to Cuba, where she was to reside.

GOOD SKATING AT MOHEGAN PARK POND

The first real good skating of the season was enjoyed Sunday at the "little pond" at Mohegan park by approximately 400 persons. The institution of a checking service for skaters' shoes was very much appreciated by those who went to the park Sunday. In previous years skaters had to leave their shoes in the small building at the park and on several occasions returned after skating to find them missing.

AIRPORT FOR NORWICH IS PLANNED FOR NEAR FUTURE

Norwich and New London are among the 13 cities in Connecticut that are now considering the establishment of new airports, according to information reaching the department of commerce at Washington. Both cities have notified the aeronautics branch of the department that they plan to establish airports in the near future and have requested the department for advice on the new projects.

WATER STREET CLUB RAID NETS 130 CASEES OF BEER

Bottled beer, 130 cases of it, was seized Saturday night by state and local police in a raid at the club room on the fourth floor of the building at No. 97 Water street, conducted by Charles Green. A quantity of alleged liquor, and one or two slot machines were also seized in the raid. Green was arrested on charges of violation of the liquor law and violation of the gambling laws. After being booked at police headquarters he was released on bonds of $1,000 for his appearance in the city court this (Monday) morning. John Smith, 32, of Occum, who was found in the club room in an intoxicated condition, was arrested on an intoxication charge. A half dozen others met in the place were summoned to appear in court this morning.

The police took the 130 cases of beer, seized liquor and slot machines to the state police barracks at Groton. They spent the greater part of the evening carting the numerous cases down the long stairs to the truck. It is understood that the state police had evidence of an actual sale before the raid was pulled off. Those in the raiding squad were State Police Officers Whitmarsh, Smith, Dygert, McKenzie, Hill and Officers Peter Vuono, Edward Hanks and Eugene Caulkins of the local police department.

TWO LOCAL MEN CUT IN SATURDAY NIGHT FIGHT

George Cross, colored, 22 years of age, whose home is in Hartford, was arrested Sunday afternoon on the West Side section of the city, by the local police, and is being held in connection with a fight Saturday night, in front of No. 76 High street. Cross, it is said, became involved in a fight with Warren and Harry Ruley, local colored men, and both the Ruleys were cut in the fracas. Cross will be presented in the city court this (Monday) morning.

RELIEF CORPS HOLDS BAKED BEAN SUPPER

Streamers of red and green suspended over the tables, with a Santa Claus frieze around the sides of the room, made the pretty decorations for a baked bean and salad supper given Saturday evening at the Buckingham Memorial by Sedgwick Woman's Relief corps. The supper was one of the most successful of the season, holiday shoppers, clerks from the stores and others availing themselves of the opportunity to enjoy one of the well known relief corps suppers which set a standard that ensure a pleasing patronage whenever they are held.

The supper, as usual, was under the direction of the executive committee, and turned in a satisfying sum to the treasury.

CHRISTMAS EVE CAROLS AT NORWICH TOWN

The committee trimming the tree on the Norwich Town green realizes that the tree is very small, but the members feel the time has come for it to "stand on its own feet" and have no assistance from festoons and surrounding smaller trees. The work of trimming has been a community enterprise as many members of the Rural association have given their assistance. The tree will be lighted during Christmas week, lights having been turned on for the first time Sunday evening. Mrs. Philip Johnson, chairman, was assisted on that committee by Flint Brayton and Walter T. Camp.

The Boy Scouts of Troop No. 2, from the Methodist Episcopal church, also the Scouts of Troop No. 10, from Sacred Heart church, are to be on Norwich Town Green Christmas eve to render any assistance needed, especially so in distributing the song sheets to the public, which it is hoped will enter largely into the spirit of the community singing around the tree. The Scouts are also designated to collect the song sheets, as these are the property of Norwich Rural association, under whose auspices the Christmas tree celebration is being held. All Scouts of Norwich will be privileged to assist. Joseph C. Worth, song leader is to have an elevated position in directing the community singing and a large flood light has been arranged for special use during that period.

The songs selected are the same as those the school children have been rehearsing during the Christmas season for their school programme, etc., under the direction of Miss Mary Rogers, supervisor of singing in the public schools of Norwich. John Swahn cornetist, has been engaged to accompany the singing. The time has been set this year for 7 o'clock, one-half hour earlier than in former years.

In the three Norwich Town churches, Congregational, Sacred Heart and Methodist Episcopal, also Grace Episcopal church, Yantic, announcements of the celebration, were read on Sunday, by the several pastors.

James Moran, treasurer of the Tree fund, has reported that there has been a liberal response to the letters sent out; but there are yet more to be heard from, as more funds are needed to carry out the project successfully.

SCOUT DENISON TO RECEIVE MAYOR'S PRIZE

First Class Scout Grant Denison, winner of the spy game Saturday afternoon, will be awarded the mayor's prize by Mayor Lee Roy Robbins at his office in the court house at 2 o'clock this (Monday) afternoon. In addition to Scout Denison, three other scouts found their way through the line of 50 scouts guarding Franklin square without being captured. The message written by the mayor was delivered to the spy chief, William Collins, at Franklin square, who was walking up and down the square wearing a first class scout badge.

The four scout spies who broke through the line to deliver the message reported in this order: Scout Denison, Mullard Mullikan, Edward rodeur and Branford Spicer, and the four scouts captured were James Coughlin, Woodrow Sebastian, Charles Ryan and Edward Jordan. The first spy to be captured was Scout Ryan, being caught by Russell Yerrington.

PETITIONS FOR APPOINTMENT AS ADMINISTRATRIX

(Special to The Bulletin)

FALL RIVER, Mass., Dec. 22—Mrs. Mary H. Murphy of Norwich, Conn., has petitioned the Bristol county probate court for appointment as administratrix of the estate of the late Patrick H. Hanley of this city. A hearing will be held on the petition in the probate court session to be held in this city at the superior court house Jan. 3 at 10:30 a. m. before Judge Mayhew B. Hitch.

STORRS HENS WILL EXCEED EXPECTED EGG PRODUCTION

In the seventh week of the Storrs contest the hens as a whole held steady Australorps, Jersey Giants, and White Rocks all speeded up their production a bit, but this was partly offset by reason of the fact that the Reds were using the brakes. Thus the gain over the previous week's lay was only a dozen eggs, too small to be significant except in so far as it shows the trend.

The total production for all pens was 4,254 eggs or a yield of nearly 61 per cent. At this rate the Storrs hens will exceed on January 1st the expected production of 30 eggs each in the first two months from flocks that are destined to lay 200 eggs per hen per year.

Leghorns managed to squeeze into first place but only by a hair. The entry of Steelman Poultry Farms of Lansdale, Pa., stood first for the week with a score of 61 eggs. Rhode Island Reds trailed close behind, Edward N. Larrabee's pen from Peterboro, N. H., was an uncomfortably close second with a tally of 60 eggs. Tolvonen Leghorn Farm from Girard, Pa., was an equally close third with a mark of 59 eggs. For fourth place three breeds battled to a tie.

R. C. Cobb's pen of Barred Rocks from Littleton, Mass., D. I. Goodenough's pen of Reds from Torrington, Conn., and Tom Barron's White Leghorns from Catforth, England all wound up for the week with 58 eggs each. When it comes to the matter of ranking the pens on their total production from November 1st to date, one notes two changes during the past week. In the Barred Rock group Westfield Poultry Farm from Westfield, Mass., moved from second into first place. In the Rhode Island Red class the Peterboro, N. H., pen that won second for the week moved up from third to second place in total production to date.

The scratch grains used in connection with the contest closely approximate the formulas recommended by the New England Poultry Feed conference. Corn, wheat, and oats are of course the mainstays. Equal parts of cracked corn and wheat are fed two or three times during the day. Whole corn is fed at night between nine and ten o'clock because it enables the birds to make a meal quickly. The oats are germinated and fed separately.

All pens are fed the same ration but not necessarily the same amounts as the latter naturally depends upon the breed, the rate of production, the weather, and possibly other factors. This means then, that feeding is not an altogether simple matter.

MOVING PICTURES OF CHRIST AT Y. M. C. A.

A very large audience attended the Sunday afternoon service at the local Y. M. C. A. After the singing of a hymn and prayer, Louis Mell, the pianist sang an appropriate Christmas hymn. Moving pictures of the Christ especially showing the scenes and history of his childhood were shown with splendid effect and impressiveness.

Secretary Edwin Hill gave a brief talk urging all present to think much of the Christ in these days, and he suggested that everyone seek out those less fortunate than they are and help make their Christmas brighter. The speaker emphasized the fact that while the giving and receiving of presents was most commendable, yet the very best present one can give is to give his life fully up to the leadership of Jesus Christ. Your homes will be more happy if each member of the family follows the example of the Christ.

CHRISTMAS FESTIVAL OF CONG. CHURCH SCHOOL

The Christmas festival of the Congregational church school, which is to be held this (Monday) evening at 7 o'clock, will open with a pageant in the auditorium of the church. The pageant is under direction of a special committee consisting of Mrs. Walter Clark, Mrs. Donald Brigham, Mrs. Walter Hitchon and Miss Bernice Underwood. Following the pageant the assembly will pass to the chapel for the exercises of the primary department under direction of Miss Louise Bailey, teacher, and the entire school with their friends will be ready to welcome Santa Claus upon his arrival.

HELD CHRISTMAS PARTY FOR BLIND PUPILS OF CLASS

About 22 were present Friday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Stanton W. Brown, Wightman avenue, when a member of their household, Miss Izetta Dellett, home teacher for the blind, pleasantly entertained her pupils and a few friends at a Christmas party. The feature of the afternoon was a tempting luncheon of clam chowder with pie, doughnuts, cake, tea and coffee. Candy was passed at the close of the repast, which was followed by the exchange of gifts from the tree. Mrs. Francis Herrick, of Hartford, social worker for the blind, impersonated Mrs. Santa Claus in distributing the gifts. Guests were present from Mystic, Jewett City, New London, Willimantic, Hartford and Norwich. Among the pupils present, whose ages ranged from 30 to 86, were four men and 14 women, all of whom were presented gifts and candy from the gaily-adorned tree.

In serving the luncheon at 1 o'clock, Miss Dellett had the assistance of her personal guide, Mrs. George Gaskell, also Mrs. Brown and two of the latter's daughters, Mrs. Fred Miller and Mrs. Lewis Aldrich. Mr. Brown and Mr. Gaskell provided their cars to convey some of the guests. During the afternoon, games were enjoyed and all united in singing Christmas carols, Mrs. Aldrich playing the piano accompaniments. There were recitations by several of the guests. Miss Dellett also entertained with harmonica selections finely rendered. The eldest guest present was 86. The party lasted until 5 o'clock. Miss Dellett has been a member of the Brown family for several years. Since locating in Norwich Town she has gone from place to place each week, instructing the blind, her pupils all being adults, and she being accompanied by her assistant, Mrs. Gaskell. A most ambitious young woman, as well as a willing entertainer whenever called upon, Miss Dellett has often entertained in public with her interesting recitations and harmonica selections.

DRAMATIZED SERVICE IS HELD AT M. E. CHURCH

The Methodist Episcopal church was filled Sunday evening when the dramatized service under direction of the pastor was given. Owing to the sudden illness of a member of the cast a number of changes were made. The service was entitled "Good Will Toward Men," and the cast was: Mr. Williams, Walter D. Kelly; Mrs. Williams, Theodora M. Brown; Mary, the daughter, a college student home for Christmas, Mrs. Lewis E. Aldrich; Bob, the son, about 17 and in high school, Wallace Wagner; grandmother, Mrs. Albert Miner; the minister, Rev. George Warren Potter; choir singers, Mary Waters, Mildred Carter, Margaret Phillip; Junior choir soloist, Virginia Ward.

The scene showed a family in a Methodist home, grouped around the open fireplace a few days before Christmas. The father, a traveling man, told of his experience in South America and what he saw of the work being carried on by the Methodist Episcopal church. The son and daughter join in the conversation and add their impressions of the young people they have met in school from South America. Mrs. Williams has a number of the choir members drop in to spend the evening and sing. Grandmother tells of meeting Bishop William F. Oldham. The minister calls in and reads a letter from Bishop Miller regarding Colegio Americano and the proposed building of Oldham Hall as a memorial. During the presentation the following hymns were sung: "O Little Town of Bethlehem," "While Shepherds Watched Their Flocks by Night" and "It Came Upon the Midnight Clear." Virginia Ward sang "Brightest and Best Star of Morning" and "Let the Christ That Is Living Reign Over All." The stone fireplace was built by Wallace Wagner, assisted by the pastor. A large framed picture of Bishop Oldham hung near the fireplace. A beautiful big evergreen star hung over the mantel, which was made and donated by Claude Robinson.

EIGHT RECEIVED SUNDAY INTO CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

At the First Congregational church Sunday morning a Christmas service was conducted by the pastor, Rev. Gurdon F. Bailey, assisted by Rev. Charles E. Reeves. There was special Christmas music under direction of Organist Herbert L. Yerrington. The auditorium was attractively adorned for the Yuletide season by Miss Ida Beebe, chairman of the C. E. flower committee, assisted by several other Endeavorers. A visiting clergyman, Rev. Elbert C. Whiting, of Sudbury, Mass., preached a most eloquent sermon from the text Isaiah 9:6, "For unto us a Child is born, unto us a Son is given, and the government shall be upon His shoulder; and His name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The Mighty God, The Everelasting Father, The Prince of Peace," with emphasis on the "For unto us a Child is born, unto us a Son is given." The anthems by the choir were, The Song Angelic and The Dawn of Peace. The offertory, by Mr. Yerrington, Silent Night, Holy Night, with chimes, was especially appealing.

Rev. Mr. Reeves read the Scripture lesson from Luke 7, and offered prayer. Preceding the sermon, Rev. Mr. Bailey received into the church membership a class of eight candidates, in confession of faith, Mrs. Susanna H. Parker, and by letters of transfer from other churches, Miss Charlotte Barbour from Trinity M. E. church of Norwich, Mrs. Phoebe A. Barber from the Congregational church in Central Village, Mr. and Mrs. Horace H. Woodmansee, Mrs. Gertrude L. Seagrave, Mrs. Grace Parker Heinrich from the United church, Norwich, and Oscar J. Heinrich from Taftville Congregational church. The right hand of fellowship was extended by Rev. Mr. Bailey. The pastor acknowledged with thanks a generous check, the gift of a long-time member of the church.

The flowers on the pulpit, presented by the Drop-in class of the Sunday school, were in memory of Miss Jennie G. Bonney, a loyal member of this church, who was almost instantly killed one year ago, Dec. 21.

The closing hymn, O Little Town of Bethlehem, was followed by the benediction by Rev. Mr. Whiting.

WOULD OUST MEMBER OF LAW ENFORCEMENT COMMISSION

Senator Harris Demands the Removal of Paul J. McCormick, a Federal Judge—Result of McCormick's Statement That He and His Associates Had Agreed That Prohibition Enforcement and "Governmental Lawlessness" Were Two Major Problems—Demand For Removal is Sustained by "Dry" Senators

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23—(AP)—The opposition of a group of dry senators to the way the Hoover law enforcement commission is working crystallized today into a demand by one of them for the removal from that agency of Paul J. McCormick, a federal judge.

Senator Harris, democrat, Georgia, took this position as a result of McCormick's statements in Los Angeles last night that he and his associates had agreed that "prohibition enforcement" and "governmental lawlessness" were two major problems. He disclaimed speaking for the commission.

In a formal statement, Harris contended McCormick's expressions showed him to be "such a partisan against the prohibition enforcement law that, however honest he may be, he is unfitted to hold office on the commission."

"The prohibition forces of the country," he declared, "will be greatly disturbed if the president does not remove this man who has encouraged anti-prohibitionists as well as violators of law."

Harris is author of the resolution calling for a preliminary report to congress concerning the commission's prohibition findings. He has attacked the practice of secret sessions by the Hoover agency, and is being supported by Senator Glass, democrat, in threatening to oppose further funds for the commission unless its views on prohibition are stated.

Judge McCormick said in California that invasion and search of private dwellings without warrants was an outstanding evil of present prohibition enforcement.

"It is a gross misuse and denial of the constitutional rights of citizens," he continued, "and is a menace to life and liberty. A man's home is his castle, and the practice of entering it in the cause of prohibition enforcement without recourse to legal procedure, should be abolished. Third degree methods, as indulged in today, are wrong."

Senators Borah of Idaho and Jones of Washington, both republican drys, evinced interest in McCormick's views but declined to comment.

Jones said he intended to visit the law enforcement commission tomorrow to lay before it a request that a report on prohibition be made to congress as soon as possible.

Harris' statement was the second senatorial attack on a member of the president's commission. Last summer, after Chairman Wickersham wrote to Governor Roosevelt of New York, suggesting that the governor sponsor a plan whereby the states would take over much of the enforcement work, Senator Caraway, democrat, Arkansas, another dry, expressed the opinion that Wickersham should be removed from the commission.

The Arkansas senator was inclined to agree tonight with McCormick's opinion that invasion and search of private dwellings without warrants constituted a serious evil.

"You don't need to do that to enforce the law," he observed.

DANNY MURPHY CHARGED WITH DISORDERLY CONDUCT

CHICAGO, Dec. 23—(AP)— Danny Murphy in whose ears once thundered the applause of world series fans, climbed up and then down the ladder of success until he reached the bottom today—a prisoner in a Desplaines street court, charged with disorderly conduct.

Danny, in court, was just a nervous West Madison street vagabond until word of his real identity reached Judge Samuel Heller. Then it was learned that he was the Danny Murphy, right fielder for the championship Philadelphia Athletics, who gave Frank Chance's Chicago Cubs a beating in the series of 1910.

"Discharged" said Judge Heller, who added:

"A man who once was a star athlete deserves something for Christmas. I'll make the first contribution."

Danny took the donation and started to shuffle away.

"Come back tomorrow," said Judge Heller, "and I'll see what can be done for you. Where will you sleep tonight?"

"I'll be sleeping in a station cell, where I've been sleeping for the last few nights," said Danny.

Someone probably masquerading as Danny Murphy. Dan is now resident in Newark, N. J.

SHOT FATHER-IN-LAW AND THEN KILLED HIMSELF

NEW YORK, Dec. 23—(AP)—Nicholas Schmidt, 28, a Trenton, N. J., carpenter, tonight shot and killed his father-in-law, Ignatz Gerber, 48, in the latter's apartment in the Bronx, and then took his own life.

Police said that Schmidt's wife, Lena, 24, left her husband three months ago and went to live with her father and mother.

Tonight, detectives were told, Schmidt rushed into the apartment with a drawn revolver, apparently bent on shooting his wife. Gerber hurled himself between his daughter and her husband and received two bullets in his body. He died almost instantly.

While Mrs. Schmidt and her mother, Elizabeth, 46, ran screaming from the apartment, Schmidt turned his gun against himself and fired a bullet into his temple. He was dead when police arrived.

"BLUE CHRISTMAS" FOR STOCK MARKET PATRONS

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—(AP)—A "blue Christmas" appeared in prospect for Wall street today as prices of stocks headed downward again and rallies failed to hold. Net declines in a long list of stocks ranged from $1 to $10 a share, but only one important issue, Anacoda Copper, broke through to a new low level for the year, although many others sank to within a few points of the resistance levels established in last month's break.

It was the first time since 1920 that the market has failed to provide some Christmas cheer for holders of securities, and consequently the first that "bear" traders have enjoyed. One encouraging feature of the session was the sharp falling off in volume, the day's sales of slightly less than 3,500,000 shares running about 2,000,000 shares below last Friday's total.

FIREMAN CRUSHED TO DEATH BENEATH ENGINE

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 23.—(AP)—Benjamin Pittman, fireman, was crushed to death beneath his engine, and Mike Foster, engineer, was seriously scalded today in a collision between Texas & Pacific and Southern Pacific passenger trains at Avondale, a railroad ferry crossing above New Orleans.

Only the engines of the two trains left the track and none of the many Christmas passengers was injured.

THREE MEN KILLED IN EXPLOSION NEAR ALBANY

ALBANY, N. Y., Dec. 23—(AP)—Three men were killed and another seriously burned in an explosion and fire late today at the plant of the Redmond and Bramley Oil company, Inc., in Rensselaer, just across the Hudson from here.

The blast, which occurred in a storehouse containing 10,000 gallons of kerosene, wrecked that building, blew out windows in scores of houses, and shook structures for ten miles about.

PRISON SENTENCE OF FROM 70 TO 140 YEARS

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 23—(AP)—A penitentiary sentence of 70 to 140 years was given William (Blackie) Zupkosky, 20, today after he was convicted of three holdups and pleaded guilty to four of 65 other indictments.

"You have reached the end of your criminal career," Judge Howard A. Davis said in imposing sentence. "You have wasted your life. Now you must pay the penalty."

Three juries that tried Zupkosky on the first three robbery indictments took less than three minutes each to convict him of the charges the juries remaining in the box.

He was first convicted of participation in a $5,092 payroll robbery of William Scholes and company. A second jury convicted him of robbing the real estate office of Charles Sege of $1,100 in cash and jewels. The third conviction was for a $5,098 holdup of the Sikes Chair company.

HELEN WILLS MARRIED TO FREDERICK S. MOODY, JR.

BERKELEY, Cal., Dec. 23—(AP)—Helen Wills, who won the women's world tennis championship, captivated the hearts of two continents, painted pictures that won her praise in London galleries and was presented to the British king and queen, married a young bond salesman here today because she loves him and tonight her name is Mrs. Frederick S. Moody, Jr.

The Moodys were married shortly after noon at St. Clements Episcopal church, a modest little chapel that nestles at the foot of the Berkeley Hills, near the tennis courts, where nine years ago Mrs. Moody began a career that was destined to make her one of the best known women in the world.

The ceremony was characteristic of the bride's career, simple and sincere, but with a cheerful overtone. The church had been decorated for Christmas. There was holly, evergreen, a bit of tinsel and over all a star. At the altar beneath these decorations Miss Wills and Mr. Moody knelt quietly while the Rev. Lindley H. Miller, the rector, read the new Episcopal service which does not require the bride to "obey" her husband or the husband to "endow" his wife with all his worldly goods.

There was no music and no flowers, except the godeni chrysanthemums intertwined in the decorations.

JEALOUS HUSBAND SHOT HIS WIFE AS SHE SLEPT

COLUMBIA, N. H., Dec. 23.—(AP)—Jealous suspicions of Ernest Eastman, 48, today caused him to shoot his wife, Eva, 31, as she slept, police said he told them. Four children, from 4 to 13 years of age, are left motherless.

He and his wife argued, he said, the greater part of yesterday and last night over her desire to seek employment outside their home. He said he had "become suspicious" of her about a month ago. After she was asleep, he told the officers, he took a .33-calibre revolver and shot her through the head.

TO BE LENIENT ABOUT ARREST FOR DRUNKENNESS

DETROIT, Dec. 23—(AP)—Police of Canadian cities across Detroit river have been instructed to follow a "golden rule" policy toward visiting celebrants who may become more or less helpless but refrain from unruliness between now and January 2.

The policy on ordinary days in the border cities is to arrest on charges of drunkenness those whose condition attracts the attention of policemen. For the next ten days, however, chief constables of Windsor, Walkerville, East Windsor, Sandwich and Riverside have instructed their men to be more lenient.

STEAMER IN DISTRESS 15 MILES SOUTH NANTUCKET

BOSTON, Dec. 23—(AP)—Commander H. R. Searls, in charge of the Eastern Division United States Coast Guard, said that the cutter Mojave had gone immediately to the assistance of the steamer Karmoy which reported itself in distress 15 miles south of Nantucket. He said that undoubtedly other coast guard vessels had also joined in the race to the Karmoy.

The Karmoy has a crew of 27 men aboard.

Snow And High Winds Along Atlantic Coast

Cold and Blizzard in the South Broke Records as Far Back as 1876.

(By The Associated Press)

Lying under a blanket of snow that ranged in thickness from inches to feet, most of the central and northern portions of the United States, save the Pacific northwest, looked forward to celebrating a white Christmas.

Until last night, when temperatures began to rise, it looked as though the white Christmas might extend into the south too, almost to the Gulf of Mexico.

Warmer weather, however, turned the snow—11 inches deep as far south as Shreveport, La.—into slush, and it was predicted that none would be left by tonight.

Most of the country today will be digging itself out of the havoc caused by storms. There was no snow in the Pacific northwest, but there was heavy rain and severe damage. And railroads and the telephone company experienced losses mounting to many thousands of dollars in the unaccustomed visit of cold and snow to the south.

The middlewest, just recovering from last week's blizzard had more snow Sunday night and yesterday, and trains on some lines in and out of Chicago were still hours late.

Snow and high winds lashed the Atlantic seaboard yesterday, from Cape Hatteras to Eastport, Me.

In New York city, sleet followed the snow, turning it to slush and making motor traffic slow and hazardous. There was enough snow, however, to give the street cleaning department a chance to try out its new chemical outfit that sprays calcium chloride on the snow and melts it.

The cold and blizzard that extended generally over the south, east of the Rockies, with the exception of Florida and a narrow fringe along the Gulf of Mexico, broke records extending back as far as 1876.

There was 17 inches of snowfall near Eldorado, Ark., 11 inches at Shreveport, La., 10 inches at Greenville, in the delta section, eight inches at Chattanooga, Tenn., and heavy icicles hanging from trees in Atlanta, Ga.

KILLED BEAUTY PARLOR EMPLOYE, THEN SHOT SELF

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Dec. 23—(AP)—Fannie Bosch, 17, a beauty parlor employe, was shot to death tonight as she was entering her home at Grove station near here. Michael Kowal, 36, of Baltimore, Md., charged by police with the shooting, turned the revolver on himself and inflicted probably fatal wounds before spectators could wrest the weapon from him.

Police said friends of the girl reported that Kowal had quarreled with Miss Bosch when she spurned his attentions and insisted on going about with young men in the neighborhood.

The girl, shot through the neck, was dead when a physician arrived. Kowal was taken to a hospital.

TESTIMONY IN THE IDAHO WHISKEY REBELLION CASE

COEUR D'ALENE, Idaho, Dec. 23.—(AP)—Attorneys for 28 alleged conspirators in the Mullan, Idaho, "whiskey rebellion case" today opened fire, seeking to impeach the testimony of government agents who had described wide open conditions in the mining town.

A. H. McGill, ex-bartender; Richard Cooper, undercover agent and D. B. Rogers, operative of the prohibition department, were recalled to the stand.

Defense attorneys attacked the character of Rogers, seeking an admission that he had offered drinks to women of Wallace, Idaho, while on duty and that he promised one of them "a good time" if she would go to Spokane with him.

HUCKING SURRENDERED ON FUGITIVE WARRANT

WAUTOMA Wis., Dec. 23.—(AP)—The mystery surrounding the financial activities of Elmer S. Huckins was presumably one step nearer solution today with his surrender here on a fugitive warrant.

He was released on $5,000 bond after accepting service on the warrant, based on a complaint made at Cedar Rapids, Iowa, charging him and his son, George, with obtaining money by false pretenses.

The failure of a Hancock, Wis., bank to redeem notes two Iowa investors held in the Huckins enterprises resulted in the charges against the Huckinses. In addition they face civil suits for 73,000, instituted by the two investors.

KILLED FOR REFUSING TO GIVE UP RING, GIFT OF LATE WIFE

NEW YORK, Dec. 23—(AP)—A refusal to part with an inexpensive ring given him by his late wife tonight led to the death of an elderly shoe store clerk at the hands of two holdup men.

The clerk, Elias Ellmond, 60, was in the upper Park avenue store where he was employed when the two men entered. After taking $75 from the cash register, one of the men saw the ring on Ellmond's finger and demanded it.

The clerk refused and a struggle followed in which he was shot twice and mortally wounded. The robbers fled without the ring.

PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION DENIED HARRY J. LEON

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Dec. 23—(AP)—The application of Harry J. Leon, of Hartford, Conn., for a preliminary injunction to restrain his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Leon, from transferring or encumbering property in which the husband claimed ownership, was denied today in a rescript filed in superior court by Judge Charles A. Walsh.

Mrs. Leon acquired the property in question through her own efforts, and those of her son and daughter, Judge Walsh ruled. Mrs. Leon conducts specialty shops at Westerly and Watch Hill.

TWO RUM RUNNERS SWEPT OVER NIAGARA FALLS

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y., Dec. 23—(AP)—Lives of two more rum smugglers have been taken by the Niagara river, it was agreed here tonight. Two men who came here recently from Detroit to engage in liquor running across the rapid stream from the Canadian province of Ontario are reported to have been swept to their deaths over Niagara Falls.

Christmas Cheer For Disabled War Vets

President Hoover Signs $15,950,000 Bill For Hospital Construction.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23—(AP)—Disabled World war veterans received welcome Christmas cheer today when President Hoover signed a bill to authorize construction of veterans' hospital facilities to cost $15,950,000.

Forecasting further projects for the care and treatment of veterans, the chief executive announced he had directed the medical council of the veterans' bureau to study the future hospitalization needs in view of prospective increases in incapacitated service men.

An increase of 4,491 beds is provided in the law enacted today. These will be distributed in 19 different building projects, four of which are to be neuro-phychiatric hospitals.

This measure brings the total expended and authorized for hospitals under the veterans' bureau to $104,435,942. Despite this increase, however, a report to congress from the veterans' bureau indicates that many veterans in contract hospitals will have to remain there until additional facilities are constructed.

The American Legion has sought the aid of President Hoover in an additional hospitalization program to cost $19,000,000. In that connection, the chief executive announced that he was glad to sign the bill today but indicated that the study should be conducted by the medical council of the veterans' bureau to knoow the extent of the needs before taking up a broader construction program.

The new hospitalization law specifically authorized $400,000 for a general hospital at Salt Lake City, Utah; $700,000 for a general hospital in West Virginia, $450,000 for aditional facilities at Northport, Long Island, and a new hospital at Somerset Hills, N. J., $1,900,000; new hospital in New York city, $1,000,000; new neuro-psychiatic hospital in western New York state and additional facilities at Aspinwall, Pa., $1,700,000. Others are to be erected in the south and west.

PRESIDENT AND MRS. HOOVER WINDOW SHOPPING

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23.— (AP) — Just as in homes throughout the land, the white house radiated cheer tonight as final preparations went ahead for the first Christmas of the President and Mrs. Hoover in the famous old mansion.

The snowy and sleety day found thousands of shoppers edging smilingly through the downtown sections for last-minute purchases. Mr. and Mrs. Hoover had already trod the crowded streets, having a good time window shopping.

The east room of the white house was dominated by a spruce tree towering toward the ceiling. In the apartment of the president upstairs, was a smaller tree decked in tinsel, other colorful Christmas trinkets and shining lights.

BURKE SOUGHT FOR SLAYING OF SEVEN CHICAGO GANGSTERS

CHICAGO, Dec. 23.—(AP)—An assassin disguised as a policeman who marched with a band of killers into a North Side garage last St. Valentine's day and slaughtered seven gangsters, was named as Fred Burke by a coroner's jury today.

He was the same Fred Burke whose quick trigger ended a traffic argument by killing a St. Joseph, Mich., policeman last week, and it was the trail of the St. Joseph killer that led to a closet in Burke's home where officers found the two sub-machine guns identified today as the weapons which were used to kill the seven henchmen of George Oran ten months ago.

SENATE LOBBY COMMITTEE WILL NOT CALL LEGGE

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23.— (AP) — Chairman Caraway of the senate lobby committee said today that Alexander Legge, chairman of the federal farm board, would not be called before the lobby committee to explain certain policies of the farm board.

"I have read Mr. Legge's statement," Caraway said. "It contains neither information nor explanation. If that is all he has to say, there is no reason wasting our time hearing him."

Seventy-five distinct allegations of perjury were made in the indictment.

SIX MEN WERE RESCUED FROM ICE-BOUND VESSEL

CHICAGO, Dec. 23.—(AP)—Six men, weak, hungry and shivering, let out feeble cheers today as they watched a tug battle through three inches of ice to get to them at a water intake crib five miles out in the lake.

They fed to and strengthened themselves with the provisions the tug brought—then they related a tale of chilly horror.

They told how the 66-mile gale of last week's blizzard put out their lights and fires, ruined their food, sucked the air out of their cold quarters, entombed them in ice and isolated them from help.

CRAZED MAN WAS SLAIN AFTER KILLING TWO MEN

CAMERON, Texas, Dec. 23.—(AP)—Running amuck with an automatic rifle, Anton Huebner, farmer, killed two men and wounded a third today before he was slain by an armed citizen who rushed to the scene.

Apparently seeking revenge for previous differences with a salesman for a motor company, Huebner appeared at the door of the motor company at the lunch hour and started shooting. Hubert Hefly, the dealer, and Constable Charles Sens were killed and Sheriff Baylock wounded before the rifle was silenced.

For 20 minutes Huebner ruled the downtown street after killing the two men, shooting at every one in sight. Three times he emptied and filled his rifle.

Two years ago Huebner was hit over the head with a heavy stick in a fight with a salesman for the motor company. His skull was fractured. The difference was finally adjusted in the courts. Police believed that brooding over it led Huebner to seek revenge.

Lives of scores of workers going to luncheon were endangered by the firing of the crazed man.

ASKS SOVIET AID IN SEARCH FOR MISSING AVIATOR

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23.—(AP)—Messages of the American government appealing unofficially to the soviet for assistance in the search for Lieut. Ben Eielson, American aviator lost for six weeks on the ice off the coast of Siberia, were flashed tonight directly to Moscow and two soviet ships in the vicinity where Eielson disappeared.

The message to Moscow was transmitted through Tass, the soviet news agency. The messages to the two ships were to be sent by Gov. Park, of Alaska, the state department having informed the interior department that it had no objection to the appeal for assistance.

Ignoring international usage, Secretary Wilbur, on the urgent and pathetic appeal of Vilhjalmar Stefansson, world famous Arctic explorer, sent a communication direct to the soviet capital.

The state department was not called upon to rule upon this message, as it was sent before that department was consulted.

NO IMMEDIATE ACTION ON RAILROAD CONSOLIDATION

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23.— (AP) — Prospects for early congressional consideration of legislation to facilitate general railroad consolidation were raised today, following the promulgation Saturday by the interstate commerce commission of a specific plan for wholesale unification of the country's transport system.

Senator Fess, republican, Ohio, who has a rail consolidation bill pending, announced that he would press it for action this session in the belief that new law is necessary to clear away obstacles to the program.

Some persons, closely associated with railroad and banking plans, were inclined to consider that years might elapse before any substantial portion of the rail lines treated by the plan would be put into shape for actual grouping. The initiative in merger action, it was pointed out, is not with the government but with heads of railroads.

CHICAGO, Dec. 23—(AP)— Chicago school teachers were cheered tonight with the news that they will get their mid-December pay checks tomorrow. The $3,000,000 needed to pay them will be taken from the school board's building fund. This announcement followed several days' intensive effort by school board members to raise the fund. The banks a few hours previously had delivered a final refusal to lend any more money, asserting that the schools offered no security and that the financial houses could not therefore legally accept the tax anticipation warrants offered.

He has also the full support of the local merchants who are acting through the chamber of commerce and many of whom will enter exhibits at the show. A new department of curios and antiques is expected to prove a strong interest-promoter. Exhibits for various departments have already been received from four different states.

This year there will be 20 door prizes given away instead of one. The prizes are all of desirable nature. The special premiums to be awarded exhibitors will consist of cash and merchandise.

The poultry department of the Connecticut Agricultural college, through Professor David E. Warner, will stage another of its interesting and helpful exhibits with a judging contest by the students. Professor Warner is a member of the entertainment committee, which includes: George C. Livesly, Nelson A. Daniels, P. J. Twomey, E. A. Anthony and D. D. Cavanaugh.

Experts who will lecture at this session will also be on hand throughout the run of the exposition to offer free advice on problems perplexing poultry keepers.

Secretary John J. O'Rourke of the chamber of commerce is in charge of the exhibition matters in the absence of the manager. Entry blanks for exhibitions may be procured at the Jordan Hardware, Willimantic Grain or Boston Grain companies, as well as at the chamber of commerce.

ANDOVER PRESENTS REASONS FOR KEEPING GRADE CROSSING

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Dec. 23.—Reasons for maintaining the grade crossing in the village of Andover were presented at a public utilities hearing held at Hartford this afternoon by First Selectman Raymond C. Palmer and Second Selectman Max Hutchinson of the town. The hearing was held in the office of the state highway commissioner. The town of Andover was represented by Attorney Samuel B. Harvey of this city. At a special meeting of the town held last Friday night it was unanimously voted to accept a plan for constructing a new highway through the village that would eliminate the two treacherous underpasses but would retain the grade crossing. The townspeople feel that the crossing is of necessity, especially to pedestrians in reaching the library, the Congregational church and the Case Fibre Co. About 90 per cent of the employes of the paper mill use the crossing.

Postmaster Frank M. Smith believed this morning that the high peak of the Christmas mail rush had been reached. Mail matter received Saturday evening and Sunday was added to today's influx. Clerks were kept on duty all day Sunday assorting mail in preparation for delivery this forenoon. They were assisted in this work by the carriers. Practically all of the ten regular carriers had assistants today in the form of boys drawing express wagons that were heavily laden. An average of 3,000 letters were delivered on the first trips with another load assembled from this morning's arrival of trains.

A new record for any one day's business was established at the Main street sub-station Saturday and at the main office the cancelling machine figures show that the number of letters stamped thus far is several thousand ahead of previous years. Some of this increase is due to the fact that over 95 per cent of Christmas cards mailed this year were contained in envelopes. Deliveries of parcel post matter by Carrier Dennis F. Haggerty and his assistants are averaging four truckloads a day.

The antics of Jason G. Snowden of Newton, Mass., when trying to pass Lieutenant Harman of the state police barracks in his automobile, Sunday evening, drew a fine of $7 and costs when the case was tried before Judge William H. Heald in the borough court Monday morning. Besides this, Snowden spent Sunday night in the lock-up. After Snowden had got by the lieutenant's car and the lieutenant a little later wanted to get past Snowden's car, Snowden apparently wanted to keep ahead and drove from one side of the road to the other as if he were intoxicated. A message from the lieutenant was at the barracks when Snowden came along and Officer Heigold flagged him. An examination of the car revealed that its headlights were defective, that the tail light was disconnected, there was no horn and the muffler was defective. Snowden was not intoxicated, but his car was in bad condition.

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WESTERLY, R. I., Dec. 23.—Judge Oliver H. Williams held special session of Third district court at 5 o'clock on Monday afternoon to consider the cases of alleged Christmas shoplifters, Anna Belknap, 463 1-2 Pine street, and Grace Kennedy, 13 Pallas street, both of Providence. They were arrested Sunday by Providence police and brought back from Providence by Chief of Police Thomas E. Brown, of Westerly.

Grace Kennedy was found guilty by Judge Williams and fined $75 on one count and $25 on a second with costs totaling $147.20, which she paid. She was represented in court by Attorney Chancirulo of Providence. During the hearing it developed that she had twice previously been placed on probation.

There appeared to be less evidence against Anna Belknap and the case against her was continued for sentence. The accused departed from the court before they could be held by Sheriff Fred F. Mitchell to answer to charges of shoplifting in Wakefield, R. I.

Sunday, Captain Cusick of the Providence police force interviewed Chief Brown, saying he checked up on two women Saturday but could not identify any goods that were believed to have been taken in that city, but learned that the women had been in Westerly. Chief Brown stated Monday that some of the articles in the possession of the two women had been identified by LaCiede Woodmansee, the Penny store and Montgomery Ward & Co.

After investigating the case, Chief Brown said that he had learned that the women left Westerly about 5:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon in an automobile driven by Louis Goulett of 13 Pallas street, Providence, but the police have been unable to locate her. It is claimed that the driver of the car had nothing to do with taking the goods.

The car occupied by the two women was badly wrecked near Haversham Saturday evening when it struck a tree. The automobile was towed in to a Haversham garage and, according to the investigation by Chief Brown, the women got a ride to Wakefield in one car and after stopping there secured another ride to Providence. In Providence a friend met them with another machine and took them to their home.

The goods, which were brought to Westerly by Chief Brown and Officer Charles Button, covered one of the large tables in the patrolmen's room and there was another suitcase of goods besides.

The Providence police made a check-up of the goods, which they reported to Chief Brown as having been found in the house of the Kennedy and Belknap women. Some of the articles alleged to have been found in Miss Belknap's house were worn and several articles were new.

It is claimed that some articles were also taken from Kenyon's department store in Wakefield.

John Harrington, 82, of Oxscossett, Westerly-Stonington road, arrested in Pawcatuck Sunday night by Officer George Seidel, was before Judge William A. Wilcox in Stonington town court Monday morning, having been lodged in the Liberty street lockup Sunday night. He entered a plea of guilty to a charge of intoxication and was sentenced to 30 days in New London county jail with payment of costs.

The annual Christmas observance of the employes of the South County Public Service Co. will be held Friday night at the High street building of the light and power company. There will be a decorated Christmas tree, the distribution of gifts, and refreshments will be served.

During this holiday week no rehearsals will be held by the Westerly Community chorus. Plans are being made for a Sunday afternoon concert at the United theatre early in January by the chorus members.

The Christmas gift of a sled can be used this year to advantage in Westerly for, on Monday forenoon, snow began falling. With several let-ups, the snow fell more or less rapidly until the ground was white. Rising temperature in the late afternoon turned the snow to rain and then to sleet and the streets and sidewalks for Christmas shoppers were soon in a very slippery condition.

A majority service was held in Masonic hall Monday night by Westerly chapter, Order of DeMolay for Boys, William Hustwit, master councilor. The parents and friends of the members were invited to attend this ceremony when two of the members, having reached their majority, 21 years of age, completed their membership.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Spooky's Sleep Is Disturbed

By Thornton W. Burgess

Mistakes are made without intent,
And good instead of ill is meant.
—Drummer the Woodpecker

Rat-a-tat-tat-tat! Spooky the Screech Owl sleepily blinked his eyes, shook his feathers out and was off in dreamland again. Rat-a-tat-tat-tat-tat! Spooky mumbled and he mumbled and he grumbled, but he didn't know what he was mumbling and grumbling about; he was too sleepy. Rat-a-tat-tat-tat! This time it seemed as if it were right on Spooky's ear. He opened his eyes and snapped his bill angrily and hissed. All was still. Spooky sat there and winked and blinked and blinked and winked and heard no more. Finally he settled himself and went to sleep again.

An hour later Drummer the Woodpecker was back. He had been frightened away by Spooky's hissing and the snapping of his bill. But he was sure that there were some more borers in that tree and he meant to have them in spite of Spooky. So as soon as he thought that Spooky was surely asleep again, Drummer returned and went to work on that tree. He found a soft place. The wood was very much rotted along that crack. Drummer didn't have to hammer hard to cut into it. He only had to tap lightly. He didn't pound hard enough to waken Spooky. It wasn't necessary. But suddenly, as Drummer's head flew back and forth, back and forth and that sharp bill of his made little chips or rotted wood fly this way and that way, that same sharp bill went right through into nothing. Drummer knew what that meant.

"Huh!" said Drummer to himself. "I've cut right through that wall. I've gone right through into that hollow. Well, I ought to find some grubs in here somewhere. I'll just cut a little bigger opening here and see what there is to be found."

Perhaps you know something of how Drummer felt. Perhaps you have some time dug a hole into a little cave and felt excited when you broke through into the cave. That is the way it was with Drummer. He kept pecking away and pecking away and making the hole larger and larger. Presently, as he squinted in at the hole he was making, he thought he saw a grub. Anyway, he saw something that looked like a grub. Drummer has learned by experience that the only way to make sure of a grub is to grab it the instant he sees it. So he grabbed now. Yes, sir, he did so.

Right away things began to happen. It was one of Spooky's claws of which he could see only a little, that had fooled Drummer. Now Spooky told him in no uncertain terms what kind of a mistake he had made. Spooky was up in his doorway, glaring out and hissing and snapping his bill, and also blinking for the sun was shining. The instant Drummer discovered his mistake he had flown to the next tree and dodged behind the trunk. Spooky had had only a glimpse of Drummer, but that glimpse had told him who it was who had been annoying him. He flew over to that tree and perched where he could watch for Dummer to come out from the back of the trunk.

Drummer did no such thing. Drummer simply flattened himself against the side of that tree and hung on. He wouldn't move until he was forced to. He would wait right there until Spooky moved first. Spooky did move first. He didn't like the sunlight, so finally he flew back and disappeared in his home in the hollow in the apple tree. Once inside, he realized for the first time how large an opening Drummer the Drummer returned and went to work on that tree.

Woodpecker had made. His home was quite spoiled. He would have to move now.

Spooky sighed. "I'll look around tonight, I surely will," said he. "I've got to get a new home and get it very quickly."

DANIELSON

AUGUSTA MAN NAMED CASHIER OF W. C. NAT'L BANK

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Dec. 23—Announcement was made this morning by President Nathan D. Prince of the election of Ralph H. Dunbar, an assistant treasurer of the Augusta Trust company of Augusta, Me., as cashier of the Windham County National bank of Danielson to succeed Francis E. Storer, recently elected president of the Thames Bank and Trust company of Norwich.

Mr. Dunbar is a native of Bangor and received his education in the public schools of that city.

He began his banking career in 1908, with the Merchants National bank of Bangor and worked through several departments of that institution. As one of the senior tellers he was delegated to do the work of assistant cashier. In 1914 he became manager of the Greenville branch of the Guilford Trust company. In 1922 he became identified with the Augusta Trust company, one of the largest commercial banks in Maine. In January, 1923, he was elected assistant treasurer of the company and has remained in that position up to this time. The Augusta Trust company has eight branches in its immediate territory, and to Mr. Dunbar was assigned the duty of supervising these branches. This has given Mr. Dunbar a wide experience in banking work and banking systems.

His acquaintance in banking circles is extensive. He is a member of the Maine group of the Massachusetts Safe Deposit association.

Mr. Dunbar is a Mason, being a member of St. Andrew's lodge, No. 83, A. F. and A. M., Mt. Moriah, R. A. C. chapter No. 6, Bangor council No. 5, R. and S. M., St John's commandery, No 3, K. T., all of Bangor; of General Knox chapter of the Rose Croix of Rockland, Me., Garrison Hill chapter, Eastern Star, No. 158, of Wiscasset, Me., and a member of the Civic club of Booth Bay Harbor and of the Augusta chamber of commerce.

Mr. Dunbar's family consists of his wife and one daughter. Mrs. Dunbar is the eldest daughter of Rev. Walter J. Yates, a Methodist minister who has held pastorates in Fall River, New London and Hazardville in this part of New England and at Bangor. Mrs. Dunbar is a graduate nurse of the Eastern Maine General hospital at Bangor. She is a member of Koussinoe chapter of the D. A. R. of Augusta and the Current Events club.

They are members of the South Congregational church of Augusta.

It is not stated just when Mr. Dunbar will take up his duties at the Windham County National bank, but it will be as soon after January 1, as is possible.

Incident to the town's paying a $300 damage claim for the killing of rabbits, many of them registered animals, by a pair of dogs, the town already reimbursed by the owner of the one dog that was caught, it is pointed out at the office of the selectmen that dogs have few privileges in this state when off the premises of their owners, and that any damage they may do may lead to expensive and embarrassing difficulties. Under a rigid enforcement of the law no dog, unless hunting, may be off its owner's premises unless on a leash.

Paul Gareau, an aerographer of the United States naval service, arrived here today from Honolulu to spend a twelve days' leave of absence with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Gareau, of Potter street. On January 6, he will be a member of a class taking up a course of study at the United States naval training station at Lakehurst, N. J. He has been in the service the past two years and for the past year has been stationed at Pearl Harbor, near Honolulu. As an aerographer preparing weather forecasts for aviators a daily duty is a flight at a height of 10,000 feet to take temperature and to make various observations. Mr. Gareau is a graduate of Killingly high school.

The mass of St. Cecilia will be sung at the last mass on Christmas day at St. James' church. The arrangement is as follows: Kyrie, choir; Christe, soprano solo, Mrs. Hazel Davignon; Gloria, choir; Qui Tollis, bass solo, Joseph Beaudoin; Credo, choir; Et Incarnatus, solo, Alpheric Meunier, and duet by Mr. Meunier and Henry Woisard; offertory: Nato Nobis, tenor solo, Henry Woisard; Santus, choir; Benedictus, solo, Mrs. A. Lagace; Agnus Dei, solos by Raymond Ballard and Messers. Beaudoin and Woisard. The sopranos of the choir are Mrs. Lena Briere, Miss Pauline Boulaine, Miss Florina Tetreault, Miss Blanche Tetreault, Miss Lorina Vincent, Miss Irene Regis, Miss Irene LaBonte, Mrs. Loretta Bartlett, Mrs. Eva Bodo, Miss Anita Buteau; altos, Miss Elizabeth Grennon, Miss Alice Bessette, Lillian Marchand, Mrs. Ray Bailey; tenors, Henry Woisard, Samuel Wilmot; bass, Joseph Beaudoin, Raymond Ballard.

At the 9 o'clock mass the solo numbers are to be: The Holy Mother Sings, soprano solo, Mrs. Lena Briere; L'Enfant de la Creche, duet, Mrs. Briere and Mrs. Bodo; L'Etoile de Noel, soprano solo, Miss Pauline Boulaine.

The choirs are under the direction of Mrs. Joseph Gareau, organist.

PUTNAM

W. J. JARVIS, PUTNAM POLICE CAPTAIN, IS DEAD

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Dec. 23—Captain William J. Jarvis, 31, for the past six years active head of the police department, died at his home at 393 School street at 6:30 o'clock this morning following an illness of six days. The death of the popular police official, a lifelong resident of this city widely known throughout this state and the states of Massachusetts and Rhode Island, where his duties as an officer of the law were continually directing him, came as a great shock to the community.

While Captain Jarvis' condition was regarded as critical Sunday, a slight improvement observed at an early hour this morning led attending physicians to hope for a quick recovery. The crisis came at three o'clock. Worn and fatigued, with a constitution no longer able to resist the disease Captain Jarvis lapsed into unconsciousness. He died a few minutes before 6:30 a. m. At his bedside were Fireman John Ryan of the Hook and Ladder company, Edward W. Mullan, business manager and lifelong friend, Rev. Ernest J. Bolleau, curate at St. Mary's church, who administerted the last rites of the church, and members of his family. Every effort was exhausted by Captain Jarvis' attending physician to stay the progress of the malady but to no avail.

News of the sad death of one of the city's most prominent citizens spread rapidly and within a few hours a shroud of gloom was cast over the entire city which tonight is mourning the loss of a citizen, father, public official and gentleman.

Captain Jarvis, besides possessing an unsurpassable record as a police official that made him a credit to the law enforcing organization which he headed, was an invaluable member of the community. His honesty, integrity, sound judgment and geniality to all with whom he came in contact gained and held steadfast friends for him. Only a few years after attaining manhood Captain Jarvis was called upon by the citizens of Putnam to don the shield and badge which he continued to wear until his death today.

William Joseph Jarvis was born in Putnam on April 5, 1898, the son of John J. and Phoebe (Lachance) Jarvis, the third youngest of five children. He obtained his education in the schools of the city and when a young man entered the employ of The Southern New England Telephone company as a lineman. He remained in this capacity until America's entry into the World war in 1917 when in company with his brother and many other young men from this city dropped his peace time tools to take up the weapons of war. Captain Jarvis enlisted in the coast artillery, going out with Battery B of the 56th Coast Artillery of Danielson, to Fort Wright, N. Y., to receive preliminary training before going overseas. In France for 18 months, Captain Jarvis participated in every American offensive and came out unscathed from the battle of the Argonne forest. In recognition of his war record Captain Jarvis received two decorations.

Returning to Putnam, Captain Jarvis began again as a lineman. In 1920 the common council passed an amendment to the city charter providing an additional patrolman for the police department. Officer Jarvis was selected from a large number of applicants, beginning his career as a policeman during former Captain John H. Bulger's term of office, and soon became an efficient and capable officer. In 1922 Captain Jarvis resigned his position to accept another as an agent of the state department of domestic animals. In June 1923 a month after Captain Remi Delage had met with accidental death Jarvis was appointed head of the police department. He survived three administrations and his re-appointment in January was certain.

When first made captain of police, Captain Jarvis was but 25 years of age and to him went the honor of being the nation's youngest police captain. On July 3, 1925 Captain Jarvis was united in marriage with Miss Anna Chilkott, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Chilkott of Eastford. One child, a daughter Marion, now two years old, was born of this union.

Captain Jarvis was a picture of health, possessing a rugged physical frame, and was thought to be in a state of perfect health. On Tuesday evening while walking to his home, the captain slipped on a patch of ice sustaining a severe ankle sprain. He was unable to report at his office at police headquarters the following morning and at noon was confined to his bed under physician's care. Complications developed and the injured ankle swelled, the inflammation spreading to the knee. On Wednesday a slight cold which the captain had contracted earlier in the week coupled with the first affliction lessened his vitality and then came a pneumonia attack. Captain Jarvis until the last fought a game but losing battle.

Besides his wife and daughter, Captain Jarvis is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Jarvis of Livery street, two sisters, Mrs. John J. Maher of New Haven and Miss Mary Jarvis, at home, and two brothers Adolph of Pomfret Landing and Ernest, who makes his home with his parents.

Politically Captain Jarvis was a member of the republican party. He was a member of St. Mary's church and fraternally was associated with the Putnam Lodge of Elks, Cargill Council K. of C., Franco-American Foresters, Putnam Aerie of Eagles, Canadian Athletic club, Anselm Mayotte post, American Legion and the Albert J. Breault post, V. F. W. Captain Jarvis at the last convention was named vice president of the Connecticut State Police association and was a member of the New England Association of Police Chiefs.

SHEFFLER CHILD DIES FROM HIS INJURIES

PUTNAM, Dec. 23—Vincent, 13 months old son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Sheffler, 67 Myrtle avenue, Webster, Mass., died early this morning at the Day Kimball hospital of injuries received in an auto crash early Sunday evening on Nichols hill in Thompson. Francis, three year old brother of Vincent, who is suffering from a compound fracture of the skull, direct cause of his infant brother's death, at a late hour this afternoon had not regained consciousness and continues on the hospital danger list with chances for recovery extremely doubtful. Bernard, aged 7 was at the hospital today. A late report was to the effect that he had improved during the day. He is suffering from a severe scalp wound.

The citizens of the town of Eastford will be called to executive session at a special town meeting to be held on Monday to see if the town will vote to construct under state aid 1.6 miles of road extending from the Woodstock town line at Kenyonville, through North Ashford to the Union town line. The matter will be given immediate action, it is understood, in the event the town will vote to assume all obligations for the repair and maintainence of a section of state aid road 1308 feet in length, on the old road leading to Putnam. An additional provision has been inserted in the call that will require the state to build a similar portion of highway on the Kenyonville-Union road. A legal notice issued by the selectmen of the town will be found in another section of this edition. The matter is favored with public support and it is believed the propositions will ben nanimously accepted by the voters.

SAN DIEGO, RAINLESS CITY SINCE LAST MARCH

The Ross party has reached San Diego, Cal. Mr. Ross writes under date of Dec. 14:

We left El Centro Wednesday morning for this city. At El Centro the inhabitants do not wish rain, and the people here are praying for rain. We were anxious to reach our destination before the prayers were answered. At the chamber of commerce they told us it had not rained in San Diego since last March.

The reason for anxiety was that we would have to cross the coast range of mountains with some steep grades and if it were wet we might have some trouble in making the grade.

From El Central to the foot hills we passed through a fine rich farming country, oranges and lemons and several date farms. The date palms are very picturesque. Fresh dates were for sale on the roadside.

After getting into the mountains we came to the Devil's canyon. This canyon is well named and for miles we twisted and turned. Sometimes we could look back and see the road we had traversed a half hour before. In getting through this pass we faced in all directions, north, east, south and west, although our general direction was west.

We were obliged to keep to the right of the trail (road) for the angles were so sharp that two machines meeting would have some difficulty in passing each other.

We reached an altitude of over 5,000 feet and at the highest point it was rather cold. The federal government is building a fine road through this range and we had to detour several times. At one place we wondered how the traffic was controled, until we discovered on a high mountain a small hut and a man with flags signalling to the men at each end of the detour.

In these mountains were small valleys, with a house or two and cattle grazing on the mountain sides and in the washes. I told you in a former letter about the "dips" in the roads. Mr. Kendall of Cranston's in Norwich, warned us of these "dips." We found some of these dips were deep with very steep sides and in Arizona some were three hundred feet wide. They were so deep that a machine ahead of us would go out of sight for a moment.

If we had run into a rainstorm we would have had a hard time on some of these detours. It would have been impossible to have gotten out of these dips as the water would have covered the carburator, and the only way would have been to wait until the water had run off.

In the story of "The Winning of Barbara Worth," the scene is laid in these mountains and the desert to the east. The reason the people of El Centro are so content without rain is that all their land is irrigated. If it does not rain or snow I think even El Centro people would be out of water. The farther a river flows in Arizona or southern California, the smaller it becomes. Evaporation is so great and the land is so porous that the water disappears.

As we neared this city we came to truck farms, acres of tomatoes, peas, string beans, onions, etc. In a great many of these fields were oranges and lemon trees. On some hill sides were vineyards, the grapes had been picked and some of the vines had been trimmed to just a stump. I think you and Ed. Burkson would have enjoyed the trip through the mountains on account of the flowers on the roads, flowers and shrubs I did not know. The trees were in full leaf and so very green! On some of these trees were vines of the morning glory, blue and twenty or thirty feet high. Will tell you in a day or two how we are situated here.

ROSS.

Christmas morning at St. Mary's church at 10:30, the musical program will include: Asperges me, Domini, plain chant—Fourth Mass in honor of St. Elizabeth, composed by M. At benediction, O Salutaris; Tantum Ergo; Adeste Fidelis; solo, Agnus Dei, by Mrs. C. D. Collins; Kamennoi Ostrow, Rubenstein, played on violin by Peter Cooper and organ by James Olson. Organist and chorister, James Olson.

At nine o'clock the special music will be sung by a choir of seventy-five children, under direction of Sister Cecelia.

A Storm That Meant Business

The old weather guard and the anxious health experts were chuckling, late Monday evening, for the reason that the coming Christmas is not to be a green one. The fourth snowstorm of the season, Monday, laid right down the white blanket over all the surrounding territory, with no weather change the least mite probable, that will lift it.

Up to Monday evening shopping in the local stores has been brisk with 95 per cent of the trading done for cash. Today, (Tuesday) the bargains in foodstuffs and general merchandise will be well worth considering. A couple of hundred fine turkeys were retailed Saturday and Monday, for 50 cents a pound and lower. Three years ago, one market sold 22 native birds for 80 cents per pound. Strangely, it seems more than 100 Griswold raised turkeys were not retailed from home counters. The demand for chickens, ducks and geese is reported not up to recent years, with turkey and roasting pork sales well in excess of 1928, and from 5 to 15 cents per pound cheaper.

Mr. and Mrs. B. R. Gardner enjoyed a week end visit from their son, Richmond Gardner, of New York city.

RECORD CHRISTMAS MAIL HANDLED AT LOCAL OFFICE

Postmaster W. T. Crumb said Monday evening that during the 20 years he has been connected with the postal service at the local office, he has never noted so great an increase in the volume of mail handled, reckoning from any one year, in comparison with the next. The peak load was received Sunday morning, with the largest dispatches all day Saturday. This office has handled approximately 10,000 Christmas packages, including 675 sacks received. The greeting cards sent out and handled locally have averaged from five to eight thousand a day since the rush started. The postal men predict a clean-up by Tuesday night.

LET HIS DOGS RUN LOOSE—JOSEPH WOJCHUK IS FINED

Joseph Wojchuk, found guilty in Griswold town court Monday morning of allowing two vicious dogs to run loose in the road, was given a fine and costs amounting to $15.80, by Judge John T. Barry. The special domestic animals agent, Mr. Genung, of Hartford, and W. R. Palmer, local dog warden, were in court, where they declared that on account of numerous complaints they were bound to take legal action. Two witnesses, Daniel Connolly and Frank Medick, testified for the prosecution. A few weeks ago, Wojchuk, when legal notice was served on him, was warned to keep the dogs tied up. With this order he failed to comply.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Arthur C. Ladd

Mrs. Ida Browning Ladd, 71, widow of Arthur C. Ladd, entered into rest Monday morning, after several weeks' illness, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Perkins, on East Main street. Mrs. Ladd was the daughter of Welcome A. and Cecelia Williams Browning. She was born in Griswold and her home has always been here. She was a member of the Congregational church and its societies, and of Dorcas Circle of the King's Daughters. She was a charter member of Anne Brewster Fanning chapter, D. A. R., and was a member of the committee appointed by the chapter which erected the monument to the Revolutionary soldiers in Pachaug in 1902, the first public monument erected in Griswold. Mrs. Ladd's husband was a former postmaster in Jewett City. She is survived by cousins, the three nearest being Mrs. Lydia Church of this place, Mrs. Benjamin Lewis and Frank Brewster, of Cliff street, Norwich.

James Duggan, of Dedham, Mass., and William Duggan of Charlotte, N. C., spent Sunday at T. B. Duggan's. William Duggan was accompanied by a graduate nurse, who came with him to care for his youngest daughter on the return trip. The seven months old baby has been in a private hospital in Norwich since its birth, as the two older children had whooping cough, and it was not deemed advisable to take the baby home.

Fred Maynard returned Monday evening after eighteen days' stay in a private hospital in New London, following a surgical operation. He is much improved in health.

The parish supper and New Year's meeting at the Congregational church is not to be held until January fourth.

CONSOLIDATING THE ROADS

Railroad consolidation has been in the making for many years, and even with the announcement of its plan by the interstate commerce commission the end is not yet.

It is too much to expect that every one of the railroads is going to be satisfied with the plan that has been worked out by the commission. It is true that the commissioners have all affixed their signatures with certain reservations, but it can be expected that there will be both approval and disapproval from the respective systems.

In this part of the country there doesn't promise to be any objection. The New Haven system is left as it is. It has not sought combination with others and it has not desired to be gobbled up. It is, therefore, in a position to say "thank you" to the commission and let the other systems answer for themselves.

Under the transportation act the plan of the commission must be submitted to the railroads and hearings held upon it. Until some new plan was submitted there was nothing to discuss. Now something has been provided to talk about, something to aim at with the view of keeping or killing it. Doubtless the commission is ready to hear much in all directions for, from the length of time that has been devoted to the production of the plan, it becomes evident that it has been a complicated matter and the difficulty in getting a harmonious report from the commission has been real.

By the presentation of this plan the commission is making such modification of the plan of grouping which has been in existence for the past eight years as it deems desirable and awaits ratification or condemnation. There have been demands for a new grouping and there has been a feeling often expressed that it was not forthcoming as quickly as desired. That criticism has been eliminated now and further discussions relative to its work must hinge on approval or disapproval. Efforts to create groupings that would be favorable to certain systems have been blocked by the commission but now the way has been opened for dealing with the nation-wide problem of consolidation, even though it was not so many years ago that any move of that kind would have been severely frowned upon.

A NEW REAR ADMIRAL

We have a new rear admiral. Commander Richard E. Byrd has been promoted to that rank in the navy by act of congress and the approval of President Hoover. He becomes at the present time the youngest rear admiral in the service, but at 40 he is three years older than Rear Admiral Peary was when he was granted a similar honor.

This honor is conferred because of the distinguished service he has rendered in flying to the south pole. This was preceded by a flight to the north pole and by a flight across the Atlantic, but the same signal success that marked those undertakings has been attained in his conquests in Antartica. Even though he was honored by a promotion at the time that recognition was given to his north pole flight, when he was also awarded a congressional medal of honor, it is perfectly evident that he has rendered the same valuable service in his latest undertaking.

The journey to the south pole was undertaken with full regard for the dangers confronting those going into that region. It was marked by the most careful and thorough preparations. It was not started with any false conceptions of the risk or the penalty in case of accident. It was planned with the idea of succeeding and it has worked out as planned. In itself, it means much to Byrd and those who accompanied him on the various stages of the journey. There is no overlooking the fact that he had to rely upon the assistance of others, quite the same as did those who pushed on to the poles by sledge, but it was all accomplished under a leadership that has been most conspicuous from the very start.

When Senator Swanson of Virginia, the home state of the new rear admiral, declares that Byrd's achievements "constitute the most remarkable combination of adventure and discovery in this age," it will be admitted by the country quite as fully as it was by congress in voting the promotion. We have the feeling that for most people there would be no temptation in such a promotion and all that goes with it to undertake the accomplishment of any one of the outstanding feats of the intrepid explorer and flier.

THE DEFECTIVE MACHINES

According to a survey which has been made in the state of Pennsylvania, there are about 3,000 machines which will probably never be licensed again. This is disclosed by the motor vehicle commissioner during the yearly examination of cars and indicates the contribution that is being made to the safety of the streets and highways by removing the unfit.

Inasmuch as there were about 87 per cent of the cars examined which were found to be mechanically perfect, it is evident that in the big state of Pennsylvania there are machines in all stages of fitness.

Perhaps it is too much to expect that all cars would be up to requirements. It is by no means the experience in any state where periodical examinations are held to find all the cars fit. There are always those which are perfect. There are those which are in such condition that they are not safe to drive, while there are plenty of those which have defects of one kind or another, some being slight and others serious.

Unless there is some such method of checking these cars up it is evident that they are not contributing the degree of safety to the highways that they should. They are likewise not giving the protection to the occupants that should be desired by them. Some of these defects are unknown to the owners and they are only too glad to learn of the fact, while there are those who know there is trouble and yet make no effort to have it remedied.

Remove 3,000 unsafe cars from the highways of Pennsylvania and adjoining states and oblige the owners of cars with unsatisfactory brakes, bad lights and any other defects to correct them and there will automatically be eliminated many of the accidents which occur in traffic, at intersections or in straight driving where it is impossible to meet emergency conditions.

Inasmuch as the unfit cars are regarded as a menace to the highways, it also follows that those which are partially unfit can contribute to trouble because of such defects. Thus the steps to remove such conditions deserve the highest commendation.

RAIDING THE COUNTRYSIDE

Inasmuch as there is none too much attention paid to laws where it is a matter of life and death for those who disregard them, it is possibly too much to expect that such a thing as legislation forbidding the taking of Christmas greens from the property of others would be respected. It is, of course, at this season of the year in particular that a real test can be made of sentiment in this direction.

It makes little difference what season of the year it is, there is almost always something to be found in the fields or the woods of the country which those of the city like. To many people, the removal of that something from the property of another has become more or less of a habit. The countryside is looked upon as common property, something to be invaded at will for fishing or hunting and for the removal of trees and, in too many instances, the produce, which the owner has been raising to replenish his larder or fill out his pocketbook.

It may not mean much to the owner if someone jumps over a wall and removes some ground pine, cuts a small tree or breaks off some laurel branches, but it does mean much in the long run if someone does it almost every day and in doing it gradually knocks down the stone wall, or breaks the fence, and possibly removes that which the owner has been relying upon for his own use or for marketing purposes.

It is bad enough when individuals help themselves without any thought of asking permission, but it is much worse where they make such raids for the purpose of selling what they obtain. It is because of this combination of reasons that legislation had to be resorted to and those who disregard it invite all the trouble they experience.

NO KISSES OR GIFTS

It seems a bit strange when notice is given to the effect that Christmas gifts and kisses are barred at the federal prison at Atlanta. It attracts attention because it would appear that they were innocent enough and could do no harm. But experience teaches otherwise.

Not only down at Atlanta, but right here at Wethersfield, it has been found that there are those on the outside of prisons who are determined to disregard regulations. They make up their minds that they are going to smuggle forbidden articles into the prisons for relatives or friends. It may be dope, it may be firearms or some instrument by which they can effect their escape. And they use every conceivable method to accomplish their purpose and hoodwink the authorities.

Only recently it was found that a mother was trying to convey a metal tube containing some opium derivative to her son at the state prison while kissing him. It dropped from her mouth and was discovered. Similar experiences at Atlanta have apparently made it necessary to eliminate all such chances of eluding the guards, or of bribing the guards.

It is a sorry picture when members of a family think they are conferring a favor upon their relatives by smuggling dope to them, when dope may have been one reason for their entrance upon a criminal career, but when they face the order against kisses and Christmas gifts at Atlanta they have no one to blame except those who have made it impossible to trust those who undertake to bring kisses and gifts. With the restriction of presents to gifts of money, which will be added to the accounts of the respective prisoners to be drawn upon as they desire, the ordinary practice of prison smuggling should be broken up.

WASHINGTON AFFAIRS

(Special to The Bulletin)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23.—Washington is again a deserted village, so far as congressional delegations go. Neither Connecticut nor any other state within easy reach of the capital will find members of its delegation lingering here during the two weeks' holiday recess, except they have leased homes here and are making it headquarters till the end of the session, which probably will not be before the first of June. Senator Walcott has leased the Hoover home, Senator Bingham is established here, with plenty of room for his family of seven sons; but Representative Tilson and Mrs. Tilson will "keep the home fires burning" up in their big New Haven house, and all other members of the house delegation from Connecticut will spend the holidays at home.

When congress reconvenes Jan. 6, a hard-working session will begin. Usually an election year, the session ends about the first of June, as one-third of the senate and the entire membership of the house come up for election next fall, unless they decide to end their service in those bodies at the close of the present term. So far as known, the retirement of Senator Gillett of Massachusetts is the only announced or expected retirement from the New England congressional delegation, although it is not expected Senator Gould of Maine will be a candidate for re-election. The New England delegation has a remarkable record of being a friendly delegation, working in unison and holding committee positions of great importance; supporting the president and holding a clean record for efficiency and fairness.

All during the Hoover campaign we heard much about whether it was to be as Herbert Hoover, or Herbert C. Hoover, that he would head the ticket. The "C" stands for Clark, and during Mr. Hoover's term as secretary of commerce he is said to have signed himself as Herbert C. Hoover. But when he became candidate for president he dropped the middle name or initial, which by the way, was his mother's maiden name, and his name as candidate was Herbert Hoover. On the dropping of the middle name he followed the pace set by 21 out of the 31 chief magistrates, according to persons who have been through the records. As the list runs it shows that John Quincy Adams was the first president to use three names; but perhaps that was because the new country abounded with John Adamses who were descendants of the same ancestor as the president, so it was wise to be distinctive and keep the middle name of Quincy. William Henry Harrison was the next "three name" president. Then came James Knox Polk; he was followed by Taylor, Fillmore, Pierce, Buchanan, Lincoln and Johnson, each using only his first name, before the list was again broken by the entrance of Rutherford B. Hayes, Garfield and Arthur in succession. Then came five presidents using the first name. They were Cleveland, Harrison, McKinley, Taft and Roosevelt. Taft broke the list, so did Harding, but Wilson, Coolidge and Hoover not only used merely their first names, but actually dropped their middle name in order to do so.

The annual Christmas dinner of foreign students at the capital was, as usual, held under the auspices of the world-fellowship committee of the Y. W. C. A., with other foreign-born guests present. In national representation the event proved a sort of world court affair. The musical programme followed that course, as a portion of the following list shows: There was a Mexican dance by Miss Sedgwick, with Jose Tercero as accompanist; then came a group of Chinese songs by Miss Yah Chaun Wang; Miss Taiso Stednichenko told a Russian Christmas story; Antonio Diaz and Mr. Zaffiri played a duet with a Filipino guitar and bandena as instruments. Nations represented at the dinner included the United States, China, Japan, Philippines, Denmark, Switzerland, England, Costa Rica, Germany, Spain, Canada, Russia and Mexico.

The guests were students attending the several universities of the capital, studying at the library of congress, or pursuing some special studies at various schools hereabouts.

Representative Joe Crail—that is the way he lists himself in the Congressional Directory—is very proud of the fact that he is a twin, and that "Brother" and he are as much alike as two peas. He tells the story of how, when they both entered the army in the World war, they made Joe a corporal and his brother Charles a sergeant, so there should be a difference in their chevrons in order that the commanding officers could tell which was which. Crail spins many a yarn about the mistakes made by friends and clients when the brothers were law partners out in California. They always dressed alike, so carried out to the letter what their friends said about "you can't tell one from the other." Brother Charles is now dean of the Los Angeles superior court.

The safe passage through congress of the $10,000,000 supreme court building bill is a tribute to New England's determination that the highest judicial body in the nation should be suitably housed. It was Senator Moses of New Hampshire who introduced the bill; it was Senator Keyes, also of the Granite state, who as chairman of the public buildings committee, brought the bill out, and sponsored its passage. Senator David I. Walsh of Massachusetts and Senator Gould of Maine are members of that committee. Keyes is a member of the special commission appointed to have control of the erection of the structure, and to top all, former President Taft, now of Connecticut, has been and will continue to be a leading power in all plans and the construction of the building, in which he will hold the place of highest honor, as chief justice of the supreme court.

The rooms now occupied by the court are of historic interest as the original senate chamber of the capitol, but are utterly inadequate, being small, pinched and restricted in size and equipment. The new structure will be ample and magnificent.

Stories That Recall Others

Impatient.

Like all small boys, Jack is most bored and intolerant with the love scenes in the motion pictures he favors with his presence. The other night, in the midst of a fervent and rather prolonged wooing, he muttered sotto voice: "Well, kiss her and get it over with!"

Splinters.

Mother was dressing a chicken, and Jane, age 4, was close at hand with the usual number of questions. The feathers had been removed, but the pin feathers were numerous and much scraping was necessary.

"Oh, mother," exclaimed Jane, "How did the chicken get all those splinters in it?"

IN THE FOG

Barbara jabbed the turkey viciously with the long spears of her cooking fork. In two hours it would be ready for the big Thanksgiving dinner. And in those two hours she had a hundred things to do before her horde of hungry relatives arrived. She must make the gravy for the juicy bird now on its way to luscious brownness, prepare fruits and vegetables, jell the cranberries, mix the biscuit, peel the potatoes, bake the mince pies.

"And all this trouble for a crowd of selfish people, who won't appreciate it a bit—parasites at home throughout the year, who expect to come here each Thanksgiving," Barbara reflected savagely."

"There's fat Uncle Ed," she thought. "One of the town's richest men. His obesity is only one sign of his selfishness. He's too lazy even to play golf." Uncle Ed was sure to consume a fourth of the turkey.

"And there's his equally fat wife, Aunt Kate," Barbara's exasperation grew, "who wears her diamonds to breakfast and goes to Florida winters for the health of her pet Pekingese. What did she ever do to deserve her good luck? She's so bound up in herself she thinks the earth has a population of one.

"And there's Cousin Jim, attending the university here and playing around with some flapper, wasting the money his poor mother works so hard to give him. The selfish scamp! I'd put him to work if I were his mother!"

As for Cousin Elizabeth, some of the women at last Thursday's Drama league, in Barbara's presence, had criticized the extravagance of her pretty young cousin, who went to England to visit her family when her husband, every one knew, couldn't afford a new winter coat.

"What a collection of smug, self-sufficient pharisees! Every one of them is living in a fog!" Barbara's innermost thoughts accused them as she completed setting the table for seventeen.

A sharp ring brought her to the door and into the bearish embrace of Cousin Jim, the first arrival.

"Barbara, you old dear!" he exclaimed. "It was bully of you to have us. I've a surprise for you." And he stood aside to exhibit a small bit of feminity hidden behind his big coat. "Meet the wife!" Barbara, completely surprised, welcomed her new cousin-in-law. Then Jim related how, by doing extra work at the university, he had won an appointment to the faculty for next year.

"And best of all," he said, "we're going to bring mother down to live with us. She's sure worked hard to see me get a place like this——" But, Cousin Jim was interrupted by the arrival of Uncle Ed and Aunt Kate, preceded into the house by their chauffeur carrying Mink Lo, the toy Pekingese.

"I was so afraid we were going to be late," babbled Aunt Kate, removing her snowy furs. "We've simply driven all over town this morning taking Thanksgiving baskets. It was such fun for Minggy Lo——"

Uncle Ed, as he returned from dispatching Jones, the chauffeur, broke into his wife's narration.

"That Jones is a mighty nice fellow," he said to Barbara. "He's trying to raise three kids on what I pay him for driving my car. He doesn't know it yet but I've paid the mortgage on his bungalow as a Thanksgiving present. And I'm going to send his three kids——"

But Barbara had flown to the kitchen. She had barely had time to reach the ice cream freezer when Cousin Elizabeth, just arriving, burst in upon her.

"Oh, Barbara, I've the most marvelous news," she said excitedly. "You know when I went to England I was racking my brain to think how a wife could help her struggling young husband. And I found the way! I ransacked the old furniture stores in the English villages for antiques and I've just sold a box-car full of it to an American dealer who gave me ten times what I paid for it. Why, Barbara, what's the matter—you look positively ill——"

But Barbara, trying to conceal a telltale expression of astonishment and chagrin, had vanished into the dining room with an armful of plates.

Ten minutes later, when a flock of hungry relatives were joking, laughing her happy Thanksgiving dinner table and gorging themselves around Barbara was embarrassed to find Uncle Ed fixedly gazing at her.

"Barbara," he said between helpings of turkey, "we've all been so busy talking about ourselves since we got here that you haven't had a chance to wedge in a word. Tell us, for a change, what you've been doing, besides cooking up the best dinner we ever ate."

"Why, I—I——" Barbara began and stopped, bewildered. Her unvoiced criticisms of them welled up, almost choking her. What had she been doing, indeed, that was worth mentioning?

"Why," said Barbara quizzically, "you really want to know? I've—I've just been living in a fog!"—Chicago News.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Christmas

Mr. Editor: This is the one birthday that is observed the world over, perhaps the one day when those who have wandered away from home and friends return and enter into a few brief hours of happiness. Many families, that have been separated, meet again and see those loved ones who are again united. We meet old friends and we talk of things that have happened before, and it seems to make our very hearts grow lighter, as we look upon the face of those we love. Some we miss, for they have gone ahead. What wonderful confusion we listen to, when in the early hours of the morning the children steal down the stairs to see what Santa Claus has brought them! What exclamations of delight take possession of them! You try to stop the noise but you might just as well try to stop the wind, and I dont think you want it to be otherwise. The older ones seem to be invested with the same spirit. May this spirit abide with you, dear reader both during the holiday season and throughout the coming New Year.

Even the earliest Americans, the Indians, seem to have had some traditions about the coming of the great Manitou, and how he came from the happy hunting grounds and walked upon the earth and wherever his feet had trod there grew the most beautiful flowers, and he filled the streams and ponds with fish, and the woods with wild game to feed his children. Doesn't this seem like one giving to the children our presents that all look for. And we love to give to the ones we love and all this is but a reflection of our giving. How many happy memories all this awakens. Yet there may be someone who was with us a year ago, and is now in the land of the blest. What a wonderful day; how the old house echoes with the voice of the children. While even the older ones catch the spirit of the occasion and become for the few brief hours again just children. We listen to the children as they race through the house, playing some imaginary game. What a racket. You can't bear to stop them, for you think it was only yesterday when you, too, went through the same game and perhaps the loving old grandmother will tell you, "Well, if they did not play and were sitting down so quiet we would think they weren't well." So let them play for the evening of their life will come soon enough. And yet it gets on your nerve, and perhaps you give to those children the love that was denied you in your childhood days. You think what is life without the love of those children for it is like a wilderness, with the sunshine hidden behind the clouds. All laughter is stilled, you are living in a frozen world. But when Christmas comes every one seems to put on a new expression; you see it in others, and others see it in you.

All these thoughts sing to us in our memory and yet with all the happiness we have we stop and think there may be some poor and needy who are in need of our help of even a kind word. And when Christmas comes to you with all its meaning, pass along the sunshine of your happiness. It only costs an effort, but the thought that you have done a kind act will bring sunshine to you in many ways.

Here is a tribute to the greatest day of the whole year, by a writer of Pasadena, Cal., Mrs. Mabel Martin:

May the Giver of gifts give unto you
That which is Good, that which is True
The will to help, the courage to do.
A heart that can sing, the whole day through
Whether the skies be gray, or whether blue—
May the Giver of gifts give these to you.

What sentiment is in the above. A perception of things beautiful and rare—sunshine and happiness.

Did you ever notice that the things that bring us closer to happiness have a laugh in them? Notice the sunshine, the birds, the flowers and the children, and notice the pleased look on the face of those whom you meet. Christmas brings all this, for this is the greatest day in the lives of mankind.

Christmas will soon be here again. The joyous fact is proclaimed to the entire world by the happy faces of the children who look forward to this as their day. Even more is it shown in the hearts of men where reigns a strange warmth of feeling and goodwill to all—the Christmas spirit. And to everyone of my friends in and around the Rose of New England, I wish a very merry Christmas and a happy New Year, with prosperity, health and happiness.

C. H. "DAD" SHAW.
Passaic, Dec. 20, 1929.

The Spirit Of The Constitution

Mr. Editor: In your issue of December 2nd you publish a synopsis of the joint debate between John Sergeant Wise, Jr., and Professor Albert Levitt of Redding, on the Spirit of the Constitution. The latter appears to have confined himself largely to the preamble of the constitution, and to have applied its broad general language much as your city attorney might with propriety do in considering the same words in connection with a municipal ordinance. Lord Bacon in his "Maxims of the Law," (Regula X) tells us that "all words, whether they be in deeds or statutes, or otherwise, if they be general and not express and precise, shall be restrained unto the fitness of the matter and the person."

Limiting this communication to his final proposition, for the same principles apply to all of his discussion, he says:

"'Promote the general welfare.' Here we come to the crux of the entire discussion. Does prohibition promote the general welfare? It does."

I have no purpose to discuss his conclusion. That is a matter on which men and women may fairly disagree. I merely desire to show that the "general welfare" clause did not contemplate the personal well-being of individuals, but the well-being of the states.

Jefferson (4 Jefferson's Works, 368) in a letter to Mr Justice Johnson in June 1823) says: "The capital and leading object of the constitution was to leave with the states all authorities which respected their own citizens only," and he asks: "Can it be believed * * * that the states intended to surrender the authority of preserving order, of enforcing moral duties, and restraining vice within their own territory? * * * Can any good be effected by taking from the states the rule of their citizens and subordinating it to the general authority?"

George Ticknor Curtis, a ripe scholar and the author of Constitutional History of the United States, in a lecture before the students of the law school of the University of Georgetown in 1886, deals with this particular phrase. He calls attention to the fact that it is used in the preamble simply to assert "the grand objects which the people aim to secure by the constitution," and not as a grant of powers and referring to section 8 of article one, continues: "Here the words general welfare are used again; and, strange to say, there are persons who suppose that this clause contains a grant of authority to tax in order to promote the personal welfare of every man, woman and child in the United States. * * * The clause grants to the congress a power to tax the people for three special purposes: First, to pay the debts of the United States; second, to provide for the common defense of the United States; third, to provide for the general welfare of the United States. In every one of these special purposes for which the taxing power is to be exercised, 'the United States' means the political corporation known as the United States, and not the individual inhabitants of the country. The debts that are to be paid are the debts of the government; the common defense that is to be provided for is the defense of the government in all those matters in which it has duties of defense to discharge for the whole country; the general welfare that is to be provided for is the well-being of the government in all those matters of which it has special cognisance, and in respect to which its efficiency concerns the whole Union."

In a subsequent paragraph, Mr. Curtis says: "Now look at the stupendous communism that is wrapped up in the taxing power on the supposition that it includes a power to tax for the promotion of the welfare of individuals. * * * If one of those legitimate objects is the welfare of individuals, or masses, or classes, or of the whole people, the two houses of congress and any president acting together can divide up all the property in the country upon the plea that a general division will promote the general welfare. By this process this government could devour itself and there would be nothing left for it to subsist upon."

In the language of St. Paul (Epistle to the Phillipians 4-8) "think on these things."

Little Talks on Thrift

Waste of Time One of the Worst Forms of Thriftlessness

The trend of the times is toward shorter working hours. More and more leisure time is being allowed all types of toilers.

In the days of our grandfathers there was only a limited amount of time available to most peopole for recreation. The hours of toil were long. Conditions of the present however, represent a decided improvement because, as a general rule, people are making use of their spare time to good advantage.

In the midst of this changing order it should not be forgotten that there can be neither progress nor happiness without work. Our spare time should be made use of to make ourselves the more capable of doing the work we have mapped out for our lives. Otherwise we shall be going backwards.

The great Mussolini recently said, "I myself, work hard" while to our own Thomas A. Edison was credited the observation that "genius is 10 per cent inspiration and 90 per cent perspiration."

There is no real pleasure greater than that which comes from successful accomplishment. No matter in what line of activity we may find ourselves, we should realize that performing our daily tasks to the best of our ability brings far greater contentment of mind than could possibly come from idleness.

There is no true happiness in an idle life. Waste of time is a form of thriftlessness that is as destructive of rightful pleasure as waste of money or waste of health.

Work alone brings happiness, because work is creative and upbuilding.

All the instincts of the human race which has been responsible for humanity's progress have found their real fulfillment in work.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23—If Brig. Gen. John H. Russell of the marine corps, American high commissioner in Haiti, happens to be a constant reader of the Congressional Record he's in for a highly personal surprise one of these days.

When the issue of Dec. 9 reaches his desk down at Port au Prince, he will discover this statement by Representative Huddleston, democrat of Alabama, in a speech on Haiti sandwiched into the interior department appropriation bill debate:

"For 14 long years the Haitians have been at the mercy of an American military satrap who knew no guidance except his own sweet will."

For the last 12 years, excepting some 10 months in 1918-'19, Russell has been on the job in Haiti, so presumably he is the satrap.

And in case the reader does not know exactly what a "satrap" is, the well known Mr. Webster's valuable work says that was the name for the governor of a province in ancient Persia, "hence: a petty prince acting under autocratic authority; a despotic subordinate official."

A Veteran Speaks.

Having seen this Huddleston view of himself and his work in Haiti, General Russell can turn over a page of the Record and find another and somewhat conflicting picture.

It was drawn by Rep. Royal Johnson, republican of South Dakota, who managed to get himself a valor cross and a French croix de guerre as a first lootenant of the 313th infantry in France during an exciting interlude of his congressional career:

"No one who has known Gen. John H. Russell or Gen. Ben H. Fuller and who has talked with them and knows their mental attitude, their knowledge of history and their knowledge of and love of humanity, could ever accuse them of trying to do other than the best they could for the people over whom they have had temporary control."

In view of this conflict of opinion as to Russell's status or handling of his task, his own first annual report as high commissioner, submitted Jan. 1, 1923, has some bearing.

Presidential Amity.

It tells first of the election in April, 1922, of Louis Borno as president to succeed President Dartiguenave.

During the following month, the report adds, "Haiti for the first time in its history witnessed the spectacle of two presidents taking part in an inauguration."

And unless the Bystander's memory fails him, Russell was decorated in recognition of his services by the outgoing, not the incoming president. That does not seem so very satrappy, so to speak, does it?

Nor, for that matter, does the statement in that same seven-year-old report that Haiti's judiciary system "is sadly in need of renovation" and that much toward stabilizing government there would be accomplished when "Haitians have been taught to look with pride on their courts and to respect them" as the foundation stone of government.

Yet it's Satrap Russell speaking.

SCARLET FEVER

By Dr. Clyde W. Beson, Claremont, Okla.
(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

For several months to come scarlet fever will do its best to invade the homes and schools, and the coming together of many children affords excellent opportunities for the spread of the disease.

Scarlet fever is an acute specific infection, characterized by sudden onset of fever, sore throat and vomiting and an eruption followed by peeling off. The fever usually lasts about four days. The rash as a rule appears within 48 hours, starting around the neck and spreading downwards. The cheeks are flushed and the area about the mouth presents a dead white pinched appearance which is striking and characteristic.

Scarlet fever is commonly spread by direct contact. The "peeling off" stage was formerly supposed to be the most infectious period, and it is difficult to correct this error. The secretions from the mouth and nose, and the excretions from the bowels and kidneys are the carriers of the disease and all objects exposed to such contamination should be burned or thoroughly disinfected.

The precautions against scarlet fever follow clearly defined lines; early recognition, prompt isolation, disinfection and specific prophylaxis. It is comparatively easy to prevent the spread of the disease from known cases. Much damage, however, is done before the case is recognized, or often because not recognized at all.

Scarlet fever is often a very serious disease, not only on its own account but also because of complications which are numerous and varied. The prevention of damage to the kidneys consists in absolute rest in bed during the whole course of the disease, at least three weeks, in a room well ventilated but free from drafts.

Consult your family physician on the first appearance of suspicious symptoms.

Not only does Captain W. A. Rose have no Christmas to look forward to, he doesn't even have a December 25th in prospect! No More Piles

Pile sufferers can only get quick, safe and lasting relief by removing the cause—bad blood circulation in the lower bowel. Cutting and salves can't do this—an internal remedy must be used. Dr. Leonhardt's Hem-Roid, a harmless tablet, succeeds because it relieves this blood congestion and strengthens the affected parts. Hem-Roid has a wonderful record for quick safe, and lasting relief to Pile sufferers. It will do the same for you or money back. Lee & Osgood Co. and druggists anywhere sell Hem-Roid with this guarantee.

Sore Throat? Don't Gargle

This Doctor's Prescription Gives Quicker, Better Relief

Don't suffer the pain and discomfort of sore throat. Use a doctor's prescription called Thoxine guaranteed to relieve with the very first swallow. Gargles and salves are too slow and if they do relieve, it is usually only temporary.

Thoxine has a double action—it relieves the soreness and goes direct to the internal cause. It contains no harmful drugs and is safe and pleasant for the whole family. There is nothing better to stop coughing due to irritated throats. Just ask for Thoxine, put up ready for use in 35c, 60c, and $1.00 bottles. Money back if not relieved. Sold by all druggists.

JUDGE TAKES PAPERS IN SLANDER SUIT

At the Saturday session of the common pleas court, Judge Waller took the papers in the $1,000 slander suit brought against Grover C. Burdick of No. 155 Town street, by Dr. Frank C. Atchison of Beech drive. During the trial of the case there was a legal clash between Attorney Edwin W. Higgins and Attorney Arthur F. Libby, counsel for Mr. Burdick. Attorney Higgins accused Attorney Libby of testifying in his arguments. Attorney Libby had previously said that he had overheard a witness tell the plaintiff's attorney certain facts. Addressing the court, Attorney Higgins stated that Attorney Libby had been practicing too long to make such a statement and he took exception to it. Attorney Higgins was sustained by the court.

The suit was brought by Dr. Atchison against Mr. Burdick, who for some time was employed as a carpenter about the Atchison property. The defendant is alleged to have made slanderous remarks about the doctor. There were only three witnesses who testified. Burdick was the sole witness for his side. Mrs. Lucy Reed Sanford a tenant in one of Dr. Atchison's houses, was the first witness and she testified in regard to the remarks of a slanderous nature made to her by Burdick, which the latter in his testimony denied he made. Frank Levanto, a gardener employed by Dr. Atchison, also testified in regard to the utterances made by Burdick against the doctor and these were also denied by the defendant.

Burdick in his testimony stated that he worked about the Atchison place one winter while employed by the Peck-McWilliams Co. He then left that concern and went to work for Dr. Atchison, commencing his employment with the doctor on Oct. 29, 1928, until he was discharged by the doctor on July 11, 1929. He received $1.25 an hour, $10 a day and worked five days a week. Every week he was paid, Burdick said, until the last week he worked. He claims $40 is still due him from the doctor.

Burdick denied making any slanderous remarks. In regard to Mrs. Atchison, the witness said that he always thought she was a perfect lady. Burdick testified that he received notice of his discharge from the doctor over the telephone. The doctor in the telephone conversation, Burdick testified, said: "I can't have you come down here until I get things straightened out. Things are awful here."

Asked by counsel on cross-examination why he did not ask the reason from the doctor, the witness said that the doctor had hung up before he could say anything or ask any questions. Burdick was asked by the doctor's counsel to advance any reason whatsoever why the plaintiff's witnesses would have made the statements they testified to, but Burdick failed to advance any reason.

WORLD'S WOMAN TENNIS CHAMPION IS NOW MRS. FREDERICK S. MOODY JR.

By RUSSELL J. NEWLAND
Associated Press Sports Writer

BERKELEY, Cal., Dec. 23—(AP)—Within a stone's throw of the same courts where, nine years ago a blue-eyed girl with hair done up in pig tails swung the first strokes that were to lead to the most glorious career in all American tennis history, the same miss, now a lady grown, today spoke the words that made that name but a memory to the sports world.

Helen Wills, champion to all the world, became Mrs. Frederick S. Moody, Jr., and—take the Berkeley girls' word for it—she was just a bit flustered about it.

The reporter asked the "queen of the courts" if she was as nervous as she was that day at Cannes, France, in 1926 when she matched strokes with and lost to the then incomparable Suzanne Lenglen. With a quick smile, Helen parried the question with "I never was nervous before any of my tennis matches." She added, however, "I guess I was a little today."

Today's event was a serious affair but the "sports mob" was represented, nevertheless. Some 200 persons, drifting about outside the church, were lured from such walks of life as: Idle curious, autograph seekers, amateur photographers, newspaper reporters and cameramen.

In the crowd was a Negro prize fighter, there for apparently no reason at all; a former football star and a baseball player.

With the wedding supposed to take place at 12 noon sharp and none of the principals on the scene at five minutes past, the crowd impatient, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick S. Moody, Sr., drove up but no trace of Helen. The world's best tennis player "pulled a fast one" on the outsiders by driving up a back-street and coming in the rear entrance of the church. A youth, probably an acquaintance of the family, piloted the automobile. Helen jumped out and hurried across a vacant lot and into the back door. Only one photographer was guarding the rear and he made the "shot." Helen evidently enjoyed her strategy as she smiled broadly as she dodged into the door.

SHARKEY WILL BE FREE TO BOX AT ATLANTIC CITY

NEW YORK, Dec. 23—(AP)—Jack Sharkey will be free to box Max Schmeling in Atlantic City, in March after headlining the second annual heavyweight show in Miami, February 27 as far as his present contract with Madison Square Garden is concerned.

The Garden, sponsor of the winter show in the south, has only an option on the Boston heavyweight's services for that one bout, Frank Bruen, general manager said today. If Sharkey is willing to box again within a month he will be free to oppose Max Schmeling for the rival promoting syndicate, headed by Herman Taylor and Bobby Gannis, of Philadelphia, that is seeking to stage a major attraction in Atlantic City.

The German heavyweight, now visiting his homeland already has agreed to meet the best available opponent in the New Jersey resort on March 22.

Neither coach has decided upon a starting eleven and indications are the selections will not be made for several days.

Tonight Taberski led by 250 to 128. The match will be concluded Sunday night, there being no play on Christmas day.

Taberski won both of today's blocks, 125 to 72 this afternoon and 125 to 56 tonight. The Schenectady star whom Greenleaf dethroned at the recent tournament in Detroit was aided this afternoon by a high run of 94 in his fifth inning and ran out the match with a run of 28 unfinished in the next inning. Greenleaf's best cluster was 41 in his first inning.

There was little spectacular play tonight as both players resorted to safety tactics. Taberski's high run was 25; Greenleaf's 23. The match required 20 innings.

SYRACUSE RALLIES TO BEAT DARTMOUTH TEAM

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Dec. 23.—(AP)—Syracuse university's basketball team came from behind in the second half of their game here tonight to defeat a rugged Dartmouth quintet, 42 to 23.

At half time the Green led, 16 to 13.

Bunky Lewin, Dartmouth center, took advantage of the sloppy defensive play of the Orange in the first half to score nine points but in the second half Syracuse tightened up and kept Lewin's score down to a total of 12 for the game by the simple expedient of keeping the ball in the basket or on the way there most of the time. Beagle and Hayman were the high scorers for the Orange, with 13 and 11, respectively.

Sassie Says

And tomorrow is Christmas!

And tonight is Christmas Eve. Don't you folks who are no longer children wish along with the post that "time would turn backward in flight and make you a child, just for tonight"? Don't you, huh?

Did you ever get a greater kick out of Christmas than when you were a youngster and hung up your stocking for Santa Claus to fill? Didja, huh?

And remember how you would go up to bell and then lie there with your eyes and ears wide open, waiting to see if you could get a glimpse of Santa? Remember?

Then one eye would close and then the other and the first thing you knew it was Christmas morning and you was out of bed and downstairs before you could say Jack Robinson.

And you found the stockings all full and maybe a Christmas tree all decorated and a lot of intriguing white and green and red packages hung on it. Remember?

Remember how you would run up to Dad's and Mother's rooms and show them what Santa Claus had brought you? And how they would look at the presents and exclaim over them just as though they'd never seen them before. Remember?

And when you looked up, there was a tear trickling down mother's cheek and you wondered why. And you said, "What are you crying for, Momsy, didn't Santa bring you anything?"

Then she just choked up a little bit and caught you and gave you a great big hug and said, "I'm not crying, I'm just laughing to see you so happy." Remember? But you wondered just the same.

And now you are grown up and a tear trickling down Mother's cheek stand all about that tear on Mother's cheek, for you have brushed many of them away yourself. Haven't you?

Yes, sir, we're all little children at heart and never more so than at Christmas time. Why? I don't know, unless there is something of that same love in us which nearly 2,000 years ago was manifest in a Manger at Bethlehem.

THREE TEAMS PRACTICE FOR HOLIDAY GAMES AT THE STANFORD FIELD

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Cal., Dec. 23.—(AP)—A campus lying dormant since the close of final examinations last week hummed with renewed activity today as three football teams went through intensive workouts in stadium and practice field.

Busiest of the three was the West Point Army eleven, which arrived here last night for its contest with Stanford Saturday, and was comfortably entrenched in Branner hall today. The cadets, granted the use of the Cardinal stadium for their practices, went through a light setting up drill and posed for photographers before noon, and then returned for a scrimmage session in the afternoon. Coach Lawrence "Biff" Jones announced that the team would hold two practices daily for the remainder of the week.

Jones indicated that his starting lineup for Saturday's contest would be the same that started against Notre Dame. That eleven was composed of Carlmark and Messenger, ends; Price and Perry, tackles; Hillsinger and Humber, guards; Miller, center; Carver, quarterback; Hutchinson and Captain Cagle, halfbacks, and Murrell, fullback.

While the cadets were taking things relatively easy, Stanford's varsity and the All-Star Eastern eleven that will face a similar western team on New Year's day engaged in one of the most vicious scrimmages ever seen on the Stanford practice field, and one that may cost the easterners the service of Tommy Dowler, Colgate fullback. Dowler suffered a badly bruised knee that may keep him out of further action.

Chuck Smalling, giant Stanford fullback, was the bright star of the workout, ripping through the All-Star team consistently. The easterners displayed lack of coordination as a unit but their play as individuals was scintillating. Sleight, Purdue's big tackle, Cannon, the great Notre Dame guard, and Booma, Dartmouth end, all turned in brilliant stops during the melee. Christian "Red" Cagle, the Army captain was the center of attraction at the cadets' forenoon workout.

Among the civilians who accompanied the Army squad west were Jackson Cannell, Dartmouth football coach, and William Hencage, supervisor of athletics at the same university. They are here to look over the Cardinal eleven, which the big Green team faces here next November.

The Army squad was brought up to full strength today with the arrival of Cadet A. M. Lazar, center, who was delayed at West Point to retake his final examination in mathematics. Lazar made use of both train and airplane to reach Stanford a day later than the main body of players, although he did not leave New York until last Friday.

FLYING IS SAFE, SAYS SENATOR BINGHAM

With reference to the airplane crash at Bolling Field last Friday when five persons, including Congressman Kaynor of Massachusetts were killed, U. S. Senator Hiram Bingham, World war aviator and president of the National Aeronautic association, said:

"I regard the plane as the safest ever built. The plane was one of the best in the service. Those who saw the take-off said it was normal, yet suddenly, without motor or structural failure the machine went into a nose dive. The Fokker plane is constructed to guard against spin, but the machine had only reached an altitude of 300 feet and there was not room enough for it to right itself.

"They were climbing and it was very dusty. It might be that something happened to the pilot—that he went into a faint. It might be that an unusual gust of wind struck the nose of the plane. I feel that everything was done that should have been done. It is very unfortunate that there is no clear idea of what happened and there probably never will be, since all in the plane were killed.

"We must not be discouraged. If we had become discouraged in the early days of ocean navigation, we wouldn't have advanced. We are used to accidents on sea and on the roads, but we are not used to spectacular accidents in the air. The army record for last year showed more flying and fewer killed. We are making steady progress. If I had to send my boys to Connecticut tomorrow in a hurry, I would rather send them in an airplane than over the road."

Solution of the most baffling question in the study of the pre-Columbian history of the United States—the dating of the scores of important Indian ruins of our southwest—has been announced by the National Geographic society.

The answer is given in a unique form, a tree-ring calendar, worked out from the study of more than 5,000 cross sections of living trees and timbers from scores of the major Indian settlements of our southwest.

From Sun Spots to Timbers

The quest for the missing dates extended over years. It ranged from astronomical study of sun spots, through geology, archeology and kindred sciences, until it culminated in piecing together the fragmentary clues of timber and tree rings—evidence as conclusive as that of finger prints.

Two series of National Geographic society expeditions were involved in the results. One series, comprising eight expeditions led by Neil M. Judd, explored the world-famous Pueblo Bonito ruins in Chaco Canyon, New Mexico, and patiently dug from tons of earth hundreds of art objects, household utensils and ceremonial appurtenances. The other series, led by Dr. A. E. Douglass, studied tree rings from Pueblo Bonito and dozens of other ruins.

Knew Details, But Not Dates

Of the daily lives of the people at the giant pre-Columbian apartment house at Pueblo Bonito, as at many other Indian ruins in the southwest, which was North America's metropolis before Columbus came, we long have known as much as we do of the early Egyptians, Babylonians, or Persians.

As travelers stood in amazement before one or another of the ruins of these marvelous civilizations of our own continent their almost invariable question has been, "How old is it?" And that has been the one question which archeologists could not answer.

Scientific Value of Finds

Dr. Gilbert Grosvenor, president of the National Geographic society, in assessing the value of the finds of the expeditions, says:

"They have pushed back the historic horizons of the southwestern United States to a period nearly eight centuries before Columbus crossed the Atlantic.

"They have discovered not only the age of the great communal dwelling of Pueblo Bonito, metropolis of our aboriginal southwest, but also have dated some 40 other ruins whose time of occupancy hitherto had been unknown.

"Moreover, they have developed a tree-ring calendar which can be applied to al early ruins in which datable timbers exist.

"A collateral finding of great interest, yet to be developed, is the possible relation between the weather cycles clearly revealed in this tree-ring calendar of the southwestern United States and similar cycles variations being recorded by a third National Geographic society expedition (in conjunction with the Smithsonian institution), an expedition which still is in the field, at Mount Brukkaros, South West Africa, making daily observations of solar radiation."

1,200-Year Weather Chart

Dr. Douglass, in his report to the National Geographic society, writes:

"Just as the far-famed Rosetta Stone provided the key to the written mysteries of ancient Egypt, so the collection of an unbroken series of tree-rings has made clear the chronology of the southwest.

"These researches have carried the calendar back to A. D. 700 in the southwest, and they have provided the beginnings of a continuous weather chart for 1,200 years.

"Through this work we have learned of some outstanding events in America which were contemporaneous with the conquest of Spain by the Moors, and we know that certain Pueblo Indian settlements were enjoying their golden ages when William the Conqueror faced Harold the Saxon at the Battle of Hastings.

"The earliest beam we recovered from Pueblo Bonito was cut A. D. 919 from a tree that was 219 years old when cut. Pueblo Bonito had recached its golden age in 1067 and was still occupied in 1127."

Somo Mesa Verde Dates

In many instances, Dr. Douglass' report points out, one group name is applied to several ruins. The "talk-active tree-rings" enabled the explorers to date each ruin of the groups studied. Thus, in the Mesa Verde group, Cliff Palace is dated 1073; Oak Tree House, 1112; Spring House, 1116; Balcony House, 1190-1206; Square Tower House, 1204, and Spruce Tree House, 1216 and 1262.

Explaining the procedure by which the ree-ring calendar was worked out, Dr. Douglass explains:

"The method which we have used in extending the historical calendar of the southwest is the outcome of a long attempt to read the diaries of trees. Every year the trees in our forests show the swing of Time's pendulum and put down a mark. They are chronographs, recording clocks, by which the succeeding seasons are set down through definite imprints. Every year each pnie adds a layer of new wood over its entire living surface of trunk and branches.

How a Tree Registers Time

"If every year were exactly the same, growth rings would tell the age of the tree and little more. Only in rare cases would they record exceptional events of any interest to us. But a tree is not a mechanical robot; it is a living thing, and its food supply and adventures through life all enter into its diary. A flash of lightning, a forest fire, insect pests or a falling neighbor may make strong impressions on its life and go into its diary.

"But in the arid regions of our southwest, where trees are few and other vegetation scarce, the most important thing to man and trees is rainfall. This fact has helped vastly in our dating work, for certain sequences of years become easily recognized from tree to tree, county to county, even from state to state."

From sun spots to tree-rings seems a long scientific jump. But it illustrates how one fact of science may have far flung results in other fields. For Dr. Douglass is an astronomer.

A Dramatic Confirmation

"Originally my work was a study of sun spots," he writes. "It is known that there is a periodicity in their occurrence; they are most numerous at intervals of eleven years. As an aid in that astronomical investigation, I studied trees, for solar changes affect our weather, and weather in turn affects the trees in Arizona's dry climate, as elsewhere.

The first confirmation of our general interpretation of a relationship between tree-rings and sun-spot periods came in a most dramatic way.

"Evidence of the eleven-year sun-spot cycle had been easily found in Arizona pine trees. The regularly recurring periods had been recorded for 500 years by tree-rings, except for the interval from 1650 to 1725. During that 75 years the tree-rings gave no evidence of periodical changes in the weather such as were to be expected.

"Several years after we had encountered this puzzling fact the late Dr. E. Walter Maunder, an eminent English astronomer, unaware of my findings, wrote to me that he had discovered that there were no sun-spots between 1645 and 1715, and that if my tree-rings did not indicate some effect of this absence of sun-spots, my work was being conducted on an erroneous hypothesis.

"The coincidence between the failure of Arizona trees to register any sun-spot effect upon the weather during those years, and establishment of the fact, by entirely independent study, that the customary sun-spot cycle did not occur during approximately the same period of years helped confirm the relationship between the growth of trees and solar changes."

RADIO SHORT WAVES COMPEL RELEARNING OF GEOGRAPHY

"The short-wave radio fan who listens in on European broadcasting may well decide that the geographics he studied at school played tricks on him," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic society.

"Of the programs from the continent," continues the bulletin, "a large percentage are announced as coming from places that have not in the past appeared on maps published in English. They are not new places: many of them are hoary with age. Radio is merely showing that we have been a bit provincial in our use of foreign geographic names.

"The short-wave distance fan, for example, picks up the station at Huizen, in the Netherlands. First he hears that a speech is to be broadcast from Amsterdam, and feels on familiar ground. But when this is followed by a concert from s'Gravenhage he is geographically lost. It is our old friend 'The Hague,' only the Dutch do not call it that.

"Next, perhaps, the trans-Atlantic listener tunes in on the Langenberg station, Germany, and hears in succession relays from Aachen and Koln. Unfortunately he learned of these places in school under the aliases, Aix-la-chapelle and Cologne. Later, when he listens to a Berlin station with relays from such familiar places as Hamburg and Leipzig there is also an announcement from Munchen. He will search his memory in vain for this latter city unless he happens to know that its English alias is Munich.

"Every night and day American listeners with the most sensitive short-wave sets are hearing such announcements as Moskva, Beograd, Torino, Milano, and Wien, great cities all, that are known in America by the wholly different names, Moscow, Belgrade, Turin, Milan and Vienna.

"Thus radio, along with increased business contracts, better mail facilities, and more extensive travel, is battering down barriers that have kept the citizens of different countries strangers to each other. In recognition Geographic society, in its newly published map of Europe has used place names exactly as they are used in the home countries. In parentheses, besides these names, are the forms with tion of this development the National which Americans are familiar."

W. H. Pilcher Assumes New Duties.

Former Secretary Walter H. Pilcher of the Norwich chamber of commerce on Monday assumed his new duties with the Worcester chamber of commerce. Mr. Pilcher will have charge of the financial and membership units of the Worcester chamber for the present. He was secretary of the local chamber for two years and a half. He resigned recently, the resignation becoming effective last Saturday.

Fight Over Gifts

Mrs. Ella M. King, above, Chicago housekeeper for the late Charles H. Pulsifer, former board of trade operator, is fighting to retain gifts valued at $200,000 given her by Pulsifer before his death. His granddaughter, Mrs. Alice Crockett, below, has appealed to a Chicago court to order the return of the gifts.

This is the former Miss Elizabeth Merrill, 22, Chicago heiress, whose marriage on Thanksgiving day to William C. Booth, former riding master and present owner, with her, of a riding stable, has just been revealed. Her estate is reported to run into the millions.

ARREST OF "THE GREATEST CONFIDENCE MAN ALIVE"

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—(AP)—Former stage and screen actor described by police as "the greatest confidence man alive," and "the only man ever to defraud the Bank of England," was arrested today on a charge of obtaining $12,000 worth of Liberty bonds and Treasury notes from a brokerage firm by forgery.

The new official Register of the United States for 1929 shows 587,665 workers are now employed by the government through civil service. The register takes into consideration only employes in the executive branch of the government and does not include hundreds of thousands of others in the legislative, judicial or military services. In the federal executive service 63,904 are employed in the District of Columbia and 523,761 in the field. Of the total number, 82,501 are women. The post office department has the greatest number of employes with 214,795 under civil service, while the treasury department ranks second with 53,094 and the navy and war departments rank third and fourth respectively, with 50,575 and 47,267. In ten departments in Washington, more women are employed than men, but in the field service men predominate.

City Aids Radio Fans

BROWNSILLE, Tex.—(AP)—Brownsville has what might be called a "department of radio interference elimination." A club of radio fans asked the city to aid in ridding the air of static. A man was assigned to work with an electric company and NAY, Brownsville's naval station, to do so.

CAUGHT MACKEREL SHARK WITH WATCH IN STOMACH

Capt. Billie Musante and Mate John Singer of boat Francis was fishing about 100 miles from Block Island after haddock and flatfish for the fish are noto every plentiful and all the fishermen are finding it hard to get a barrel or two to ship to New York. Prices are high but where are the fish gone to? Are they hiding or hafe young and old salts about cleaned them up for awhile? Or have the fish gone south? Capt. Musante set the net at 7 o'clock and did not haul it for two hours. He had a heavy load and Mate Singer'sf ace was all smiles for he knew his sweetheart in Ledyard would get a Christmas present after all for a fish check would be back in time. Getting the net on board the good ship Francis, the fish were plenty—like finding Capt. Kidd's treasure—four barrels of haddock and six barrels of flatfish. Trying it again, the net was cast and Capt. Musante had to have a cup of coffee while Mate Sniger was at the wheel for over two hours. They dragged for the missing fish. Capt. Musante claims. It was time to haul again. But the net would not come to the top of the water, so heavy and the engine was pulling hard like an iron horse pulling a 100 flat cars in tow. "Well," Mate Singer said, "what have we got? a southern sturgeon? If we have, Captain, we can haul up the boat for the winter and set by the fire and smoke Cremo cigars. For the southern fish is worth plenty of greenbacks. Might be a cabin of a fishin boat wreck." Whatever the mystery was in the net, Capt. Musante had a battle on his hands. About three hours' fight and at last the engine got the net on top of the water and it was a monster fish, fighting hard to get loose. It almost tipped the boat over. Mate Singer nearly had his Saturday night bath early. Just grabbed a line in time and what a battle. Took four hours and two minutes to land the net on board and Capt. Musante said "We have a mackerel shark!" It took both sea dogs two hours to get the monster fish clear from the net—a $100 net was ruined by that fish. "Never in my life," Capt. Musante told his mate, "did I have such a job with a fish!" He was sweating like Bill Collins wrestling in the square ring in the Whaling City. So back to the town dock, which is a three-hour sail, they started, and getting there at 6 o'clock, after going out at 2 a. m. They dressed the monster mackerel shark to ship to New York. Mate Singer was the man with the knife and he ran across a gent's silver watch in the shark's stomach, the date was 1888, making it 41 years old. The watch had stopped at 3 minutes past 8 Capt. Musante thinks it was lost from the iseamer Larchmont, in February, 1907, when so many were lost on a bitter cold night.

After getting the monster of the fish family ready for its 200 mile ride to Fulton market, although it weighed 400 lbs., when dressed it tipped the scales at 200 lbs. Word came from New York that a mackerel shark was worth 10 cents a pound and a check would come back for $20, besides for 10 barrels of fish, "But I will lose money. My $100 net has gone to the dumping ground," the skipper said. "But the watch might bring me a piece of money, for some one might want it, as it came out of a fish, to go on exhibition, where a watch hunter could see it and buy it for his shop."

Capt. Musante and Mate Singer told their brother fishermen they was ready to call it a day, after such a battle with a 400-lb mackerel shark that almost tipped over the boat and gave the mate a cold swim.

"If any more of those fish come around my boat I hope it will go to Canada or somewhere else! I will have to get my engine overhauled for I think it got strained with too much load to haul out of the sea. Mate Singer will have to go to a doctor for a rib was cracked and he is suffering with much pain. Well, I am glad it was not Friday the 13th, for we might have lost the boat and have had to swim, or put up the fisherman's flag, calling for help!"

The last mackerel shark was brought in by the boat Skyrocket, Capt. Sam Dolittle and Mate Danny Sugarfoot, 38 years ago. There were no engines in those days and the fish weighed only 100 lbs. It was brought to the North dock and shipped to Boston.

MAJORITY OF SHARES CLOSED 1 TO 10 POINTS LOWER IN SLUGGISH MARKET

NEW YORK, Dec. 23—(AP)—Wall street today witnessed the rare spectacle of a declining stock market ushering in Christmas week. Apathy rather than gloom, however, pervaded the financial district. The majority of shares closed 1 to 10 points lower, but trading slackened up considerably on the decline, only 3,491,770 shares changing hands.

Not since 1920 has the stock market failed to provide some sort of a bullish Christmas cheer. During that Christmas period, however, gloom hung heavily over the market. Steel mill operations were at half of capacity. Orders were being cancelled and wages cut. At this period, however, there is but little concern over fundamental conditions, despite the sharp curtailment of industrial activity, and uncertainty as to how long the recession may last.

As an indication of sentiment in important quarters, James A. Farrell, president of the United States Steel corp., said of the steel industry today, "there has been no inflation in prices, in inventories nor in capacity, and there is no apparent reason why 1930 should not be a good average year, with stable prices and stable wages."

The continued selling was still largely attributed to selling for tax purposes and to professional bearish operations.

Holiday currency demands, and withdrawals to meet year end payments, were reflected in firmer monetary conditions. Call money renewed at 6 per centfor the first time since Nov. 21, and subsequently advanced to 8 1-2, the highest figure since Nov. 18. Rates for other credit accommodations were unchanged.

Rails were notably heavy, reflecting uncertainty over the reception to be accorded the interstate commerce commission's consolidation plan. Rail executives were wary of comment. New York Central, Lackawanna, Wabash, Delaware and Hudson, Atchison, and Chesapeake and Ohio were among issues closing 3 to 5 points lower.

Short covering toward the close provided a substantial rally, and several shares regained about half their losses. U. S. Steel dropped to 156 5-8, but closed at 159 3-4, off only 3 1-4. Among shares selling off about 5 to 10 points, but reducing their losses to from 3 to 5, at the close, were, American Can, American Water Works, A. M. Byers, Fox Film A, General Electric, Johns Manville, and Simmons. Anaconda dropped 5 1-4 points to a new low for the year at 67 1-4, but closed 5 1-4 points to a new low for the year at 67 1-4, but closed at 70 1-2.

A few shares closed higher. American Telephone was heavy for a time, but rallied to close up about 3 points.

The commodity markets moved in narrow ranges. Wheat closed steady, recovering from early heaviness in response to a decrease in the visible supply. Corn, however, lost about 1-2 cent a bushel. Cotton closed practically unchanged.

Foreign exchanges were irregular. Sterling eased a little, cables touching $4.88 1-4. The French franc, however, touched a new high level for the year, with the cable rate quoted at 3.94 1-3.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Dec. 23—(AP)—The bond market was irregular today in the dullest five-hour session in the last two months. Turnovers in domestic corporation loans were exceptionally small, and much of the business was in the foreign group, where a downward trend prevailed.

With money at 5 per cent for time funds and 5 and 5 1-2 for call loans, commitments were exceedingly light. Buying orders virtually balanced offerings and resulted in net changes of inconsequential proportions. First grade rails held their ground and the undertone of the entire list had a firm appearance, although United States governments eased on the smallest volume in some time.

The long list of Argentine 6s received considerable attention and the various maturities of the 1959, 1960 and 1961 loans were sold on profit-taking from the levels attained on the bonds' recoveries of late last week. Most of the declines were fractional. Other Latin-American obligations showed a downward trend, with Brazilian securities fairly active. Prominent European governments were steady.

Convertibles had a nervous day, reflecting the gyrations of the stock market. American Telephone 4 1-2s traded within a 5 point range, selling down to 132 and then recovering to close at 133 1-2, a net gain of two points. Chicago & Northwestern 4 3-4s and Texas corporation 5s, the only active share feature debentures, were firm.

Most of the trading in the rails was in small blocks at only slight variations either way from the Saturday close. Fractional losses in Baltimore & Ohio Gold 4s, Canadian Pacific 4s, St. Paul General 4s, Union Pacific Refunding 4s and Pennsylvania General 4 1-2s were offset by advances in Central Pacific 5s, Erie 4s, New York Central 4s, Pennsylvania 5s and St. Louis & San Francisco 4 1-2s, among others.

Utilities showed a wider mixture of prices. American Telephone debenture 5s, North American Edison 5 1-2s, New York Telephone 6s and Western Union Gold 5s improved, but declines appeared in Northern States Power 5s, Pacific Gas 5s and Detroit Edison 5s.

Industrials were dull. Most of the selling in this group was in the low priced issues.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Dec. 23—(AP)—Wheat values showed brisk rallying power today at the last, after having averaged lower most of the time earlier. Price recoveries in the late dealings were largely due to buying because of talk current that Chairman Alexander Legge of the federal farm board had said he looked for a better export trade in wheat. Preceding downturns of wheat values came about chiefly as a result of selling pressure ascribed to eastern sources and having relation to stock exchange weakness.

Closing quotations on wheat were irregular at 3-8c net decline to 1-4c advance, with corn 3-8c to 5-8c down, oats a shade off to 1-8c up, and provisions varying from 2c setback to an equal gain.

Aside from a transient bulge at the opening today and unturns near the finish, wheat was dominated almost altogether by breaks in security prices and by evidence that European buying of wheat from North America had again flattened out for at least the time being. Transient advances in price here early were in response to a sharp rise in quotations at Liverpool, and to the fact that the supply of wheat on ocean passage was announced as having fallen to less than half the total at this time last year. The stimulus from such developments, however, failed to survive in the face of stock market disturbance, and there was little apparent result either from estimates that the world carry-over of wheat this season is likely to be 50,000,000 bu. less than was recently forecast.

Adding at times today to the downward momentum of the wheat market were advices that re-sellers in Europe were offering wheat 3c a bushel cheaper than the grain could be obtained on this side of the Atlantic. Furthermore, new export business in wheat today from the United States and Canada was said to total but 200,000 bu, and there were reports that Kansas, the banner wheat producing state, besides having an increased acreage this season shows a crop condition 12 per cent better than average. On the other hand, official estimates of 1929 wheat production in France were asserted today to show 35,000,000 bu. curtailment from the latest private forecast.

Corn and oats prices were easy, governed mainly by the course of wheat.

Upturns in the value of hogs helped to steady the provision market.

NEW YORK, Dec. 23—(AP)—The copper market continues quiet and on a hand-to-mouth basis both here and abroad. Sales reported today just passed the 750-000-ton mark. Reports from the trade indicate that an improvement in buying is expected before the middle of January.

The Western Biscuit Co., of Toronto, which operates an American factory at Watertown, Mass., plans to open a second factory in this country, to be located at Passaic, N. J., about Feb. 1, 1930. Establishment of additional plants in this country, in the west and on the Pacific coast, is also planned for next year.

A Chicago dispatch to Wall street today said that the North American Car Co. has practically completed negotiations for the purchase of one of the larger private car lines. Further details could not be ascertained.

Employes of the J. C. Penney Co. nation-wide department store chain, will receive Christmas bonuses totaling nearly $500,000.

An additional 2,000 to 3,000 men will be employed at the Peoria, Ill., plant of the Caterpillar Tractor Co. within the next three months, R. C. Force, president, has advised the Illinois Manufacturers association.

FOUR PERMITS GRANTED INCLUDING ONE FOR NEW WASHINGTON ST. HOUSE

With four permits granted during the past week the total number of permits issued by Fire Marshal Taft for the month of December was brought to eight permits. However with the issuing of a permit for an $8,000 house to Benjamin Krieger the total valuation of the new construction was brought well up to the normal average for the month.

The house for Mr. Krieger is a two family house with six rooms, bath and sunporch to be built on Washington street. Mr. Krieger is building the house as an investment.

Good progress has been made on local building projects in and about Norwich despite the highly unfavorable weather of the past week. At the Norwich Inn building activities are progressing favorably now that the structure has a temporary roof on it and interior work can be done throughout the winter.

At the state armory the work of redecorating it is well along and the work of relaying the sidewalk is progressing favorably although hampered by the inclement weather.

To Jennie Fox to make alterations to the present building at 209 West Main street. The alterations include changing the present store into a one family tenement. The estimated cost is $100.

To Benjamin Krieger to build two-family frame house on Washington street for himself. The contract has been awarded to a local contractor. The house will be 26x50 feet and each floor will have six rooms and bath and a sunporch, 8x18 feet. The foundation will be of concrete. The exterior will be finished in wide clapboards on the sides while the roof will be covered with slate-surfaced shingles. The interior will be in hardwood and hard-finish plaster. The floors will be of oak throughout. The estimated cost of the house is $8,000.

To John Engelhardt to erect a frame garage at 148 McKinley avenue. The garage will be 20x20 feet with concrete foundation and will have accommodations for two cars. The estimated cost is $300.

To Charles Hamblin to erect a frame single-car garage at his home on Grant court. The garage will have a cement floor and foundation and will be 10x18 feet. The estimated cost is $300.

REAL ESTATE SALES AND MORTGAGE LOANS

During the past week there were four sales of real estate in Norwich, one sale less than during the same week in 1928. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $10,821 and $6,800.

There were three sales of real estate in New London during the past week as compared to eight sales for the corresponding week a year ago. The mortgage loans were $66,620 and $74,217.

New London.

One proposed new house is included in the list of eight building permits issued by the city council this week. It is for a new one-family house to be built in Cedar Grove avenue for Angelo DelGrosso. It is to be a frame structure, 28 by 28 feet with a sun porch 10 by 15 feet. Work is to be done by the day from private plans. A garage, 12 by 20 feet is also to be built on the site.

The other six permits will allow Gorra Brothers to enclose two verandas at 120 Williams street, Frank Amelli to erect a two-story addition in New street, Mrs. Liverwick to have two dormer windows installed in Richards street, A. B. Simpson to enclose a veranda at 29 Warren street and the Knights of Columbus to make alterations to their home in Huntington street.

The foundation work has been started on a new house to be built for J. A. St. Germain in St. Germain road, off Montauk avenue. The new house is to be a modern one-family structure of frame construction. From private plans it will have all improvements and conveniences including steam heat, hardwood floors, brass piping, open fireplace in the living room and built-in features. Work is being done under the supervision of the owner.

Practically all of the steel work for the first floor of the children's ward annex to the Lawrence and Memorial Associated hospitals has been erected and work is being pushed along on the finishing of the first story brick walls. The addition is attached to the north side of the hospital proper and will be four stories in height and of brick, concrete and steel construction of design which will harmonize with the architectural style of the old hospital building and the maternity ward annex. The H. Wales Lines company has the general contract for the work.

AUTOMATIC VALVES AN IMPROVEMENT

Anyone who has tried to make old-fashioned radiator valves operate satisfactorily should know by this time that all such efforts are virtually futile. They just don't "click", unless by some accident or other they actually allow the cold air in the pipes to escape without being followed by jets of live steam which raise such havoc with draperies.

Just why such valves continue to be included as "standard equipment" is one of those mysteries of life which only heating engineers can explain. In any event, they do not deter fully 9 home owners out of 10 in replacing the old-style valves with automatic or vacuum valves which do the work in far more satisfactory manner. A vacuum valve, of course, requires a perfectly air-tight system. One tiny leak around a valve, or in a pipe connection, can offset the advantages of the automatic valve which rids the pipes of all air and then prevents the renentrance of air through back pressure. There are other automatic valves, however, which are quite satisfactory, even though they do not create a permanent vacuum, and these are such an improvement over the old type that comparison is vain.

The writer had an experience with the old type of valve a year or so ago, and, while he was occupying rented property, he did not hesitate to unscrew the old ones and replace them with automatic valves. Where previously he had to have a screw driver handy at all times, to unloosen the old valves and let out the air and then screw them tight again when the radiator had become heated throughout, he now pays no attention to them whatever. The air is forced out by the incoming steam pressure and once out some automatic gadget closes the opening and keeps it closed until the pressure has been reduced. Even then the return of cold air into the pipes is so slight that it makes little difference. It is not quite as satisfactory as the vacuum type, of course, but it is far better than the old arrangement where valve caps were forever getting lost, or entire valves became worn to such a degree that they leaked air and steam at all times, or else were clogged so thoroughly with dirt and rust that the radiator was all but useless.

CARE ADVISED IN USE OF LINOLEUM

New linoleum should not be placed on badly worn, uneven floors without proper preparation of the floor, say those who know. The unevenness will show through the linoleum after a short time and continual tramping upon it will start cracks in the low places. Such floors should be leveled by planing or machine sanding, or new floors of inexpensive wood laid over them, before putting down linoleum.

Because this flooring will not expand and contract forcibly without serious damage, it is important to know that linoleum cannot be safely attached to a bare floor with anything like glue. The floor boards, upon drying out in winter will shrink. In summer, when the furnace fire is out they will expand. If linoleum has been glued to them, or even tacked to them, this expansion and contraction will tear it apart.

A professional job is done in laying this ideal floor covering by first cementing down a layer of builder's felt over the entire floor. On top of this felt layer the linoleum is placed. The special cement for this purpose, when hardened, looks like sealing wax. The felt layer between the floor boards and the linoleum has just enough flexibility to act as a buffer and save it from stretching. Laying the felt in the cement, then the linoleum on top, requires special rollers, and weights, and patient skill to result in a perfect job. Ordinarily the handy man should not attempt it.

GOOD FOUNDATION PAYS DIVIDENDS TO HOME OWNER

It pays to know what's what, down where the house begins, yet a foundation is one of those things people take for granted. If they buy or rent a house already built, they naturally assume that the foundation is there and that it can safely be forgotten. If they build a place, they look on a foundation as a necessary evil and let it go at that.

But foundation work should not be dismissed so lightly. For on the foundation and its associated structural parts depend many of the factors which can make or break a house as an investment.

If the footing is too narrow or ill-adapted to the soil in which it rests, there is danger of sinking or other expensive disruption of the home's even, level stand. And in the train of a failure of this sort come a whole bevy of major and minor ills. Windows and doors become unmanageable and generally useless. Floors warp, to an accompaniment of unsteady furniture. Plaster cracks appear and the exterior finish faces ruination. And the correction of this type of fault is both difficult and expensive.

Again, the foundation wall may not be water resisting and a damp, unpleasant, unlivable basement becomes inevitable. Modern practice decrees that the basement be made a useful part of the house, but it cannot be useful if it cannot be used.

Good contractors know, for example, that foundation fottings need to be considerably wider when land is soft, clayey soil than in coarse sand or gravel. There may be as much as five tone difference in respective carrying capacity per square foot. Hence the concrete footing is designed to fit the particular need.

And, whether the foundation wall is built up of monolithic concrete or of concrete masonry units, the means of producing a strong, dry wall are as sure as they are simple. Concrete today enjoys understanding treatment at the hands of most builders, with assured permanence and strength as results.

NOVEL STORM DOORS

Ingenious manufacturers have devised a combination screen and storm door which has proved quite satisfactory during the two or three years they have been in use. The door itself is permanent, being fitted exactly as with a regular door. The center panel is removable, being held in position by four set screws operating on semi disc plates. A quarter turn of the set screw removes the disc from the slot in the door, allowing for the easy removal of the screen panel, and the insertion of the storm panel. The entire operation takes no more than five minutes and the door is converted from summer to winter use.

MULCHING FOR STRAWBERRIES

With the rapid approach of winter it would be wise for amateur gardeners with strawberry beds to make plans to protect them for the winter. All such beds should be mulched for the winter to prevent the soil heaving during the cold months which does so much damage to plants. Salt meadow hay is the best material for mulching, but as this is difficult to get coarse baled straw may be used as an effective substitute. It should be borne in mind, however, that the mulch is to be applied only after the ground has been frozen hard.

Killing two birds with one stone is no longer just a saying with Police Sergeant Heber Thompson of Alexandria, Va., for he has two ducks to show his ability to live up to the old adage. Standing on a wharf the sergeant inserted a marble in his trusty slingshot and struck a duck in the head with the shot. The marble glanced off, stunning a second duck swimming nearby and both ducks were recovered. The sergeant said that he had used a slingshot all during his youth and had always been very proficient with it.

ATTRACTIVE NEW HOUSE ON BOSWELL AVENUE

The above house recently completed by Contractor Henry G. Montie was built by Mr. Montie for an investment. The house is one of the most attractive in Greeneville being located at the corner of Eleventh street and Boswell avenue. It is of American architecture and is thoroughly modern with every convenience for the single family.

There are six rooms, bath and sunporch all finished in hardwood trim and hard-finish plaster with oak floor throughout. On the first floor is the living room, dining room, sunporch and kitchen. The living room extends along the front of the house with the dining room opening off from the living room in the rear. Large French doors separate the living room from the reception hall. The kitchen is very modernly equipped with many built-in features such as cupboards, ironing board and cabinet.

On the second floor are three bedrooms and bath. The bedrooms are large, bright and airy while the bath is large and is furnished with all built-in fixtures. There is plenty of clothes-press room, each bedroom having a large press of its own.

The house is heated by steam, the heating plant being of the square boiler type that is proving very popular with new home owners. There is also a garage in the basement.

The exterior finish is very attractive, the house being finished in clapboards and stained shingles. The first story is in wide white clapboards while the second story is covered with gray stained cedar shingles. There is a large porch in the front of the house and a smaller porch at the side of the building. The electrical fixtures in the house are of an attractive design in antique silver.

TASTEFUL DOORWAYS

A doorway to be pleasing must not only express nicety in its scale, its relationship to the house and in its proportions, but also in its color.

Home begins in the hall. Even a tiny hall can greet the visitors with wide-open arms, if some of the latest decorating magic is used.

A striking arrangement for a little hall in a Colonial house would be a floor of black and white marbleized linoleum, yellow-green walls and woodwork a slightly darker tint of the same color. A line of lacquer red around the baseboard and a red balustrade would complete the color scheme.

A tall, narrow secretary ensemble is appropriate in such a hall, and a ladder back chair should always have a place in it. The open shelves of the secretary may hold pewter plates.

No hall nowadays has to retain the shape and atmosphere in which it was built. With new things and new skill, together with the right colors of wall and floor, one can transform any hall.

A long, dark hallway can be made into a gay ante-room with a linoleum in cheerful tile or flagstone design. If walls are in green, robin's egg blue or yellow, the gloom disappears.

Wallpaper has been rediscovered Nowhere is its individuality more effective than in the hall. Scenic wallpaper is especially interesting because it seems to "tie up" outdoors and indoors. Besides the ordinary rolls, scenic papers come in striking panels, many reasonably priced.

The new map paper is just the thing for the English or Colonial type hall. Imagine it as a single panel behind a chest of drawers, flanked by red upholstered chairs. Furniture for the hall includes console table, with mirror, between two chairs; chest of drawers, lowboy or an odd table.

A particularly long hall may well be broken up by a screen with a chair near it, placed at an end table with a lamp. In a square hall you may express the spirit of the house with a round table and lamp, a comfortable chair, mirror, carefully placed pictures, wall sconces and fabrics on the wall.

USE OF FURNITURE WAX

A discreet use of liquid wax on polished furniture can save a housewife much labor in keeping these articles of furniture clean. The wax absorbs the dirt and by going over it occasionally with a rag containing a little wax will both clean and polish the wood. By keeping dirt out of the pores of wood its beauty never is marred by a lack-lustre surface.

RESTFUL INTERIORS

Underlying the development of the modern motifs in interior architecture and decoration is the emphasis on rhythm which has been so lacking heretofore in much of our domestic design. The repetition of surfaces or planes or figures make possible a restfulness never attained when more attention was paid to individual units of a room and less to the unity of the room as a whole.

WOMEN SHOW INGENUITY IN GETTING CLUB HOMES

RITZVILLE, Wash. (AP) — Resourceful western women have turned an old abandoned depot and a church into attractive club houses.

The Woman's club of this town took over the Congregational church, which had been unoccupied 12 years. Windows were broken, doors had lost their hinges, dust and cobwebs draped the furnishings and birds flew in and out. The women formed a corporation, purchased the structure and turned in into a serviceable club house.

When the Cascade tunnel was completed an abandoned depot was left in the little town of Leavenworth. The Woman's club secured it, fitted it up comfortably and it is now used not only by the club women but by the Leavenworth chamber of commerce.

NAME FOR NEW AIR ROBOT PUZZLES ARMY OFFICERS

WASHINGTON (AP)—Shall he be christened Jerry or Mac, the new metal man who flies an army plane?

When he first stepped—or flew—out, some air corps officers coined the the word "mecaviator," the first syllable signifying mechanical. But the word appeared in print "macaviator."

Lieut. Col. Ira Longnecker, chief of the information division of the air corps, fears too many Scotch jokes if the metal man is nicknamed "Mac." He sees endless columns of jests about plaid kilts, bag pipes and economy in gasoline.

He suggests the name "gyrobot" with the accent on the first syllable. So honors may go to the Irish, as the new name, if adopted, would soon be twisted to "Jerry."

John D's Kin Home

This photo of Miss Lucy T. Aldrich, sister-in-law of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., was taken in Chicago, en route to her home from Vancouver, B. C. She is returning from an Oriental trip, during which she was held prisoner for a time by Chinese bandits.

Matrimonally speaking, where there's a will there is often a wont.

DUTCH COLONIAL GAINS BY LOW ROOF LINES

While this house should not be placed on a lot smaller than 50 feet wide, the plan embodies a distinct advantage, in that a wing might be added at any time if the size of the lot permits. The addition could be used for a garage on the ground floor with a bedroom on the second floor, and given the same treatment as the house itself, would materially enhance its charm.

Cross-ventilation is provided for all rooms. Ample closet-space and convenient location of the bath are especially attractive features of the three-bedroom layout. The housewife will appreciate the side entrance to kitchen and cellar.

Stone, in any one of a variety of materials, is used across the front in this plan, while the sides are of clapboard with a shingle roof.

Green blinds will blend in the color scheme. A central chimney arrangement results in heating economy.

Maximum construction cost is estimated at $10,000 to $12,000 in the largest metropolitan centers and lower in other sections, depending chiefly on proportionate cost of labor.

FORTY UNEMPLOYED NEW LONDON MEN PROVIDED WORK TO CLEAR PARK LAND

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Dec 23. — About forty men, heads of families, were provided with work by the city today to relieve distress and enable the men to earn something for their wives and children. The men were put at work in the Bates woods, on the western border of the city where it is proposed in the future to make a park. The land was obtained by legislative enactment during the term of B. F. Mahan as mayor, but no use of it has been made since that time. The land is the most romantic and picturesque in the city, there being high ledges and deep ravines. The work today was the clearing of underbrush and at this the workers were kept busy till the storm forced them to quit. The men will be put at work again Tuesday and should accomplish considerable during the day.

A fleet of trucks will be put to work tomorrow and as fast as they are loaded with the snow from the streets, it will be carted to the municipal pier and emptied into the river.

AVALANCHE OF MAIL— 97,000 POST CARDS SATURDAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Dec. 23.—The post office today was deluged with mail matter, the entire force of postal employes being enlisted in an endeavor to keep the mail moving. TWO DEGENERATES FINED— SAY AND FARRAR IN DISGRACE

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON Dec. 23.—Edward Say, Waterbury, and Henry Farrar, Westport, were in the police court this morning, charged with indecent assault. Say was fined $50 and costs and Farrar, who is married, was fined $100 and costs. Say is well known in Waterbury where he has resided many years and has no police record. The men, who are salesmen, came to New London by automobile Saturday night and registered at the Crocker house. Sunday, they made the acquaintance of two sailors and went for a ride. When the ride was concluded and the auto was stopped on Union street, the bluejackets and the salesmen engaged in a wordy argument, one of the sailors deliberately smashing a window of the auto. Patrolman George Perkins, on his way to his home, overheard a part of the brawl and communicated with police headquarters. Officers Clarence Martin and Louis Pine were assigned to make an investigation, but when the officers arrived at Union street the sailors as well as the salesmen had disappeared. It developed that one of the sailors ran away during the row, but the other sailor, Earl Gawthrope, U. S. Coast Guard, had accompanied Say and Farrar to the rooms of the latter. The officers went to the rooms of the salesmen and found Gawthrope there and what they learned of acts of the strangers warranted the arrest of Say and Farrar.

Edward Maloney was charged with breach of the peace and intoxication. The former count was nolled and on the latter a fine of $10 and costs was imposed, but the execution of the sentence was suspended. Maloney, a fisherman, went to the Union station Saturday night and while there smashed a window. He was arrested by Special Agent John Anderson, of the New Haven railroad.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Breed Theatre

When "The Trial of Mary Dugan" comes to the screen of the Breed theatre tomorrow as an all-talking picture, with Norma Shearer heading a big special cast of notables, audiences will see a departure from the original stage version.

Bayard Veiller, author of the famous murder drama, personally directed it for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. He altered the action of his play so as to incorporate a number of exterior scenes that will run as a prologue to the thrilling courtroom sequences.

"For the purposes of condensing the trial dialogue I told part of the story outside the courtroom," Veiller said. "This did not deviate from the established plot but eliminated considerable preliminary testimony and made the witness chair dialogue more dramatic and intense."

With Miss Shearer in the huge cast are H. B. Warner, Raymond Hackett, Lewis Stone and many other famous stage and screen personages.

Tonight's the Night

Tuesday evening is Radio night at the Palace theatre, when the management will present some patron of this theatre with a new Zenith Auto Radio, which is of course the last word in radios; there are no strings whatever to this radio, the only thing necessary is that you be in the theatre at 9:15 Tuesday evening, when some patron will take home this beautiful Christmas gift from the Palace theatre. The regular high class Palace show will be offered and this at the regular Palace prices.

Beware of the man who apologizes when he does you a favor

No man is so poor as he who has nothing but money.

POETRY

The Day Before

'Twas the day before Christmas, when all the big stores
With last-minute shoppers were filled to the doors.
There were some who were counting their money with care,
In hopes that a 5-spot they'd find hiding there.
And others showed signs when it came to their turn
Of having "just codles of money to burn."
For the kiddies — Old Santa was doing his best:
By making a note of each special request.

While waiting for service, one woman was heard
Extolling her method of "stuffing the bird:"
Since mincepie its pre-Volstead flavor had lost;
How Jim had declared it "a terrible frost."
'Nother voice, "Why, ours has it — just leave it to Jack;
He gets it in Windsor and smuggles it back."
A girl in the basement was hanging on tight
To a bargain she'd found, as she voiced her delight.
"I'll send this to Certie—for she'll never know
That it went out of fashion two seasons ago."
And so these late shoppers continued to shop
Till the nerve-frazzled clerks were just ready to drop;
And when closing time came—as one called out "good-night,"
She added "This last-minute shopping's a fright!"

—E. E. W. in Detroit News.

Christmas Eve

When silver flutes and violins
At Christmas time are singing,
And dancers trip on lightsome foot
With golden laughter ringing;
Among the gay and festive crowd
Black coats and sweet girl-faces—
Strange figures of a long ago
Come out and take their places.

In gay brocades and velvateens
That time has touched and faded,
In knee breeches and buckled shoes
With gold belaced and braided,
They tread the stately minuet,
The courtliest of dances,
And underneath the mistletoe
Renew their old romances.

With lifted skirts of pink and blue
They courtsey down the middle;
I hear above the jazz-music
The spinet and the fiddle.
The creaking of a coach and four
Between the pines and laurels
And footsteps in the frozen snow
That vanish with the carols.

—Dorothy Whipple Fry.

"Fine! We're learning words of four cylinders now."—American Boy.

Bobby—Why, mother, I just showed it to him. He said: "Little man, how do you feel?" and I thought he was a doctor.—Boston Transcript.

"You're a big crook, that's what you are!" shouted the irate speculator.

"Eh!" said the astonished broker. "What do you mean? What have I done?"

"Done? You advised me to buy this stock on your belief that it would go up 200 points in a month, and the most it gained was 194."—Exchange.

Speaking of records, Howard L. Hayman, a one-armed man, of Calais, Me., cut and trimmed 506 Christmas trees in 240 minutes. The trees were out on Magueprawock mountain and Mr. Hayman modestly asserts that conditions were exceptionally good.

A motorist who had run out of gas on a country highway some miles west of Kenosha, Wis., tried in vain to get cars to stop as they passed him. Finally he started lighting matches and holding them up to his face as he saw a car approach. One car slowed down and a hand thrust out the window. An envelope was tossed at his feet. He picked it up and found it contained $500 in bills.

Then a fire marshal came along to have a talk with the boy and according to the marshal the boy confessed that he started the fire because he wanted to become a hero and get his picture in the papers and perhaps a medal.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Palace Theatre

Voluptuous, flaming, passionate. These adjectives, however alluring, are scarcely sufficient to describe the great picture that is coming to the Palace theatre next, and which, starting tomorrow, will play here three days. This mighty film of passion and romance is appropriately named "Tiger Rose," and its action is as swift and pulsing as its name.

You have seen other pictures which were tempestuous, others in which passion was the central theme, but for a sheer sweep of emotion, "Tiger Rose" leads them all. It is conceived in a fiery crucible and it flashes across the screen like a meteor flaming through a dozen universes, flaming, scorching, burning in its fiery fervor.

Some of the greatest stars that the stage and screen have yet produced take their places in the cast of "Tiger Rose." Among these are Lupe Velez and H. B. Warner. The former is famous wherever motion picture actresses are spoken about.

Scene from "Tiger Rose" starring Monte Blue and Lupe Velez. A Warner Bros. Production

Monte Blue and Grant Withers, both also well known to the vast army of Vitaphone and Warner Brothers fans, will appear in this film, too, and altogether it looks like a great entertainment.

It is probably none too early now to remind Norwich of the gala midnight frolic and gambol which the Palace is going to hold on New Year's eve. It will be one of the biggest things of its kind. More of it later, though.

Broadway Theatre.

"Higher education" is receiving lots of attention at the Broadway where today for the last times, Metro's laughing talking feature "So This Is College" is being shown. Tomorrow, "America's Boy Friend," Charles (Buddy) Rogers, the idol of every girl fan and the despair of their "boy friends" steps out in a brand new role, that of an accomplished circus acrobat in the exciting talking-drama, "Half Way to Heaven." Buddy's wonderful physique, which has heretofore been modestly concealed usually beneath immaculate evening dress, is fully displayed in circus tights, revealing the body of a young Hercules, with powerful but silky muscles, and a back and shoulders that will make every youngster take up physical culture at once. The story, exciting and thrilling to a degree is taken from Henry Gates' best seller, "Here Comes the Bandwagon," and tells the story of a small travelling carnival, with Buddy a member of a daring flying-trapeze troupe. The other members, lovely Jean Arthur, who at last has a chance to show how she can make love, and sinister Paul Lukas, whose schemes come near to causing the deaths of both his partners. In a smashing climax, following a hair-raising series of adventures and mishaps, the two youngsters find their way safely to the love which has been denied them by the threatening "swing man" of the troupe. Added attractions include "Americans All" a clever troupe of dancing and singing damsels from all countries in the "melting pot" of America. Born and Lawrence in "The Side Show," Hughie Cameron and Co. in a "Music Box Revue" skit "If Men played Cards As Women do," Willie and Eugene Howard, kings of mirth in "The Music Maker," and the latest Fox movietone news. Announcement is made of a big midnight frolic for New Year's eve, with the biggest attraction ever brought to Norwich for any special show.

GREENEVILLE

Mrs. Herbert I. Peckham of East Great Plain, president of the Mission Circle of the Third Baptist church, entertained the members of the circle at her home on Thursday afternoon. Although the weather was bad, a good number of members attended the meeting.

After a Christmas hymn and devotional exercises, a "quiz" was conducted from December "Missions" magazine by Mrs. Peckham. This was followed by a report from the secretary and treasurer, Mrs. James Spicer, who reported over $40 in the treasury with the overland and overseas quotas all filled. A number of worthy projects were spoken of to which the circle decided to make contributions and a short social time followed. Mrs. Peckham served a dainty luncheon of chicken and cheese sandwiches, Christmas gelatin with whipped cream, Christmas tree cup cakes and baskets of mints. The meeting and supper which are usually held in the chapel were given up on account of the Christmas season. The January meeting will be held as usual the fourth Thursday in January, followed by a supper in the chapel with Mrs. James Spicer as hostess and Mrs. Elmer Mulkin as leader.

The Christmas concert of the Sunday school of the Third Baptist church was held in the church on Sunday evening with a large attendance. The church was very prettily decorated with laurel hemlock, candles, wreaths and poinsettias, appropriate to the Christmas season and a Christmas pageant entitled, "The King's Birthday," was splendidly given with the following programme. Pagamistne, Elsie Laycock; Christmas tree and tinsel, Frank Laycock, Henry Savage; holly wreath, Helen Savage; candles, Althea Haydon, Eileen Hill, Phyllis Raven, Mae Brothwell; Christmas Chimes, Winifred Haydon; Christmas gifts, Lillian Hill; Christianity, Marilyn Lund; Spirits of Christmas, Louise Haisch, Althea Haydon, Mae Brothwell, Eileen Hill, Phyllis Raven; Unseen Voice, Lillian Hill; Need, Winifred Haydon. The scripture reading and prayer was by the pastor, Rev. Harry P. Brothwell and Mrs. William A. Lund acted as pianist. The pageant was given under the direction of Miss Doris M. Lund, who deserves much credit for the admirable way in which it was presented.

On next Friday evening at 7:30 o'clock the Christmas entertainment of the Sunday school will take place when a well ladies Christmas tree and a Christmas playlet will be the center of attraction. Santa Claus will also be there in person.

EXPECT TO CLEAR UP HOLIDAY MAIL TODAY

With the extra help and the regular force working at top speed, it is forecast by Postmaster Casper K. Bailey that the incoming Christmas mail received at the postoffice up to and including Tuesday will have been cleared up and distributed before Christmas day. Every effort will be made to have all classes of mail and packages distributed at the close of work Tuesday night, in order that the employes may enjoy their Christmas dinner at home.

The volume of incoming and outgoing Christmas mail, both first and second class, has been unusually heavy so far this year, being much heavier than in previous years. Many hundreds of parcel post packages had also been received and distributed up to Monday, for the past week. On Monday there was a slight falling off in this class of mail, but the first class mail has held its own and may have been a little heavier Monday.

To give one an idea of the amount of mail that has passed through the hands of the employes is seen in the number of stamps that have been sold the past week. At the windows, 350,000 two cent stamps alone, have been sold and thousands of stamps of other denominations. In order to cope with the large volume of mail the employes have been working from 11 to 14 hours per day. In addition to the regular force eight sub clerks and six sub carriers have been on duty since the rush, which began about a week ago. It has also been necessary to keep open extra windows for the transaction of business.

At the session of the city court Monday morning, George Cross, 21, colored, of the West Side, charged with assault with a dangerous weapon, had his case continued to Monday, Dec. 30, in order that the police might further investigate the trouble, which brought about his arrest.

Cross is alleged to have engaged in a fight Saturday evening on High street with Harry and Walter Ruley, colored, brothers, both of High street, and John Evans, also colored, of the West Side. It is claimed that the Ruley brothers were slashed with either a knife or razor by Cross. Harry received a cut in the abdomen and Walter two slight cuts on the head.

After the fracas, Cross and Evans retreated from the scene of the fight, the former being arrested Sunday afternoon. The latter has not as yet been apprehended. Cross is at liberty under bonds of $300.

GIVING TO GET SPOILS THE BEST OF GIFTS

Christmas is the only festival in the year that never seems to grow old or get stale, said Rev. Harry Brothwell, in his Christmas sermon at the Third Baptist church, Santa Claus, who evidently is the spirit of Christmas, is never decrepit. He is all jollity and good nature. No one can refrain from a smile when he comes. But this spirit of good will and joyousness is too often absent from the best-intentioned folks because of the self-imposed burdens which some carry into the celebration, the burden of gifts. Under the avalanche of gift getting and giving many lose the real significance of Christmas. True gifts should be given and received. It is one of the best things about this celebration; it creates and develops in the heart generosity and there are few who are guilty of having too much of this virtue. The practice of giving gifts has received a special emphasis from the first Christmas story, when the Magi came to the house of the Babe of Bethlehem and opened their caskets and presented unto Him gifts.

Their gifts on that occasion have something to say to us. They gave because they loved. They gave expecting no return. Jesus and his parents had nothing to offer them in return. There was no selfishness with the gift. Too often this spoils the best of gifts, when no return is made a harsh criticism is made, and often a friendship broken which would not have happened if the giver had not given to get. Make your gifts speak your love.

God gave Jesus to the world because He loved the world. He gave of His best. He gave to bless and not to receive. Let us hold in loving memory this great gift of God to us and at this Christmas season manifest the same unselfishness and good will to those whom we love. God should have first place on our Christmas list. We can and should give Him our affections, mind and will as a token of our love for Him. Such a gift He will receive. No gift made to God is lost. To give Him our lives is to save our souls.

A large basket of fruit was also given to one woman, who was in the late war. On Monday afternoon a visit to Uncas-on-Thames was made and 19 baskets of fruit were distributed to the war veterans there.

Miss Marie Desmond, Miss Loretta Gadle, president of the society, and Miss Mary Weller distributed at both places to the patients with the help of Jeremiah J. Lyons, who loaned his car and assisted in distributing. This has been the custom of the Ladies of Columbus for the past several years.

COURT FINES SAILOR FOR DRUNKEN DRIVING

James C. Clarke, 21, a sailor stationed at the Submarine base, Groton, was fined $200 on a charge of drunken driving, when he was presented in the city court Monday morning. Two other charges, taking a machine without the permission of the owner, and driving without having an operator's license with him, were nolled. As Clarke was without funds, he was given until June 1, 1930, to pay the fine and was released in custody of Lieut. Minor C. Heine of the Submarine base.

LIONS' PRESIDENT URGES CHRISTMAS SEAL BUYING

The Lions' club at Christmas time takes great pleasure in entertaining the well children of Norwich at a theatre party, said Charles W. Cassidy, president of the club, Monday evening. It is a very pleasant sight, he said, to see a theatre crowded with happy and well children, but there is always the thought that too many children in our community have the germ of tuberculosis in their bodies and may later in life develop tuberculosis. This can be prevented by nourishing food and proper treatment. The money derived from the selling of Christmas seals is used for this purpose in the city of Norwich and I suggest to all who are last-minute shoppers that they buy a few seals so as to bring help and comfort to those children afflicted with tuberculosis.

COURT CONTINUES SUIT AFTER PARTIAL TRIAL

Following a partial trial Monday before Judge Charles B. Waller in the court of common pleas the $192 damage action brought by the Auto-Metal Body Co., of New London against the Hudson-Essex Co., was continued for the testimony of James V. Duffy.

The suit arose when the Hudson-Essex Co. brought an automobile, belonging to Duffy, to the plaintiff concern to have the body repaired. The plaintiff claims that an estimate of the cost was given and when the job was finished the defendant company refused to pay for the work.

However, the Hudson-Essex Co. claims that the understanding was that the bill was to go to Duffy.

WHOLE OF CHRISTENDOM CELEBRATING CHRISTMAS

President Hoover Turned on Lights of the National Christmas Tree in the White House—In England Theaters Close and Newspapers Cease Publication For Festive Day—Pealing of Bells Ushered in the Day in Rome—President of Germany Distributed Presents.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 24—(AP)—A giant spruce tree brilliant with myriad colors stood close to the white house tonight as a symbol of those in homes throughout the land.

President Hoover, standing on a small platform in Sherman square, his overcoat buttoned tightly as a protection from the cold night air, turned on the lights of the national Christmas tree in conformity with the Christmas custom.

The illumination [illegible] bee, the booming flashlight [illegible] graphers and the blue light [illegible] set off simultaneously with the switching of the lights, revealed a crowd of Washingtonians of every rank who came to hear the president's "I wish you a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year." Thousands in all the states heard his salutation by radio.

Before and after Mr. Hoover's greeting the children from the junior high schools of the District of Columbia sang the old familiar Christmas carols, accompanied by the United States Marine band.

Nature had its part in making the setting for the ceremony a beautiful one. The grounds were white with snow and the trees were silvered by the ice.

A Boy Scout, Joseph Wheeler, and a Girl Scout, Alice Leake, both of Washington, presented Mr. and Mrs. Hoover with baskets of flowers.

The ceremony closed a busy Christmas eve on the streets, and the president, with thousands of other government workers, was looking forward to a quiet celebration tomorrow.

All afternoon Mrs. Hoover has been helping to distribute baskets of food to the poor. Mr. Hoover had spent most of the day at his office, leaving, however, in plenty of time to supervise the final preparations for a party to which he personally invited the children of his white house family.

The president's two small grandchildren, the son and daughter of Herbert Hoover, Jr., were in far away California with their parents, so the chief executive asked the children of George Akerson, Walter Newton and French Strother, his secretaries, and the small daughter of Dr. Joel Boone, the white house physician, to be his guests at dinner and a party afterwards. The parents of the children also were present.

The usual singing of Christmas carols at the white house tonight was dispensed with in order to allow the white house police force to spend Christmas eve with their families.

WOULD WELCOME RAIN AS CHRISTMAS GIFT

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 24—(AP)—If there is a Santa Claus, southern California's millions would appreciate it if he could pull a few buckets of water out of his famous sack of gifts.

Probably nothing would be more welcome than a good old fashioned downpour for the holidays.

Since last spring but one rain has occurred. On September 18, .32 of an inch fell and that is the total rainfall to date. Last year the total was 4.66 while the normal fall up to the day before Christmas is 4.04.

YULETIDE ACTIVITIES IN THE CITY OF FLOWERS

FLORENCE, Italy, Dec. 24.—(AP)—Florence, the City of Flowers, celebrated Christmas eve tonight in a fashion typically and traditionally Florentine.

The Florentines do not believe in doing their Christmas shopping early. They wait until Christmas eve, and at 8 o'clock the crowd on the sidewalks and streets was so great that it interfered seriously with vehicular traffic. For three hours the people marched about with no fixed destination in mind, and then they all went home, leaving the streets temporarily deserted. Three-quarters of an hour later the streets were magically filled again by crowds on their way to the midnight masses.

Masses were held in all the famous churches of Florence, in the Cathedral of St. Lawrence, in Santa Maria Novella, in San Nicolo, Santa Maria Maggiore, San Marco and many others.

The Americans here—Florence has the largest American colony in Italy—celebrated Christmas eve by first going out into the city to see the crowds and then retiring to their homes for private celebrations.

PEALING OF BELLS USHERED IN CHRISTMAS IN ROME

ROME, Dec. 25, (Wednesday)—(AP)—The pealing of bells in most of Rome's 400 churches ushered in Christmas at midnight (6:00 p. m., E. S. T.). The chimes kept up for a good hour, while the chanting of the midnight masses began in the presence of great congregations, including many foreigners.

As for many years past, one of the best attended of these nocturnal services was that of Santa Maria Maggiore (St. Mary Major), the imposing Basilica on the Esquiline Hill, which is said to possess a relic of the original cradle in which the new-born Christ was laid. That precious relic in a silver setting, was displayed for public veneration tonight.

CELEBRATING CHRISTMAS HOLIDAY IN ENGLAND

LONDON, Dec. 24.—(AP)—Old England, from the king to his humblest subject, tonight began to celebrate its traditionally home-like Christmas holiday.

From the seclusion of fireside celebration Englishmen will not emerge until the day after Christmas. The day will be observed as usual with feasting and family reunions, whose joy will not be greatly dampened by such national ills as unemployment and stock exchange slumps.

There will be virtually a complete suspension of outside activities on Christmas day. Theatres will not open. Newspapers will not be published and transportation companies will cease to operate or will maintain only scanty skeleton schedules.

At Sandringham, the royal retreat in Norfolk, their majesties had the whole family group gathered for a home-like royal Christmas celebration, which is the first to be held since the war for all the members.

The country will get out into the open again on the day after Christmas for the holiday jollities of "Boxing Day," when servants traditionally receive their just rewards in largesse from the gentry, and outdoor amusements resume their sway.

The traditional Christmas card decorations for the English Yuletide scene were absent this year except in some northern districts. Most of the island was basking in sunshine on Christmas eve and there were no signs of a "white" Christmas.

GIFTS DISTRIBUTED BY PRESIDENT OF GERMANY

NO WORD RECEIVED FROM ICE BOUND RELIEF SHIP

NOME, Alaska, Dec. 24—(AP)—Celebration of Christmas eve in this far north community was saddened by a feeling of deep concern for the safety of five men who have disappeared in the fog and snowstorm of Bering Strait.

The early nightfall of another day of watching and waiting found Nome residents hoping for good news on the morrow, but fearing the worst.

No word had been received from the ice bound trading ship Nanuk, frozen in at North Cape, Siberia, where Pilots Harold Gillam and Joe Crosson have established a temporary base in their search for their brother aviators, Carl Ben Eielson, hero of the airplane flight over the Arctic "blind spot," and Early Borland, his mechanician.

Neither had any word been received at settlements on Kotzebue Sound where Pilot Bill Graham and his two passengers, R. B. Julian and W. B. Miller, disappeared a week ago on a flight to Elephant Point. Elephant Point is north of Nome, across the Seward Peninsula, and Julian and Miller were to join a reindeer drive at that point.

DR. SNOOK DOOMED TO THE ELECTRIC CHAIR

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Dec. 24—(AP)—Dr. James Howard Snook, former Ohio State university professor, and convicted slayer of Theora Hix, his co-ed mistress, was a step closer to death in the electric chair tonight as a result of the state supreme court refusing his motion for the right to file a petition in error and for a review of his conviction.

In a decision signed by five of the seven judges of the state's highest tribunal, the court dismissed the motion for right to file a petition in error. This action automatically threw out the motion for a review.

The court's decision came as a complete surprise for it had granted the killer of the pretty co-ed a stay of execution until January 31 next. The decision was not generally expected until after the first of the new year.

As the case now stands Snook must go to his death in the electric chair at Ohio penitentiary here the night of January 31.

COAST GUARD PATROLMEN OUT 36 CASES OF LIQUOR

RYE BEACH, N. H., Dec. 24—(AP)—The Santa Claus of the sea who started to operate here Dec. 11 paid a return visit today and gave to the coast guard patrolmen 36 cases of liquor. For the past two weeks liquor has been washed onto the shore by the sea and today it happened that the coast guardsmen were the last instead of the first to discover its presence.

Automobiles on the shore road saw the liquor and before long a large crowd had gathered with shovels and other implements necessary to the carting away of the liquor. The coast guard was notified and a detail rushed to the scene and seized 36 cases. An armed guard was stationed on the beach the remainder of the night to be on the watch for any more gifts from the briney.

ATTEMPT TO ASSASSINATE PRESIDENT OF ARGENTINA

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina, Dec. 24—(AP)—President Hipolito Yrigoyen escaped injury today because the aim of a would-be assassin at his speedy automobile, was faulty. Two of the three shots fired from behind a wall along the roadway struck members of the presidential party and the third went wild.

The assailant was described by the police as an Italian anarchist named Gualberto Marinelli, 44.

An employe of the investigations office, Carlos Maria Sicilia, was wounded in the stomach and at a hospital tonight it was said that he was critically injured. Another man in the presidential automobile was also wounded. President Yrigoyen and his companion, Dr. Meabe were not injured.

REP. LEATHERWOOD DIED FROM HEART ATTACK

WASHINGTON, Dec. 24—(AP)—After two weeks in a hospital, Representative Elmer O. Leatherwood, of Salt Lake City, Utah, died today from a heart attack. He was 57 years old.

Although in poor health during the past few years, hope had been held for his return to strength.

It was during his vigorous contest against the Swing-Johnson Boulder canyon dam bill that Mr. Leatherwood's constitution gave way. He bitterly opposed the measure in the house irrigation committee and later on the floor.

Two Plots Against Royal Belgian Family

Plotters Had Planned to Bomb and Fire Upon the Royal Train En Route To Milan.

BRUSSELS, Dec. 24.—(AP)—The newspaper Independence Belge, which first disclosed that the police had made an arrest in connection with the plot against the Belgian royal family, today stated that there were in reality two plots with assassination as their aim.

The first attempt on the lives of the royalty was to have been made here before their departure for Italy where Princess Marie Jose is to be married to Crown Prince Humbert on Jan. 8.

In event of failure in this attempt another was to be made at Milan, which was the first to become known. It was the most elaborate of the two for it was said that the plotters had planned to bomb and fire upon the royal train as it passed another near the Italian city.

The newspaper expressed the belief that the two plots indicated that there were rival sections of anti-Fascist groups in Paris, each of which was anxious to outdo the other.

The police continue most intensive investigation of the whole affair. Camillo Berneri was arrested a few days ago after the Belgian and French secret services had shadowed him for several weeks. He used a false passport which was traced back to Berlin and similar to that used by Fernando di Rosa who had fired on Prince Humbert during his visit here last October. Another similar passport was found on a man named Gricka Westermans, alias Cagan, a communist recently arrested here.

MOVE TO COLLECT BACK TAXES IN EAST HAMPTON

EAST HAMPTON, Dec. 24—(AP)—Citizens of this town have empowered a committee to take whatever action necessary to collect back taxes estimated at about $44,000 as a step toward bringing the chaotic finances of the town into some semblance of order.

The recent disappearance of Herbert D. Watrous, former tax collector, who is now awaiting trial on a charge of embezzlement, revealed that the accounts of the collector's office were in a state of confusion. H. N. Alexander, of New London, who was engaged to audit the town accounts, last night reported at a special town meeting there was an apparent shortage of $21,589.15 in the funds of the tax collector.

GOT $1,000 REWARD FOR RETURN OF LOST PEARLS

BROOKLINE, Mass., Dec. 24—(AP)—Miss Agnes L. Haggerty, of this town got a Christmas present today in the form of a $1,000 reward for returning pearls owned by Mrs. Catherine Phelan Lyons, of Bronxville, N. Y. Mrs. Lyons, who valued the pearls at $30,000, lost the gems while at the Auditorium of the Boston College library last Sunday.

TOWING DISABLED SHIP TOWARD PROVIDENCE

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Dec. 24—(AP)—The disabled Norwegian tramp steamer Karmoy, which grounded on Nantucket, Mass., shoals last night and later floated free, was reported at 10:20 tonight as passing Beaver Tail light at the head of Narragansett bay. The lighthouse keeper sighted the craft proceeding toward Providence. She was in tow of a tug sent from here this afternoon.

A Christmas Song

Sound over all waters, reach out from all lands,
The chorus of voices, the clasping of hands;
Sing hymns that were sung by the stars of the morn,
Sing songs of the angels when Jesus was born!
With glad jubilations
Bring hope to the nations!
The dark night is ending and dawn has begun;
Rise, hope of the ages, arise like the sun,
All speech flow to music, all hearts beat as one.

* * * *

Blow, bugles of battle, the marches of peace;
East, west, north and south let the long quarrel cease;
Sing the song of great joy that the angels began,
Sing of glory to God and of good will to man!
Hark! joining in chorus
The heavens bend o'er us!
The dark night is ending and dawn has begun;
Rise, hope of the ages, arise like the sun,
All speech flow to music, all hearts beat as one!

EXECUTIVE OFFICES OF PRESIDENT HOOVER DESTROYED BY FIRE LAST NIGHT

WASHINGTON, Dec. 24—(AP)—Fire tonight ruined the executive offices of the white house in the most spectacular blaze, from a national viewpoint, since the War of 1812.

While President Hoover and Mrs. Hoover were entertaining a party of children on the white house staff the executive wing of the building, separated by more than one hundred feet from the living quarters of Mr. and Mrs. Hoover blazed up, but the only danger to the chief executive was the possibility that he might have been struck by an unruly fire hose, and he escaped this.

The executive wing was built on the recommendation of President Roosevelt who found the white house proper too small to transact the business of the nation. It was a small, one story structure on the west end of the executive mansion, abutting the state department, and connected with the white house proper by a covered corridor. In it were housed the activities of the president, his secretaries, the newspaper corps, and the general everyday business of the head of the government.

The children of the Hoover party all were allowed to enjoy the spectacle from a balcony of the famous mansion whose sides were charred by the British fire in the War of 1812, and the president himself ventured into the fire lines to see the attempts made to quench the flames.

While confined to the executive offices, the fire was a stubborn one and more than two hours was required by the fire department to conquer it. Walter Newton, one of the secretaries to the president, expressed the opinion that a bad wire connection had caused the blaze, which flared up after the offices had been closed for the day.

The official documents of the president, invaluable to the procedure of the government, were all saved.

The office of the president was among the worst damaged of all the rooms. Firemen had made an especial attempt to save that portion of the structure along with the cabinet room. The offices of Newton and George Akerson, another of the president's secretaries, were ruined. The stenographers quarters, the main lobby, and the press room, were completely wrecked with a story of his fall into vagabondage since the death of his wife. He won the sympathy of judge and courtroom, a Christmas fund was started and Judge Heller invited him to return today in expectation of a dismissal and a Christmas dinner summons.

Meanwhile, friends of the real Danny Murphy of the Athletics communicated with the judge, and Eddie Collins, Mack's coach, telegraphed that Murphy is a prosperous hardware dealer in Jersey City.

The impostor upon re-arraignment today revised his story and said he had played semi-professional baseball at Lebanon, Pa.

PHILADELPHIA BANKING CONCERN ORDERED CLOSED

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 24—(AP)—The U. S. Bank and Trust company and its branch here was closed today by order of the state secretary of banking and a special deputy was appointed to assist the secretary in continuing or liquidating the business.

The company had a capitalization of $997,000, surplus of $200,000, and deposits of approximately $2,000,000.

Peter G. Cameron, state secretary of banking, said the bank has for some years past loaned extensively to real estate speculators and operators and is at present carrying many loans made upon the security of real estate that are delinquent and the collection of which is very uncertain because of the present depression in the real estate market in Philadelphia.

PLAINTS ON PROHIBITION PRESENTED BY PROPONENTS

Senator Borah Has No Faith in President Hoover's Law Enforcement Commission—Assailed the Entire Personnel Charged With Making the Volstead Act Effective—Senator Glass Will Oppose Further Appropriations Unless a Report is Prepared and Submitted to Congress—Senator Harris Would Have Judge McCormick Removed From the Commission, For Expressing a Personal Opinion

WASHINGTON, Dec. 24.—(AP)—Increased attention was directed to prohibition enforcement today as Senator Borah, republican, Idaho, the foremost campaigner for President Hoover's election on the dry issue, assailed the entire personnel charged with making the Volstead act effective. He said they would never enforce the law.

Senator Norris of Nebraska, a republican dry who supported the candidacy of Alfred E. Smith on the democratic ticket last year, maintained that efforts to suppress the alcohol traffic had never been made in good faith in many sections. He expressed the opinion that time and again officers had disregarded cases where men with political influence were making millions of dollars, but had investigated less flagrant violations.

The Borah statement dealt with a proposed report by the Hoover law enforcement commission, saying that agency "will not tell us anything we do not know, either as to law or as to the facts."

"We will still be back to the one proposition," he averred, "and that is that with the present personnel nothing will be accomplished."

After publication of his statement that "the prohibition forces of the country will be greatly disturbed" unless President Hoover removes Judge Paul J. McCormick from his law enforcement commission, Senator Harris, democrat, Georgia, was called to the white house for a talk with the president today and declined later to comment on the subject covered by them.

McCormick, a federal judge, expressed a personal opinion in Los Angeles Sunday night that the commission considered prohibition and "governmental lawlessness" major problems. His assertions led to his description by the Georgia senator yesterday as "this man who has encouraged anti-prohibitionists as well as violators of the law." Harris' visit to the white house this morning followed.

Senator Brookhart, republican, Iowa—another dry—came to the support of Harris today with a declaration that McCormick should be replaced by a man "who believes in the government of the United States and law enforcement." He expressed impatience "with making the government the criminal in enforcing the law and making heroes out of bootleggers."

Harris is emphatically dry, and has assailed the holding of secret hearings by the Hoover commission. With Senator Glass, democrat, Virginia, he is pressing for senate adoption of a resolution demanding an early report of some sort by the commission.

He went to his capitol office from the white house, and said his long talk with the president had not altered the cordial relations between them. Because the meeting had been at Hoover's instance he said he felt its topic should not be divulged by him. He reiterated insistence for a report by the presidential appointees studying law enforcement, however, saying he wanted quick senate action unless the report is forthcoming voluntarily.

Senator Jones of Washington, the assistant republican leader, who had announced that he would ask this week that the commission make a report, said today he could not see the value of a preliminary pronouncement demanded by the democratic dry leaders. He emphasized, however, that a complete report on the prohibition aspect of the situation should be made before the commission completes its entire inquiry into the whole question of law enforcement. Jones did not visit the commission today.

Harris and Glass are one in advocating that funds for the commission's work be withheld until a report is made. The Virginia senator has differed with Harris, however, in the McCormick matter. In Lynchburg, Virginia, he expressed the conviction that the commission was not appointed "to find out something that would please any particular group in congress, but was appointed to ascertain the facts regardless of the conclusion the facts might signify."

In a formal statement today, Harris said that the Glass position, "while seemingly a defense of the views Judge McCormick expressed in Los Angeles, really coincides with mine as to the need for an impartial report, and I did not think the judge's statement was impartial and that is why I criticized it."

Senator Borah said the Hoover commission "will not throw any light upon what the law is," and continued:

"Neither will they have anything to do with the selection of the officers to enforce it. Having the law clearly defined, the next thing, and the only thing, is to find the kind of officials who will enforce it. In my opinion, it will never be enforced with the present personnel from top to bottom."

Senator Norris agreed with Senator Glass that he saw no reason for action against Judge McCormick because of his statements, taking the position that members of a commission should be expected to have divergent opinions. McCormick had assailed the entering of private homes without a search warrant, and the Nebraska senator— who is chairman of the judiciary committee — took the same stand.

While these senators were showing that prohibition was a primary topic in their minds, F. Scott McBride, national superintendent of the Anti-Saloon league, issued a statement calling the dry law "the biggest Santa Claus the United States of America has ever known."

He said:

"Not only has it, in the phrase of Herbert Hoover, 'put dollars and cents into the pockets of every man, woman and child,' but it has provided countless thousands of new homes, millions of automobiles, nearly doubled the amount of our life insurance, multiplied our savings deposits, and transferred pauperism into plenty and hopelessness into ambition.

"No other one policy ever adopted by the American people has been productive of so much good as the policy of national prohibition. It has abolished slums, enabled charity organizations to transfer their activities from rescue to reconstruction work, has made our pauperism ratio the lowest in history, cut the death rate, and made possible higher levels of living for the mass of American people."

PRISONERS LIBERATED FOR THE HOLIDAYS

CHICAGO, Dec. 24.—(AP)—The magic spell of Christmas-tide penetrated the stone walls and iron bars of the Alimony club today and gave 12 husbands their liberty for the holidays, if not longer.

Judge Joseph Sabath was the medium through which the Christmas spirit worked, freeing the dozen men who were in jail for failure to meet the court's alimony orders for their wives.

A curious sequel to the judge's benevolence -concerned Selathial Dillenbeck, Alimony clubman in jail for not paying his first wife $1,300. She was in court when he was released and after he told the judge the freedom didn't do much good since he had no carfare to get him to his second wife, the first wife stepped forward and handed him a $5 bill.

Another of the men, Gerhardt Johnson, in arrears $110, walked out of court arm in arm with his wife, Judge Sabath effecting their reconciliation.

Still another went back to jail. He was Walter Snydor, whose answers to the judge's questions regarding a possible settlement of the alimony differences were so defiant the court ordered him returned to his cell.

All those freed were given until Feb. 5 to make some arrangements for meeting their alimony payments or else go back to jail.

ANOTHER BEAUTY QUEEN CHARGED WITH MURDER

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 24.—(AP)—Closely following the acquittal of Terest Terest de Landa, "Miss Mexico" at the Galveston beauty pageant in 1928, on a charge of murder in connection with the shooting of her husband, another beauty queen, Sara Velarade, has been accused of a similar crime.

YULETIDE OBSERVANCE TO BE EXTENSIVE IN WILLIMANTIC

WILLIMANTIC, Dec. 24.—With the promise of a "white" Christmas virtually fulfilled as the country-side lay blanketed under crystal snow tonight, the populace bustled about in preparation of Yuletide observance. The original significance of the day, the nativity of Christ, is not to be forgotten, it is indicated in elaborate church services planned by all denominations. The majority of these services are to be held in the forenoon, giving the good people the entire afternoon and evening for family reunions and general enjoyment of the holiday. The only public entertainment scheduled are motion picture shows at the theatres and a dance at the Al-Pierre Tabarin, where a most successful Christmas Eve dance was also held this evening.

Many altruistic individuals and several organizations distributed good cheer and Christmas dinners this evening. Special menus will be offered at the institutions, including the Windham Home for the Aged (almshouse), Card Home for the Aged, St. Joseph's hospital, General hospital and others. ANOTHER POLICE OFFICER ASSAULTED BY LOCAL MAN

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Dec. 24.—The third assault on a police officer within ten days was recorded on the police "blotter" this morning when charges of assault, breach of the peace and intoxication were pressed against Ollie Rock, 34, of this city. Rock pleaded guilty to the latter two charges but not to assault. In this connection it was charged that following his arrest by Officer Albert Montie Monday evening, Rock turned on the officer as he was being assigned to a cell at headquarters. Rock administered the officer a vicious kick that was entirely unexpected although Rock had threatened the officer at the time of the arrest on Main street. Officer Montie was hurt to the extent that he required medical attention.

Bent on putting a stop to the prevailing custom of assaulting police officers, Judge Frank H. Foss sentenced Rock to spend 30 days at the county jail in Brooklyn, at the session of police court. Rock was also fined $15 and costs for intoxication and $5 and costs for breach of the peace. Officer Roderick Lariviere, who answered Officer Montie's box call for the police car in which to convey Rock to headquarters, corroborated his brother officer's testimony as to threats made by Rock while en route to the station and also as to the assault which Officer Lariviere witnessed. Rock entered the cell room without offering the least bit of resistance. He was being calmly ushered into a cell when he suddenly turned about and kicked at the officer with his right foot. In court today Rock vigorously denied kicking the officer.

Students and members of the faculty of the Willimantic State Trade school enjoyed their second annual Christmas party at the school this afternoon. Richard Crossman, instructor of the plumbing department and song writer of ability, was heard in a number of his own composition. Edward P. Miller favored with violin solos and the school orchestra played several selections under the direction of Mr. Miller. Santa Claus, in the person of Waldry Landry, instructor in painting, distributed the gifts, this being done on an exchange plan by drawing numbers. Director O. R. Nyffeler and members of the faculty were charge of the arrangements, and Miss Ruth M. Russ, secretary of the school, assisted in serving refreshments.

POETRY

The Birthday Of Christ

The suns of night are sparkling bright
Like gorgeous gems ablaze,
And we behold, sublime and old,
The dog-star's brilliant rays.

The air is chill on vale and hill,
And skies at times are gray,
Another year is drawing near,
Again 'tis Christmas Day.

We hear once more the words of yore
An angel's blithesome voice:
"Christ, Christ is born this Holy Morn,
Rejoice, O earth, rejoice!"

Christ is reborn this Sacred Morn,
Christ now in Paradise,
Again our Lord, the Son of God
Within a manger lies.

Our Saviour's birth! Peace, peace on earth!
Praise, praise the Prince of love;
Let song and bell in chorus swell,
Shine bright, O stars above!

—By Charles Nevers Holmes.

A Christmas Legend

Christmas morn, the legends say,
Even the cattle kneel to pray,
Even the beasts of wood and field
Homage to Christ the Saviour yield.

Horse and cow and soft-wool'd sheep
Wake themselves from their heavy sleep,
Bending heads and knees to Him
Who came to earth in a stable dim.

Far away in the forest dark
Creatures timidly wake, and hark,
Feathered bird and furry beast
Turn their eyes to the mystic East.

Loud at the dawning, Chanticleer
Sounds his note the rest of the year.
But Christmas Eve the whole night long,
Honoring Christ, he sings his song.

Christmas morn, the legends say,
Even the cattle kneel to pray,
Even the wildest beast afar
Knows the light of the Saviour's star.

And shall we, for whom He came,
Be by the cattle put to shame?
Shall we not do so much at least
As the patiest ox or the forest beast?

Christmas morn, oh, let us sing
Honor and praise to Christ the King.
Sheltered first in a lowly shed,
And cradled there where the cattle fed.

DANIELSON

TWO PARTIES FOR P. AND A. EMPLOYES

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, Dec. 24—This afternoon was a merry one for the employes of Powdrell and Alexander in their Danielson plants. The mills were closed in order that the hundreds of workers might be the guests of the company at great Christmas parties—one at the Curtain factory on Connecticut Mill's avenue, the other at the Main street plant.

The sections of the mills set aside for the festivities were prettily decorated and were adorned with Christmas trees, there being six of these at the curtain plant.

At 11 o'clock this morning work was stopped in the curtain factory and the more than 750 employes, members of the office and executive staffs and guests gathered for a collation served in one of the departments. Thereafter all adjourned to the general offices, were greeted by Santa Claus and presented by him from his gigantic bag one or another kind of favor. The afternoon was given over to dancing and to enjoying numbers presented by professional entertainers.

The Main street plant's party got underway at 2 o'clock this afternoon, with the workers fro mthe No. 1 and No. 2 plants and members of their families in attendance. There were refreshments of sandwiches, soda and ice cream and an orchestra played for dancing.

Thousands of cigars and cigarettes and hundreds of boxes of candy were presented to the employes by the company, each receiving a suitable gift.

The manner in which the employes attended and the enthusiasm they displayed at both parties was evidence of their appreciation of the generosity of the company and of the spirit of good will that exists between the members of this large family of industrialists.

TOWN OF BROOKLYN TAKES APPEAL TO SUPREME COURT

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Dec. 24—An appeal has been taken by the town of Brooklyn from the decision of Judge Allyn Brown of the superior court in an action in which Frank M. Bedard of the West Side petitioned to have himself declared elected a grand juror at the annual town meeting in Brooklyn on the first Monday of last October. The matter will now go before the supreme court of errors of Connecticut.

Brooklyn, up to this year, has elected six grand jurors. This year it decided to elect only five. One of the various candidates was Mr. Bedard on the republican ticket. Five other candidates received more votes than did Mr. Bedard, and as the warning for the meeting called for only five to be elected Moderator Cunneen, taking the text of the warning as a guide, declared that only five had been elected, and Mr. Bedard was not numbered among them.

Thereupon he petitioned the superior court for a review of the matter, the contention of his counsel, Attorney E. L. Darbie, being that it was incumbent upon the town of Brooklyn, under the law, to have voted in a town meeting to reduce the number of grand jurors to be elected from six to five before this legally could be done. No such action has been taken by the town. The decision of Judge Brown being in favor of Mr. Bedard and against the town of Brooklyn the town now takes the matter to the highest court in the state. Attorney Harry E. Back is counsel for the town of Brooklyn.

Preparations were being made today at the county jail in Brooklyn and at the Killingly town farm to make Christmas happier for the inmates. There will be special dinners on the holiday, and there will be gifts from various sources for those at the farm and for numbers of those who will spend the day in custody in Brooklyn.

After handling the largest volume of mail matter in the history of the local office, Postmaster E. H. Keach and the men of the staff closed the office tonight with all matter distributed and another holiday rush cleared up. Today a boy was assigned as an assistant to each carrier covering local routes to carry packages, loads being too heavy and bulky to be handled in the ordinary manner. A postal truck handled the heavier packages. Christmas will be a holiday for the postoffice force.

About 100 personal taxes remain outstanding. Since December 15, 205 persons have taken an assessment of an extra dollar as a result of failing to pay prior to that date. Among the 100 persons who still owe and who are now liable to pay as much as $10, in settling this account there are some who are believed to have gone elsewhere to live, and there may be cases where the financial status of the family makes it impossible to pay at this time. After the holidays the summary method of collection will be undertaken, but meanwhile Personal Tax Collector Arthur A. Dean and the selectmen will carefully check the list and acquaint themselves with the circumstances surrounding each particular case.

The children of Goodyear went to bed tonight knowing that no matter how generous Santa Claus was likely to be with them when his visitations to the village are made some time this Christmas eve that he will be back on Christmas day to remember them with further gifts and a fine party arranged to be held at the Community house Christmas afternoon. The Goodyear Mills company has arranged with Santa for this party, and the assurance is that it will be a thoroughly enjoyable affair.

The coming week will witness the location here of the general offices of the Quinebaug company of Danielson and the Wauregan company of Wauregan in the former general store building of the Quinebaug company on the West Side, in the town of Brooklyn. It is just across the bridge from the Killingly side.

For many years these offices of the cotton manufacturing concerns have been located in Providence, as has the general office of the Ponemah company, an affiliated concern, whose general office is to be located in Taftville.

Bringing of the offices here will mean that several of the officials of the companies will be located here.

Leo J. L'Homme post, American Legion, sponsored the festivities on Davis park this evening for the children of the community. This year the beautiful and brilliantly lighted Christmas tree is set at the northerly end of the park and is a pretty sight and much admired. It will remain in place until after the first of the year.

Store forces ended their long grind of the holiday season late tonight. In many stores the workers have been on duty every night for the past week or ten days, have been kept busy and were well tired out when the hour of closing arrived this evening.

The Bulletin wishes all of its readers a very Merry Christmas and much future happiness and prosperity.

Christmas afternoon at 5 o'clock in the gymnasium of the Westfield Congregational church the tree party will be held. There will be presents for boys and girls, distribution of candy and all the settings making for a general good time.

Mr. and Mrs. William K. Litch of Stearns street announce the engagement of their daughter, Ruth, to Theodore R. Redlack, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Redlack, of Minneapolis.

A long prisoner held at the police station here through last night was released this morning and his hearing on a minor offense continued until Saturday. As Prosecuting Attorney Arthur G. Bill is out of town over the holiday, it is unlikely that there will be any session of the town court before Saturday, unless some emergency arises.

A task for many Danielson people today was the removal of the coating of snow and sleet that accumulated on sidewalks during the trying storm of last evening. State highway crews were sanding trunk line routes today.

Rev. J. H. Quinn, the pastor, will be celebrant of a solemn high mass at the Sacred Heart church in Wauregan Christmas morning at 5:30.

Treasurer Sidney W. Bard and all the members of the staff of the Brooklyn Savings bank enjoyed a little Christmas party of their own at the bank after the close of business this afternoon.

It is forecast that many who have delayed over the matter up to this time are going to be without 1930 registration plates for their cars on Jan. 1, and the 1929 ones cannot legally be used after Dec. 31.

Dr. and Mrs. William Levin left by motor today to spend the Christmas season with relatives in Maine.

PUTNAM

GEORGE H. LIARD NAMED ACTING POLICE CAPTAIN

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Dec. 24—The police committee of the common council, comprised of Alderman John M. Dean, chairman; Eugene Migneault and Leo J. Delisle, conferred with Mayor Charles A. Richard Monday afternoon and named Sergeant of Police George H. Liard acting captain to serve out the unexpired term of the late Captain William J. Jarvis who died Monday morning. The police commission also appointed Patrolman Alpherie Sponcey to act in Captain Laird's former capacity until further notice.

Police Commissioner John M. Dean said this afternoon that no permanent appointments will be made until the first meeting of the new administration which will be on Monday evening January 6, when heads of all city departments will be appointed to office for the ensuing two years.

Acting Captain Liard has been in charge of the police department since Captain Jarvis became indisposed last Tuesday. He is the oldest man in the department having a service record of eleven years as an officer.

WEEDEN TERRORIZED THIS SECTION AT ONE TIME

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Dec. 24.—Frank Weeden, the "mad Houdini" of Rhode Island, made his last escape Tuesday morning when he took his life by hanging at his cell in the state prison at Howard, where he had been committed after being found guilty of the murder of Dr. Russell H. Sartwell, head of the Rhode Island hospital for mental diseases. Weeden escaped from the mental institution on 15 different occasions and following a jail break a few years ago, wandered into this county to take an East Killingly youth his prisoner whom he threatened to kill. The name of the mad man of Howard had left an indelible impression in the memories of northern Windham county residents, who were filled with fear during the hours that Weeden was known to be at large in this section. Weeden had the Killingly youth at his mercy, led him to a cemetery where he forced him to dig his own grave, promising to kill him when the boy had completed the gruesome task. The opportune moment came when the boy caught the madman off guard and struck him with a shovel which he was using to dig the grave. Weeden was captured a few days later and returned to prison in Rhode Island. Although always confined in the most protected cell in the institution his daring cunning and his ingenuity provided him with many ways of escape and he made his way to liberty five times after his Windham county escapade.

Christmas will be a merry one in Putnam this year from all indications set forth by the charitable organizations and relief committees of fraternal organizations. A corps of workers were busy throughout the hours of Tuesday delivering baskets to needy families. The Christmas cheer baskets are certain to be accompanied by joy and happiness which will reign in all of the homes of those where hard times have ruled for weeks. The baskets will contain dinners, clothing, fuel and other necessities. All organizations are cooperating with one another in order that no one will be overlooked.

King Turkey will reign supreme at the Day Kimball hospital, the Haven home in Abington and at the Windham County home in the Sawyer district. Special Christmas day programmes have been arranged to inspire the spirit of the season for the shut-ins of the three institutions.

The tide of holiday traffic was at its height this afternoon when schedules of trains and motor coaches fell behind. And in the air, too, holiday traffic was observed. Planes of the Colonial Air Transport company were seen passing over the city at intervals during the day, en route to New York and Boston. The regular planes made the trips on schedule while additional monarchs of the air made the "jump" in between the hours of scheduled flights.

At St. Mary's church Wednesday, masses will be celebrated at 6 o'clock, 8, 9 and 10:30 o'clock. The masses at six and nine o'clock will be high celebrations with special programmes of music.

Francis Sheffler, three-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Sheffler, of 67 Myrtle avenue, Webster, injured Sunday evening in an auto crash at Nichols hill, remains at the Day Kimball hospital with his condition reported unchanged by officials today. At a late hour, Francis had not regained consciousness which he lost at the hour of the crash when he sustained a compound fracture of the skull. Bernard, 7, a brother, is a patient at the hospital, suffering from fractures of both legs. His condition was improved today but months will be required for the splintered bones to knit back into position when he will be able to walk again. Vincent, 13 months old, brother of Francis, and Bernard was a victim of the tragic crash. He died early Monday morning at the hospital from a compound skull fracture received when hurled through a window of the death car.

CHRISTMAS

Everywhere in Christendom today there will be retold the story of Christmas. It has long been anticipated and much preparation has been made for it. It has brought forth the Christmas spirit, that desire to do something for others which ought not to be confined to one day or one season. Christmas is an old story but it is the spirit of it that has such an inspiration for humanity. It is no passing delusion but a great fact that links human happiness and hopes with the birth of the Christian ideal.

What Christmas means is succinctly told by Rev. Dr. William Carter when he says: "Christmas is preeminently the festival of childhood. It is to celebrate a baby's birth—the birth of Christ-Child Jesus, its meaning for all of us in this connection—whether old or young—is 'except ye become as little children ye cannot enter into the Kingdom of Heaven.' Christ entered our kingdom as a little child; we can only enter His in the same way.

"Christmas is also the festival of joy. At such a time

The heart exults and sings;
The pulses leap, the feet have wings.

"Not all, however. There are some, even in this glad Christmas season, who cannot exult, who cannot rejoice; therefore it is our duty to bring the joy of Christmas time to their lives by sympathetic gifts for their needs. If Christmas means this to us we will enable even the poor and afflicted, the sick and the needy, to join with us in the glad chorus,

Joy to the world!
The Lord is come!

"One other thing that Christmas means is that it is the festival of peace. The angels sang

Peace on earth,
Good will to men!

and unless we can make each Christmas cement this good will and make permanent this peace, Christmas will not be fulfilling its mission and we will be the ones who will hold it back. Let the Christmas peace be not only in your hearts but spread it far and wide until war shall be no longer and good will shall reign everywhere."

The voice that rang out: "Behold I bring you tidings of great joy" set loose a gladness so real, so lasting, so world-persuasive, that in every land where Christ is loved there should not be a face that does not lighten with a smile. The real Christmas joy is a joy that is deep and heaven born, melting hard hearts and warming cold ones.

LAW ENFORCEMENT COMMISSION

When President Hoover named a commission for the purpose of making a study of law enforcement and observance, and the dry question, it was expected that it would be permitted to carry on its work without obstruction on the part of proponents or opponents of the various phases of their inquiry. It was recognized that it faced a big task and it would have to be handled accordingly. It has been at its work since last May and now a demand has been made in the senate for a report from the president as to what the commission is doing. Such a resolution was blocked because it was recognized as being a demand which should not go through the president but should be directed to the commission itself, and it was a resolution in conformity therewith that was adopted in the senate.

The demand for this report is accompanied by the threat of holding up any further appropriations unless it is received, and it is based upon the desire upon the part of certain dry senators to know what the attitude of the commission is going to be toward prohibition. Wet senators might be as insistent that the commission reveal its attitude relative to modification or repealing of prohibition.

But the drys are not content to stop there. The senator from Georgia is now telling the president that he ought to bring about the removal of a member of the commission because he has made certain statements as a private citizen relative to prohibition. This indicates a desire on the part of certain members of the senate to tell the commission what it must or must not do, what kind of a decision is expected from it and that its decision must not be based upon the facts as it finds them but upon the influence that can be exerted for or against the continuance of the inquiry.

The commission was expected to get down to bedrock, to disclose what it finds and to base its recommendations upon the facts as they exist. We know what the response of the drys would have been if the wets had set out to get a member of the commission at this stage of the inquiry, or if they were trying to dictate to the commission. They must realize that such tactics on their part are bound to be subject to the same kind of an interpretation by others.

GERMANY'S PLEBISCITE

When the previous conference was held at The Hague the Young plan of reparations adjustment was evolved and accepted by the several nations. It was necessary for that action to be ratified and when it came to action by Germany there was an effort made to defeat it. Among the nationalists some proposed the rejection of the plan and it was submitted to a general vote of the people. Every effort was made to get out a sufficient vote to support the proposal and upset the Young plan but it signally failed. There was involved in this plea the question of war guilt, a matter which was expected to arouse the people and cause them to go to the polls.

Clever as was the propaganda against the plan, it failed to make a serious impression. In order to insure its success, 15,000,000 votes were necessary, but, as a matter of fact, less than 6,000,000 were received and the move for rejection crumpled.

Whatever may have been the view, as to the sentiment of the people of Germany concerning reparations and the Young plan, it has been settled that it is in favor of it. That was obtained by urging those who opposed the rejection idea to remain away from the polls and this they did by the million. The government forces were favorable to ratification.

This result means that the people of Germany are back of their government in sticking to its agreements and that the reparations plan as modified improves the conditions and is an advantage to Germany. It cannot fail to be realized that Germany is not being required to meet the obligations that were agreed to in the Versailles treaty. It experienced a benefit under the provisions of the Dawes plan and, in view of changing conditions, it so set forth its situation that it obtained the benefit of the Young plan. To turn down what is beneficial, although it may not be all that was asked, would be against its own interests. It cannot fail to realize that as time goes on it may present pleas for further modification. If it does so it must be expected that they will be received and considered in the light of conditions at that time.

STICK TO GOOD RESULTS

If this country can save somewhere in the neighborhood of a billion dollars in the next six years by continuing the naval agreement relative to battleships, that expires in 1931 there will unquestionably be strong support throughout the country in behalf of such action. It might not be employed in that manner but it would be impossible to lop off a billion from our national debt in an easier manner.

This doesn't necessarily mean that battleships are going to be sent into the discard, although that may be the development in the future. It means that the several nations which know what it means to enter upon a building programme which includes battleships are much impressed by the manner in which the naval agreement has worked out. Under the circumstances, it is natural that they should be interested in continuing the plan. They have saved hundreds of millions already and they will effect further savings during the extension if it is voted.

This would mean that the nations which would build against the probability that the others would build new ships would retain their present battleship strength, and in all probability those of the group which have not as yet built up to their limit would display no more interest than they have in that particular class of ship. All of them can put the money that might go into battleship construction into other channels and they recognize it, and extending the agreement that exists now for another five years would be just as sensible as was the adoption of the agreement in the first place. Just because nation has continued to chase nation in battleship construction for years, it doesn't follow that it ought to be continued indefinitely.

PEACEFUL ADJUSTMENT

In this season of peace what could be more fitting than the conclusion of the agreement between China and Russia to settle their differences on a basis of facts?

This was the logical method to apply. It was the method they were committed to as signers of the Kellogg peace pact. It had been indicated that such a course would be adopted, but it was followed by outbreaks of such a character in Manchuria as to give the impression that thoughts of it had been disregarded.

Now comes the assurance that the two countries have made arrangements between themselves whereby troops along the frontier are to be withdrawn, those arrested in connection with the railroad trouble are to be released and next month there will be a conference at Moscow at which all the difficulties will be adjusted and diplomatic relations will be resumed.

It is to be hoped that this ends as satisfactorily as the agreement indicates. It is the only thing to do. It would have been a crime for those two countries to have gone to war, the outcome of which could be told in advance.

While it appears that these countries have worked out their adjustments among themselves, there can be no question but what they have felt the pressure and recognized the good advice that has been brought to bear by the other countries laboring for the success of the peace pact. There have been circumstances which indicate that the matter cannot be regarded as having been adjusted solely because of that and yet from the very beginning each country recognized its responsibility thereunder. Certainly its influence was in no other than the right direction.

EDITORIAL NOTES

A Merry Christmas to each and every one.

Christmas is always a happier day for those who have made others happier.

The man on the corner says: Could Santa get everything into the stocking?

There's always a question whether sleds or skates can be given a trial on Christmas day. But there's always a chance for the mechanical toys.

Chicago had an escape-proof jail, but there came a time when, like the unsinkable ship, it was proved otherwise and it would have been better if the claim hadn't been made.

A CHRISTMAS STORY

On Christmas eve many tales are told around the fireside—tales of Santa Claus and his reindeer, Christmas ghosts and a surly miser. Wise Men following a star. All of them recount some miracle of the year's best-loved holiday, bringing them into the homes of everyday people. In just such a home there once took place just such a miracle, or so it seemed to the people in it. Perhaps the story of it would not be amiss here.

When Willoughby DeBrooke Jones got home on Christmas eve, he was feelingly badly. He had many things to worry about. His life, he thought, was a complete failure. He had a cold. Business was "rotten," and besides, a dreamer always, he had put faith, he was sure, in one vision too many, and had sunk his savings in stock, that for the purposes of this story we shall call "Evaporated Cast Iron Pipe." It had some such name.

Mother and the girls had been nice about it. Mother had simply said "De Brooke!" with a break in her voice when he owned up to having done it. Some friend of his, and a friend of that friend's, had combined to influence father to this last act. Father was notably kind-hearted. Even now, as he came up the front walk, his shoulders were sagged by the bundles in his hands. His old hat was over one ear. His greatcoat was snowy, and one tag end of his muffler was afloat in the wind.

One more of his impracticalities, of his extravagances, was at the door to meet him, his Great Dane, "Micheline," who, however costly she was, was ever the first to hear his key in the lock at night, and who always left her rug at the hearthside to gallop clumsily to meet him.

But on Christmas eve, the women and the girls, too, went to the door. Father shook Micheline off; he was tired, and her first affectionate lunge had thrown him against the wall. He submitted to punctilious kisses, and handed over his bundles, to be stored away until the morning. There were giggles and laughter, and charge-account slips littered the front stair. Father had been Christmas shopping.

"De Brooke," said mother, at the table, "you look so awfully tired. Has the bottom fallen out of Evaporated Cast Iron Pipe? Are you ill? Don't you realize it's Christmas eve? Please try to disguise the expression of unalterable melancholy that now effaces all the signs of youth that might be said to linger in your countenance."

"Louise," said father, "I am sad because I'm happy. It's so touching, sort of, to be met at the little old front door by all the faithful folk, including Micheline. Even if I had to charge all the presents."

"The girls" returned from stowing away father's bundles in the upstairs front bedchamber nook where annually the horde of gifts was piled until after church services Christmas day. There was Aithne, whose short hair and pretended boyishness revealed her as Wellesley "woman," whose collegiateness would wear off in favor of a delightful femininity, it was to be hoped.

There was Bernadine, a senior in the city high school. There was Aunt Ellen, who wore that type of spectacles that have a little sort of bow and arrow arrangement over the nose, and a dangling and official-looking black ribbon. Aunt Ellen and Aithne and Bernadine grouped themselves around father's chair, and with little pats and fondling, interfered with his deglutition of a plate of soup. When Bernadine, sentimental over a Christmas card from "a boy at college," kissed him on the bald spot, the end of his nose got burned.

"Get away from me. Leave me in peace," he snorted. In dudgeon that became multiplied imagination of injury, the ladies retired.

"Father is fatigued," said mother. "Wait until he has had his supper before you bother him. I'm sure he isn't uphappy or cross, are you, De Brooke?"

"Glub," said De Brooke, and he bent his head over the table. A whine came from Micheline by the hearth. The fire was low.

"Humph," said Aunt Ellen, as she pulled her knitted shawl closer about her shoulders. "Evaporated Cast Iron Pipe!"

II.

Father's old hat hung in the hall. At 9.30 p. m. a young lady in a voluminous cerise wrap trimmed with white fur—true it was a year old, and had been used often—moved down the hall on her way out with her youthful escort. She paused and looked at father's old hat. She picked it up, and when none was looking she kissed it. It lay then on the radiator. A somewhat crumpled thing of brown felt, its band stained with many rains, and over the bow, a tattered trout fly to attest that father had worn in on his vacation late in September. With a knowing smile, Aithne, the young lady, stalked out.

At 10 p. m. a still younger lady in assorted negligee, with an inclination toward flannel, tottered sleepily down the front stairs, and on tip toes, her mules slightly slapping against her bare soles, took the ancient "chapeau" off the radiator, smoothed it out a bit, looked at the size tag in it, and muttering incoherently to herself, tip-toed back upstairs again, and to bed.

There was a sound of the winding of an alarm clock, about the hour of midnight, and Aunt Ellen, too, came into the hall, and with a few mandatory gestures of a singular speciousness, examined the old hat, and altered its position from the radiator to a small table. Willoughby De Brooke Jones sat long in the dining room talking with Louise, and be it said there was mention time and time again of a subject most distasteful to anyone on Christmas eve, that of Evaporated Cast Iron Pipe.

There were mortgages mentioned. And tactlessly, Louise had hinted that perhaps it had been unwise to charge so many things at the department stores. So father explained:

"Louise," he said, "I was coming home without any presents. There was the trial balance on my mind, and a few other things that, I gather, you may know about. On a corner a tough looking fellow was selling toys. Tempted by my habitual tendency toward the romantic, and one would say, by the good old lure of Yuletide, I stood and watched him. He was selling toy snakes. He would pick one up and wiggle it, and say, "See the cunning little snakes. Guaranteed to delight the children. Positively will not bite.' And do you know, before I was through listening to him, I could have bitten the fellow and the snake both. So I went 11th-hour shopping, though the Lord knows I guess I shouldn't have."

"Well, well, well," said Louise, patiently. He reached for his tobacco jar, and scrouching down in his chair, got set for a few chapters of some favorite book before the hour of bedtime. And his wife tiptoed down the hall, lingered before the front door, and silently, as silently as the snow was falling outside, went along upstairs. Once in her sleep she whispered "Six and seven-eighths."

Micheline opened her big eyes, by the fireside, and watched the man reading fitfully, his brow wrinkled, his head bowed, his face pale—on Christmas eve. The dog came over to him, leaving her place by the fire. She lay down on the floor beside him. He put down his book, scratched her behind the ear. "More damned expense," he said affectionately.

III.

So the faithful folk rose on Christmas day, and went to church. They believed in going to church on Christmas. And besides, there were many things to pray for, now that there was nothing left but prayer.

So, after services, the gentleman in the old hat, bundled up in his well-worn greatcoat, followed his women folk up the walk and into the Jones domicile. Micheline left off galloping on the snow-covered lawn and frisked in with the crowd. There was a hurried mixup during the peeling off of wraps, and almost before father had got his breath, they were piling up bundles before him in the dining room, and he was beginning his annual task of reading out the inscriptions on the little green and red and white tags, "From Mother to Father," and "From Father to Aunt Ellen," and "From Aithne to Bernadine," and even "From the Family to Micheline."

There was an abundance of big oval packages, father noticed, and in the press of unwrapping and the litter of tissue paper and bright-colored things of the sort that are given by women to women, there developed an epidemic of headgear. Everyone had seen that father had had need of one detail by which respectability is maintained—we refer to the headpiece. There was a brown felt hat, sized 6 3-8, from mother. There was a gray one from Aithne, a sort of sea-going gray one, which father snorted merrily at, but would never wear.

There was a shiny top hat from Aunt Ellen, who hoped bravely for better days again. This father looked upon with glee, and he and "mother" exchanged a cogent glance across the piles of presents. There was another contribution of hat from Bernadine, poor child, who had forgotten to find out the size, and had got one too small. Father put them all on top of the other, and looking for the world like an aristocratic second-hand clothes man, called for his dog.

Just then there was a dull knock at the door, and when one of the girls opened it Micheline reached out with her nose and picked up the morning paper and, as she had been taught, trotted into the dining room and laid it at father's feet. It was a day old and had come from New York. The Great Dane carried it in with unction. It was her present to him.

Our second-hand clothes man said, "Thank you, Micheline," and began looking for the financial page. He found it, and then, getting very pale, so that all "the girls" gathered about him, he said "This is perhaps the most serious shock I have ever received."

"Well, you have a good day for a shock," said Louise. "Here you are with all the faithful folk about you. Spill it."

"I suppose Evaporated Cast Iron Pipe has evaporated," said Aunt Ellen, fiddling with the bow and arrow on her spectacles.

"On the contrary," said DeBrooke "it has gone up five points and this here jolly old report says it will go up plenty more."

By noon he was radiant. By mid-afternoon they were all intoxicated with joy. By evening it was settled that Bernadine might remain in school; that Aithne might have and do what she wished and that even if all the Christmas presents had been charged, the finances were O. K. again.

And along about firelight hour, Willoughby De Brooke Jones looking upon his multitude of new hats picked out the one that had borne the card of his wife, and found, pinned in its band, a brand new trout fly, a gay little, vain little, hand-tied "Royal Coachman."

So Louise had attested her despairing faith in a friend of a friend of his, as one of "the faithful folk."

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Spooky Picks Out a New Home.

Wise is he who knows his mind;
Alas, 'tis seldom such you find.
—Spooky the Screech Owl.

Spooky the Screech Owl was a busy little Owl this night. He had made up his mind that he had got to find a new home. He meant to find it before morning. He wanted to be able to move right into it as soon as daylight should appear. So Spooky was looking over all the likely places for a home.

"I don't want to leave the Old Orchard," said Spooky, "No, sir, I don't want to leave the Old Orchard. I've lived in it ever since I came here and there is no reason for leaving it now if I can find any kind of a house. I can go over to the Green Forest, but I don't want to go over there. I wish Farmer Brown and Farmer Brown's Boy didn't take such good care of their trees. When I first came here there were plenty of holes. Now it's hard work to find a hole big enough for Jenny Wren."

Spooky looked everywhere through the Old Orchard. He couldn't find a single hole big enough in any of the trees. He was getting discouraged. Yes, sir, Spooky was getting very much discouraged. It was beginning to look as if, whether he wanted to or not, he would have to move over to the Green Forest. Spooky flew over to a big maple tree in front of Farmer Brown's house. He hadn't been over before because he knew that there were no holes in that maple tree. "Hello," exclaimed Spooky, "what is this?"

"This" proved to be a house. It was a very ice house. It was a very well built house. It had an opening plenty big enough for Spooky. That house could not have suited him better if it had been made for him. He went inside. The first thing he discovered was a handful of nuts. He guessed then that this house had been built for Happy Jack Squirrel. His guess was right. That house had been put up in the maple tree that very day. It was the Christmas gift of Farmer Brown's Boy to Happy Jack the Gray Squirrel. Happy Jack had discovered it late in the afternoon. He had gone inside and inspected that house thoroughly. He had decided that he would move in the next day. You see, it was just before dark that he had discovered the house. It was too late to move in that night, so Happy Jack had eaten two or three nuts, then hurried off to his old house and planned to return early the next morning to take possession of this new house and build a comfortable bed in it.

Of course, Spooky the Screech Owl knew nothing about all this. But he did know that here was a warm, comfortable house so near the Old Orchard as to be almost the same as in it, and he took possession. He threw out the nuts. He doesn't eat nuts. He didn't want them in the way. Then, having settled this matter, he went out to hunt for mice. It seemed as if good luck was with Spooky, for, having found such a nice house, he now found several mice in quick succession. In fact, he had all he could eat and was soon back in his new house, settling himself to sleep in comfort. Of course, he didn't know that this was Christmas. But it was and Spooky was getting his share of Christmas joy.

Meanwhile over in his old home Happy Jack the Gray Squirrel was dreaming of the new house he had found and how he would move into it and how fine it would be to be such a near neighbor to Farmer Brown's Boy. And Farmer Brown's Boy, who had seen Happy Jack when he had found the house, and had seen him when he left it for the night, was wondering if he would return the next morning and move in.

Why European Map Requires 46 Languages

The National Geographic society has just issued a new map of Europe in 46 languages.

The 46 languages were required to give the precise official spellings of the place names in countries where the places exist.

In the years following the armistice one of the notable changes that has taken place in Europe has been the development and intensification of national feeling with respect to geographical place names.

Warsaw is Warszawa to the Poles; pre-war Reval has been replaced by Tallin in Estonia; St. Petersburg was transformed to Petrograd but now is Leningrad. So with hundreds of the names which, like the places they represent, have endured for centures.

One practical reason for the society's preparation of the new map is the increasing difficulty European travelers find in identifying the names of towns as they are spelled on timetables, or known to ticket agents—spellings that often are at wide variance with the names we have been using.

The traveler soon finds that Brussels, in Belgium, is Bruxelles; that Copenhagen is Kobenhavn; that Vienna is Wien and Constantinople is Istanbul.

Another reason is the growing correspondence of American firms and individuals with Europeans. Dr. Gilbert Grosvenor, president of the National Geographic society, in summarizing the map changes, writes:

"Every person expects others to spell his or her name as he or she spells it, wherever he or she may happen to be. Courtesy and custom will soon require that when we write to our friends in Europe we spell the names of their cities as these names are spelled at home.

"The National Geographic society has 50,000 members in Europe. Communications coming to these members from the National Geographic society addressed to Rome (Roma), Venice (Venezia), etc., would probably seem to them as illiterate as we regard letters coming to us addressed to Nueva York, Filadelfia, Salzseetadt (Salt Lake City), of Waszygton, which is the manner the names of a few of our cities are spelled in some European gazetteers.

"Forseeing the ultimate desirability of according to each nation recognition of its own approved geographic names within its boundaries, the National Geographic society three years ago, began to assemble the data for and to construct the present new map of Europe.

"Many of the names on our map will have an unfamiliar appearance to the average user; and yet these are the place names to which letters should be addressed; they are the names which the traveler abroad will find on his time-tables of the various countries; and they are the names which will greet his eye as his train or boat or airplane passes station, dock or landing field.

"In compiling material for this map, the National Geographic society has had courteous cooperation fro mmany sources. Without exception, embassy and legation officials of every European capital have assisted the society in obtaining their most recent authoritative national maps.

"In addition, geographical societies abroad have been consulted and have given valuable suggestions as to the choice of place names to be shown in congested areas.

"After the World war the official German, Austro-Hungarian and Russian languages were banished from the new-born states of central Europe, with the result that Estonian, Lettish, Lithuanian, Polish, Czechoslovak and Serbo-Croatian came into their own as official languages.

"The Turkish portion of the map had been completed when news came from the society's European staff representative in Constantinople that the new alphabet would be adopted. This entire section of the map had to be relettered."

The map is in six colors, is drawn on the convient scale of 1 to 6,000,000 (94.7 miles to the inch), and has more than 8,000 place names.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Dec. 24— When Frederick Huntington Gillett of Massachusetts retires from the senate in March, 1931, a congressional career lacking just 12 months of a full two score years of uninterrupted service in house and senate will close.

For Gillett has said definitely that he would not run again. He is through with political life. He will be 80 years of age then, but if his present health and activity indicate what the future holds for him, he will be as hale and hearty an octogenarian as you could find in many a day's march.

Nobody seems to know exactly why Senator Gillett elected to announce his impending retirement in November. A month or so previously there was much talk of the situation developing among his republican colleagues at home due to the rival aspirations of former Governor Fuller and Eben S. Draper to achieve the nomination if Gillett decided not to run.

A Path for Coolidge.

The senator himself was silent. Yet not so long before that—in April in fact—Gillett had this to say as to a suggestion that Calvin Coolidge might like a senate seat to round out his political career.

"If Mr. Coolidge would be willing to run for the senate, or for any other public office, state or national, there is not a republican in Massachusetts who would not gladly get out of his way."

So the question for all politically minded Washingtonians—and that means about the entire population of the city—is whether Gillett's announcement of retirement means that he is getting out of Coolidge's way.

Probably only Mr. Coolidge could say, which he is not likely to do until he gets completely ready to do so.

Gillett is the third member of that group of Amherst old grads who have figured so notably in national life these last few years.

The other two are Coolidge and Dwight Morrow, now ambassador to Mexico and soon to be senator by appointment from New Jersey.

And of the trio, Gillett is not only the veteran in age and politics, but the only one of athletic background. He was a baseball player in his college days, captaining a championship Amherst team.

A Crack Golfer.

He still is a baseball fan, and besides that about as good a golfer for his age as the country knows. He's a good golfer quite aside from the question of age.

Gillett's torpedo red tinged beard, the only chin adornment of that shave in congress, will be missed.

Either as speaker of the house or as senator, he has lent distinguished appearance to his job. And he has a turn of tongue at times from which his colleagues and the galleries derive great amusement, despite the saying that he is of that sort of politicians who do much and say little.

He started his Washington career by giving Tammany hall a tongue lashing, it might be recalled.
